The QUESTION of ECONOMY

Is often a matter of considerable moment when the yearly Christmas list of gifts is made out. By giving photographs for Xmas you can discharge all your obligations at comparatively low expense without favoring one person over another, and still your gifts will have that intimate personal touch that carries with it the real spirit of Xmas.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Tells Quebec That He Stands For Service

"Every Other Issue is Swallowed Up in the Problem of the Prosecution of the War"—Eloquent Appeal to His Compatriots

QUEBEC, Nov. 9.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier opened his campaign in the ancient city of Quebec to-night. He spoke to one of the largest and most intensely enthusiastic of gatherings. But it was not a campaign speech. It was an appeal and a message. In his first words the veteran Opposition leader brushed aside mere political problems. "The great and dominating question, the one question," he declared, "is the problem of the prosecution of the war. Every other issue is swallowed up in this."

In short, telling sentences Sir Wilfrid defined his position in regard to conscription. He stood for voluntary service. As he made his declaration the vast throng went wild with acclaim. For moments the picturesque figure waited for the cheering to spend itself. Then came his appeal. With dramatic force and fire, amid the tense silence, all the more impressive by reason of the immediately proceeding roars of appause, Sir Wilfrid spoke to his compatriots, men and women, in serious and earnest solicitation. The people heard him in silence.

WHY IN THIS WAR?

"I stand for voluntary service," he reiterated, "but I stand for service." He appealed to his compatriots to prove that his position was right by heroic deeds, not by eulogistic cheers. Why, he asked, was Canada in this war? Why was the United States now in this war as he predicted that country would be twelve months ago when he spoke at Montreal, appealing for recruits. He had not feared actual invasion, but he did fear, with a great fear, the world domination of a power which violated every human and Divine law.

HORRORS OF HUN DEEDS.

"You may think I exaggerated the danger," he exclaimed. "Listen till I tell you of the outrages of these Hun barbarians."

In graphic and dramatic words the veteran statesman told of the German atrocities in Belgium and France. When he described the scene in Lille, when men and women were torn from their homes and sent into German slavery, "a slavery indescribable for the unfortunate women," there were cries of "Shame!" and several women were weeping. "This," exclaimed Sir Wilfrid, "is the foe Canada is called to fight. My compatriots," appealed the Liberal leader, "remember again the first hours of this war. Everyone in this city was asking with anxiety if Great Britain would again let Germany crush poor old France. "What will England do?" was the question on every lip. And if Great Britain had stood aside a general sentiment of regret and blame would have been current throughout our country, and especially throughout French Canada."

WHAT WILL YOU DO?

Sir Wilfrid paused, then, coming to the front of the platform, he raised both hands, appealing, "My compatriots, men and women," he cried, "the war is still going on. France is still under the heel of Germany. Britain is still heroically fighting and fighting the foe on the soil of old France. What will we French-Canadians do? I come to speak to you frankly, with the same honesty as ever. I never deceived you and I have confidence in my compatriots. With pleasure or pain I always spoke the language of the truth. I shall do the same to-day.

Two Men Drowned In Rice Lake

William Grese and William Henry of This City Were the Victims

William Grose and William Henry, both of Peterborough, were the victims of a double drowning accident at Rice Lake yesterday. B. Garside, a third member of the party, had a narrow escape. Garside was rescued by William Thompson, a fish inspector. The three men were out in a launch. The boat is said to have filled with water, throwing the three men into the lake. Henry was unmarried, and Grose leaves a wife and several small children.

Dictatorship Now Germany's Threat To The Progressives

Military Rule Inevitable Unless Von Hertling's Government is Accepted—Chancellor Denies Promise to Radicals—Situation Drifting Toward Split in Reichstag Minority, the Goal Desired by Reactionaries.

THE RADICAL PRESS

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 12. — The threat that a military dictatorship is inevitable unless insistence upon a radical Vice Chancellor is dropped and the government of Count von Hertling, as it now stands, as accepted is held out over the progressive democratic elements in Germany.

Count von Hertling, through a semi-official note in the Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, announces that no promises whatever were made to give the radicals the two posts they desire. Representatives of the Reichstag majority have issued an equally authoritative announcement that they adhere to their old position. The radical press indicates that the Chancellor's compromise proposal to appoint a radical deputy to the newly created Ministry, for occupied territories, with a seat in the Prussian Cabinet, is not acceptable because such a post would be merely temporary and the occupant would be powerless in the face of the military authorities.

Toward Reactionaries' Goal.

The situation is drifting rapidly toward the goal desired by the reactionaries—that is, a split in the present minority in the Reichstag and the formation of a new coalition embracing the conservatives and the national liberals. Such a bloc, which would have a bare majority in the Reichstag, is by no means impossible, despite the apparent unity proclaimed by the majority caucus.

The Catholic Centrum is by no means adverse to following the Chancellor along a road jostled with party advantages. The national liberals, who for the most part are conservatives and annexationists, and whose hearts never were in the present majority bloc, intimate strongly in their formal announcement of Herr Friedberg's withdrawal of his acceptance of the Vice Presidency of the Prussian Cabinet, their dissatisfaction with the attitude of the radicals and the socialists.

They are probably quite ready to link up with the socialists in an alliance. Herr Friedberg gave as the reason for his withdrawal that these parties advanced pretensions to his prospective office which could not be fulfilled, and in so doing rendered vain the hopes of creating a dependable working majority in Parliament.

The socialists apparently have abandoned the dictum expressed by Philip Schiedemann on Sunday that the new Von Hertling government, which differs from that of Dr. Michaelis only in the person of its chief, provided all necessary guarantees of responsible popular government as a pre-condition to peace.

The socialists declare that they have no confidence in an administration made up of conservative, centrum and nationalist elements imposed on a substructure of old line bureaucrats, and will remain in opposition unless the desired places are given to the radicals, whom the socialists regard as their representatives in the Ministry.

The Tageblatt and other radical newspapers say that if Chancellor von Hertling bows to the "hidden powers" and the influence of the court & co here.

clique, the opposition will introduce on November 22, when the Reichstag reconvenes, a resolution of lack of confidence in the government. Count von Hertling's position is much the same as that of Dr. Michaelis after his "as I interpret it" speech.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"We seek no fight," Willoughby cried, pressing, to the front, "but if it must be" — his manner left no room for doubt as to what his intentions were.

Gasping for breath, the Portugee had struggled to his feet. Even now, wounded as he was, he still desired to continue the combat. Tench grasped him by the arm and dragged him back through the crowd.

"Have done, you fool!" he cried. "We are buccaneers, not street brawlers. The fellow bought the wench fair. Let him have her. Would you make us the laughing-stock of the town?"

"Is the price enough?" Barton asked, pressing forward, "or would you have more?"

The Portugee began to call loudly for assistance, his voice hoarse and weak from loss of blood. He swept the crowd with angry eyes, but there was no spontaneous movement in his favour. Tench's words had gone home. Barton had made a fair bid. There had been none higher. No reason for argument presented itself.

Barton drove his cutlass into his scabbard and went up to the block. Ramona knelt there, shaking with sobs. He put his arms about her, and drew her lightly to the ground.

"Come, Captain Willoughby," he said. "Let us go." It was high time. The sound of the conflict had brought many of Portuguese Joe's sympathizers from the taverns. A dozen men, their rapiers in hand, were approaching across the plaza. With Ramona held close to his heart, Barton led the way to the water front, the compact body of sailors, under the command of Willoughby, bringing up the rear.

The crowd opened a way for them, and they pressed forward to the boats in the utmost haste. Already the street behind them was filled with armed men. Luckily the way was clear. They just managed to tumble into the boats and shove off, when the noisy mob reached the beach. The town was in an uproar. Barton sat upon the thwart of one of the boats and thanked God for their escape.

"A fine mistress, she'll make," cried someone from the crowd along shore.

"Ay, and a better wife," Barton called back, as he drew Ramona to his breast and kissed her.

CHAPTER XXI.

The rugged New England coast lay smiling in the sunlight of a warm September day. A fresh breeze from the west filled the sails of The Thanksgiving and spattered her slanting decks with spray. Ahead lay a landlocked harbour, with gray rocks coming down to meet the blue sweep of the sea. Far inland might have been seen the purple line of a forest, against which lay the white walls of houses, the slender spire of a church.

Upon the quarterdeck of the vessel stood a chair, in which lay a white and slender figure. It was Ramona de Lara, but now recovered from an illness of many weeks. Beside her stood Barton, his face very happy, his eyes seeking hers with tender solicitude.

He took one of the girl's hands in his and pressed it against his breast.

"We are home again," he said.

She did not speak at once, her eyes fixed upon the blue and gold scene before her.

"Home," she whispered. "Your home."

"And yours. Do not forget that."

She shuddered, and turned her eyes to his.

"What will your people think of me?" she said.

"What do I think of you?" He pressed her hand still more closely to his heart.

"Ah, my dear, it is not the same. They may not like me."

He leaned over her chair, and kissed her.

"There can be no question of that," he told her. "I went away to seek my fortune, and—I have found it."

She held his hand very close, for that.

"But if they should know" she asked, with a fringe of tears about her eyes.

"They shall know nothing, save only that I love you, and that you are to be my wife."

"And—and your mother? She will not think me strange? I am so—so poor a thing——"

"My girl—my mother will love you, as I do. Have no fear."

"But—Captain Willoughby, and — and the others. They will know." Her eyes sought his face, very tenderly, very full of anxiety.

"They have promised to say nothing. Let the past be forgotten. Our life begins, when we go ashore."

She seemed satisfied, with this, and held his hand, searching with eager eyes the sunlit land.

"It is very beautiful," she told him. "Very quiet, and full of peace. I shall be glad, to be at home again."

They spoke no more, for a while. The ship, under the influence of the strong breeze, made rapid progress, within an hour they reached the harbour and came to anchor.

A number of small boats clustered about the vessel's side. From one of them there presently ascended to the deck an elderly woman, dressed in homespun, who called loudly for Barton, her eyes bright with tears.

The young Puritan ran quickly toward her.

"Mother" he cried and held her in his arms.

"Thank God," she whispered, "that my son has come home again."

He drew her toward the chair in which Ramona lay, very white and trembling.

"I have brought you a daughter," he said, and taking one of Ramona's hands in his, placed it in that of his mother. "This is she who is to be my wife."

The older woman searched the girl's eyes with quick attention. Then she bent down and kissed her.

"If we both love him," she said, "then must we love each other as well. Come, let us go home."

THE END.

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES

Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is Al the face is clear."

German Poor Get Half Pound Of Meat A Week

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.— Among the 4,200 passengers who arrived at an Atlantic port from Northern Europe on a Norwegian-American liner in ballast, which stopped at Halifax for two days, were several Americans who left Berlin a month ago. They gave some interesting details of living conditions in Germany.

Miss Ellen Worfolk, an elderly woman, who has lived in Berlin for ten years, said that the German officials permitted her to bring away about 100 pounds of brass ornaments she had in her possession for many years, but it took her two weeks to get the Danish customs to pass the articles.

"Food is scarce in Germany," said Miss Worfolk, "and people are getting very thin. I became so weak through the lack of proper nourishment that I had to apply for a milk card, and was placed on the same diet as the babies, which resulted in an improvement in my health. The death rate among infants is not so great as reported in the newspapers outside Germany, and in fact is not much higher than it was before the war. The reason for this is that the fresh milk is given to babies and old people, and healthy persons under 45 cannot obtain any milk for their tea or coffee. The people have two ounces of butter and an ounce of margarine per week doled out by the Government, and sometimes they can buy a little extra butter at $3 a pound. The sugar allowance is one pound and a half a month and seventy-five cents a pound for any that can be obtained from the grocers.

"There is no white bread in Germany. The average German eats war bread, which is dark in colour and not very palatable, and there is another kind called whole wheat bread, which is bought by the wealthy classes, but it has very little wheat in it. Half a pound of meat a week is allowed to each person. When there were no potatoes last spring the Government served out a pound of meat per person. The people were also encouraged to make marmalade for use instead of butter and had an extra ration of one puond and a half of sugar served out to them.

"Women are now employed in operating transit facilities all over Germany and the deaths and accidents have increased from 200 to 500 per cent. In regard to accidents on elevators the increase was partly due to the fact that when cables were worn out they were replaced by ropes of an inferior grade. Most people walk up and down stairs now in Berlin and other cities.

"Clothing is poor and must be purchased on a ticket. Cotton goods have almost entirely disappeared from the stores. Men are allowed one suit of clothes, with extra pair of trousers, a year, and the woman one house gown and two dresses a year. There is a great deal of mourning to be seen in the streets of Berlin, in spite of the official suggestion that it should not be worn. The Emperor cannot prevent the German people mourning their dead."

Two other Americans on the liner were Edgar Gerst, a tenor, and his wife. Mrs. Gerst said that when they left Germany a month ago, the rich people were able to obtain food and the poor were suffering. The Opera House was crowded nightly by society people wearing diamonds, just the same as it was before the war.

Mrs. Helen Davis, wife of the Kaiser's dentist, arrived from Berlin with her 5-year-old daughter, Frances Charles Metcalfe, an American who has lived seventeen years in Germany selling horses sent over from this country, said that Hamburg had suffered more than any other city during the war because the people depended entirely on the shipping business, which was practically dead.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WILL MAKE REPORT ON SALE OF CEREALS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—A committee appointed by the Food Controller is preparing a report and recommendation in regard to cereal foods which manufacturers desire to sell in packages of less than 20 pounds net weight. The committee consists of Prof. Harcourt, of the Ontario Agricultural College; Mr. P. B. Tustin, Chief of the Food and Dairy Division of the City of Winnipeg, and Mr. W. S. Lecky, of the War Purchasing Commission, Ottawa. All manufacturers who have applied for licenses to sell cereal foods in small packages have been required to furnish detailed information to the Food Controller as to the net contents of packages, ingredients, cost of containers cost of advertising, etc. The information thus secured will be the basis of the committee's report. Manufacturers and dealers will be asked to give information and advice as to any regulations which may be adopted.

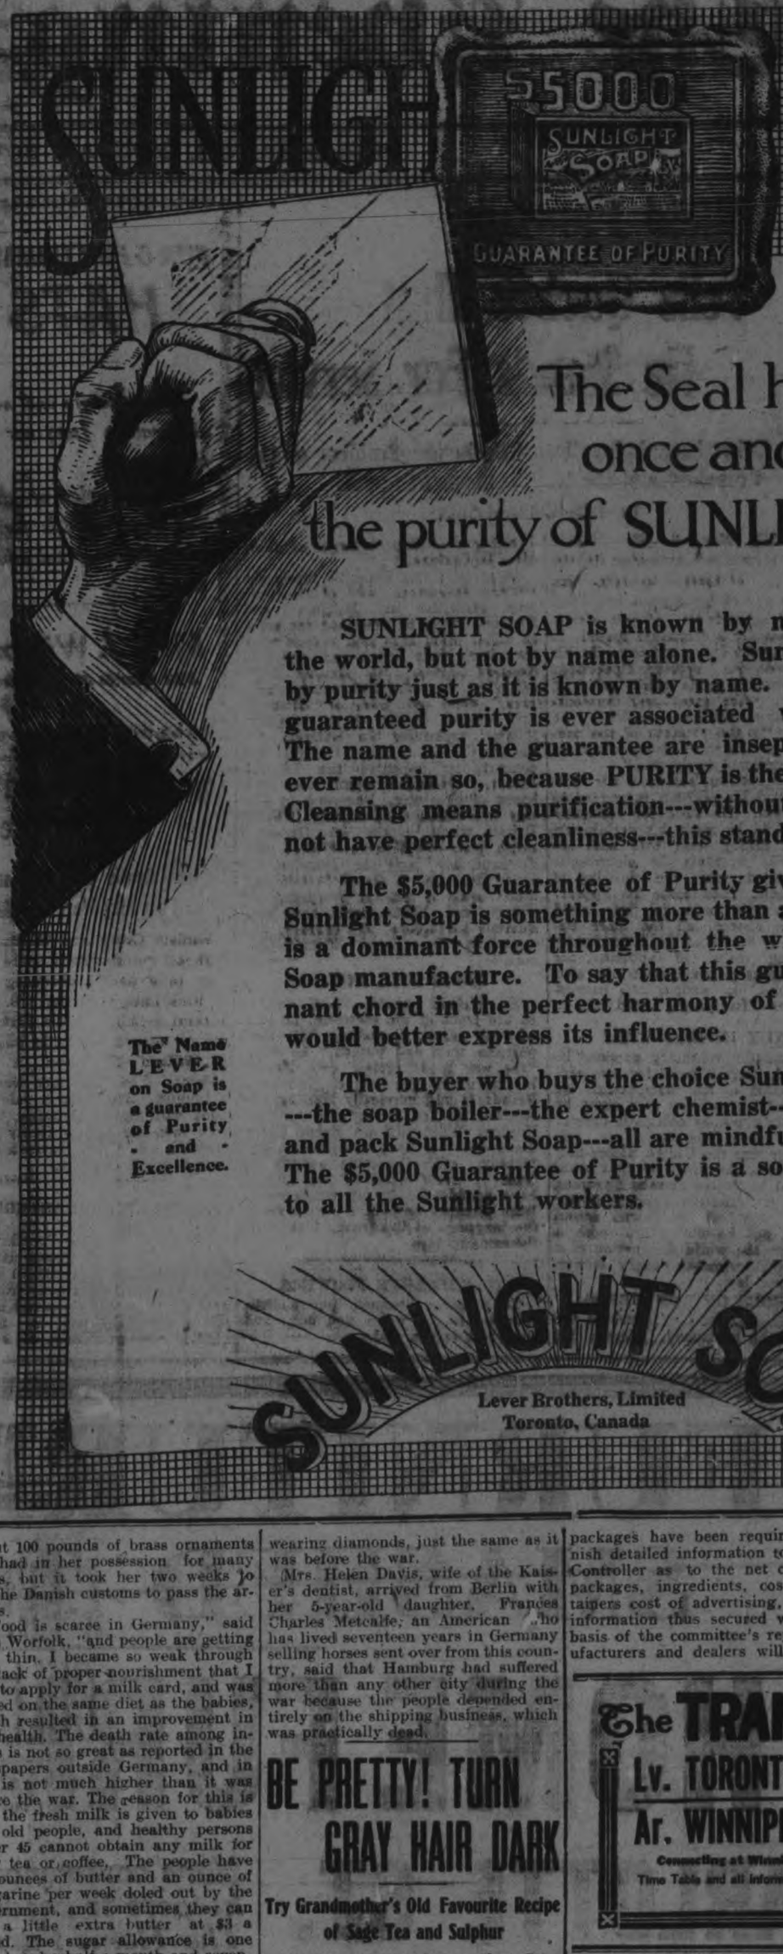
SUNLIGHT SOAP



The Seal has been set once and for all on the purity of SUNLIGHT SOAP.

SUNLIGHT SOAP is known by name throughout all the world, but not by name alone. Sunlight Soap is known by purity just as it is known by name. An established and guaranteed purity is ever associated with Sunlight Soap. The name and the guarantee are inseparable. They must ever remain so, because PURITY is the great soap essential. Cleansing means purification---without pure soap you cannot have perfect cleanliness---this stands to reason.

The $5,000 Guarantee of Purity given with every bar of Sunlight Soap is something more than an advertisement. It is a dominant force throughout the whole of the Sunlight Soap manufacture. To say that this guarantee is the dominant chord in the perfect harmony of the Sunlight Works would better express its influence.

The buyer who buys the choice Sunlight Soap materials ---the soap boiler---the expert chemist---the girls who wrap and pack Sunlight Soap---all are mindful of the guarantee. The $5,000 Guarantee of Purity is a source of gratification to all the Sunlight workers.

The Name LEVER on Soap is a guarantee of Purity and Excellence.

UNABLE TO WORK FOR SIX MONTHS

"Tanlac Has Brought Me Out of My Troubles Something Wonderful" He Says

"Honestly, if it hadn't been for Tanlac I might have lost my job that I have held now for eighteen years, and my wife is so delighted over my improvement that she has started taking Tanlac too," declared George Shields, a long time employee of the Grand Trunk Railway, and residing on High St., London, the other day.

"When I came down with that spell of typhoid fever some time ago," he continued, "I wasn't able to do a lick of work for six months. My appetite left me and I just had to force down enough to keep alive and it looked like I never would get back my strength. Anything but the lightest kind of diet would tear me all to pieces and make me miserable all day. My nerves were all unstrung and the least little thing would excite me so I couldn't rest. I would wake up half a dozen times during the night, and felt so wretched it was all I could do to get up in the mornings. I was so weak and run-down that I couldn't even lift a trunk without feeling the strain in my side for two or three days afterwards, and I had so little life and energy that I just felt like dropping down anywhere and staying there.

"I heard so much about Tanlac that I got a bottle and it has certainly brought me out of my troubles something wonderful. My appetite has increased so I feel hungry all the time, and I can eat such things as cabbage and pork without the least trouble. I have gained three pounds and can handle heavy baggage with ease, or do any other hard work that comes in my line. My nerves are in fine shape, I sleep as sound as a log all night and get up ready to tackle anything. I never have that tired, worn-out feeling any more, and at the rate I am now improving, I am sure that Tanlac will soon make me as well and strong as I ever was."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

CHILEAN WAR SHIP HERE TO TAKE OVER NEW SUBMARINES

The Chacabuco, with a Trasport, Arrives at New York, and will Go to New London.

New York, Nov. 9. — A Chilian war vessel and a transport have arrived in the Hudson river, off Ninety-ninth street. They are the Chacabuco, a protected cruiser, and the Angamos. Admiral Gomez Carreno is in command of both vessels.

The vessels are here for two days, and are on their way to New London, Conn., where they will join a flotilla of six submarines belonging to the Chilian government.

The submarines were built in the United States for the British government, which about a year ago turned them over to Chili as compensation for the delay in delivery of two dreadnoughts contracted for in England by Chili.

The Almirante Latorre and the Almirante Cochrane, are the two Chilian dreadnoughts, the keels of which were laid down prior to 1914 in British yards. They were taken over by the British government when the war began.

Arrangements are being made to take the entire submarine flotilla to Chili soon.

BATTLE STORIES FROM THE WESTERN FRONT

Scrapping in Shell-Holes by "Z"

"I got a blighty up by Ypres," said a wounded Midlander with a strapped up shoulder. "The Germans were holding a line of shell holes, between some big concrete machine-gun emplacements, and we simply could not get at them because of the crossfire from two of the 'pill-boxes.' It looked as if we were in for a regular hold-up. We had to take cover in shell-holes, half-way across between the lines, and whenever we made an attempt to leave them, the machine guns had us on the grid.

"We got through, though. The commanders of the platoons on either flank sized up what was happening, and rushed the emplacements. One of those platoon commanders was very hot stuff. He got right up to a loop-hole in the emplacement, held a bomb in his hand till the fuse was nearly burnt out, and then passed it in to the Bosches inside. That stopped the machine-guns all right, and we were able to get a move on.

"The Fritzes in the shell-holes came out to meet us. They were Bavarians, and I will say they put up a pretty good fight. It's not the Prussians who are doing the Kaiser's hardest work. They're almost a wash-out now. It's people like the Bavarians and Wurtemburgers, who are shoved into the hot corners. They stood waiting for us with the bayonet, holding their rifles across their chests as if they were on inspection of arms parade. As soon as you got near them, though, the point jabbed out on you like a flash. One big fellow nearly did me in. I thought he was not going to fight at all, and came up to him quite casual like. Then flick went his bayonet, and if I had not jumped pretty spryly I would not be here. My chum got him before he could recover himself. I've never seen Boches use the bayonet really well, before.

"That was some scrap. It was bayonet, butt, and boot. There were quite as many of the Germans as of our boys. I saw the sense then of all the bayonet practice we used to grumble so much about during our rest periods. We needed it all. A prisoner told us afterwards that his crowd rather fancied themselves. But we got them all in spite of their good fighting. When they saw that our boys were every bit as good as themselves, and a little bit better, it broke their spirits completely, and was what left surrendered quite suddenly. It was the funniest turn up I've ever seen. One minute a devil of a mill going on. The next minute, 'Finnee,' as the French say.

"While the fight was going on the Germans turned their artillery on the lot of us. They did not seem to care whether they scuppered their own men, as long as they got some of us. They continued their shelling when it was all over, and the prisoners had to go through their own barrage in getting across to our lines. We consolidated under continuous fire. I got a shell splinter in the shoulder. Luckily it happened about nightfall, and I got pretty quickly to the dressing station."

"My regiment is not an old regiment," said a wounded officer. "Our traditions do not stretch back beyond the South African War. We are just a Territorial crowd in an English County which has not the luck to have an old regular regiment associated with it. Yet in the attack from which I was sent home they fought like Guardsmen. God! how they fought. I thought I knew them, but I didn't really know all they had got in them. They were all plain English Country lads, many of them in action for the first time; but I do no think the seasoned troops on either side of us were ashamed of their company.

Our objective was the crest of a low ridge. It was the main German position, but they had been holding ground in front of it as well. We expected to find the first lines held lightly, if at all, and that our biggest effort would be required to take the ridge.

"Our bombardment had been very heavy, but when we went over, a perfect hurricane of machine-gun fire met us. Yet we got right up to the first German position in quite good order. I was awfully pleased by the steadiness of my chaps under that fire. Then the German barrage struck us. The whole battalion was out in the open, and we had to lie in shell holes, at first, simply unable to move. Not only that. The Germans had been holding their front trencres, and the garrison was out in shell holes also. As if the barrage was not enough for us they started lobbing bombs into our shell holes.

"Things looked very nasty. We could not get any messages through to the various units of the attack. We were simply a crowd of men, on our own, scattered about in shell-holes, with a hell of a bombardment going on. Well! The simple country lads settled the matter for themselves, and pulled the regiment through.

"Little groups of them, sometimes without an officer, sometimes without even an N.C.O., left their shelll holes and statred bombing the Germans. Shell hole after shell hole was cleared out, bombers, riflemen, rifle-grenadiers, bayonetmen, working out the principles of attack as they had faithfully studied them for months before. The whole battalion moved forward; out of the barrage, up the crest, in units of twos and three, until we collected within a few yards of the German positions. Then with a rush we were on them, and the crest was ours. We did not finish there. We bombed down on the machine-guns which were holding up the troops on either side of us, and they were able to get through to their objective also.

"A good many of our lads will never go back again to their English countryside. They have paid the price for the name which the regiment has to-day. You know what it means to be able to say you belong to the first or second battalions of an old line regiment. Everyone envies you, and wishes that his crowd were old regulars also. Well! They speak of us as the "1st ——shires" now, not merely as the "——shire regiment," as they used to do."

"That fellow there hasn't got a sense of humour," said a wounded Yorkshireman, chuckling gleefully to himself, in spite of the fact that his right leg was amputated above the knee. He pointed to the retreating form of an R.A.M.C. stretcher-bearer. "He came up to me and says, "Well, enirs?" And I says, 'Ye., mate. I've brought over the finest amputated leg that you ever saw?' And I'm blessed if he saw the joke.

'I got laid out in a raid," he continued. "A daylight raid at that. We got over to the German lines all right, while our guns barraged off the Boches to a treat. We got all that was left of them as prisoners, and the Engineer fellows with us knocked their dugouts and emplacements silly. It's a little way we have now of stirring up the old Hun when there's nothing big doing.

"We were getting back to our trenches again before the German barrage got going. I stopped one shell all to myself. You see what it did. It did not hurt me half. And I did not lose my senses either. My rifle was smashed. Perhaps it was just as well.

"I saw the Captain coming over, and howled out to him. He ran over to me, and when he saw what had happened, he whipped out a handkerchief and tied it around my leg. Then he passes a knobkerry he was carrying through the loop, and twisted it round and round till the handkerchief felt like a red hot iron. I expect it stopped the bleeding and saved my life, but it was too much for me. When I woke up again I was in hospital."

Buy A Victory Bond by following the Gillette Banking System

DO you pay a man to shave you every day? Then you're lucky if it doesn't cost you more than the price of a $50.00 Victory Bond a year!

This shaving outlay might be $50.00 well spent if it saved some of your own valuable time. But on the contrary it takes three or four times as long to get shaved away from home, as to shave yourself with a Gillette Safety Razor. You're not only wasting your money but your time as well—and you are taking up part of another man's working hours which should, under present conditions, be spent at something of greater service to the nation.

If you have been using a Gillette you have been saving $1.00 per week at least. Buy an extra $50.00 Victory Bond for each year that the Gillette has saved that much for you!

If you haven't been "banking" money this way, buy both a Gillette and a Bond now, and let one pay for the other! Do the same for your son, as a double lesson in practical patriotism and self-reliant thrift.

Dividends will be double, too—from the Bond in cash, and from the Gillette in such shaving comfort as can be secured in no other way.

NOW is the time to make the investment!

Buy your Bonds from your Banker, Broker or Local Committee.
Buy your Gillette from your Druggist, Hardware Dealer or Jeweler.

Honour Roll of S. S. No. 7, Emily.

Three cheers for the boys who from No. 7
Have gone to fight for the land next to Heaven!
Mrs. Leonard McAuliffe has offered three sons,
While only two got a chance to drive back the Huns.
William has fallen with the bravest and best,
While Joseph is in England taking a rest.
Mrs. Patrick McAuliffe did not tarry,
But quickly gave up her dear son Harry;
While delivering a message he fell to the ground,
And was rewarded for valour, the best to be found,
His friend, Michael Towmey, answered the call,
And made a good soldier, being stout and tall.
Harold Nurse is also doing his bit,
And is fighting away without being hit.
Gordon and Harold Harrison went like the rest,
While Carol Flaherty went from the West.
Mrs. George Franks has given three brothers,
Who are over in France like so many others.
And we must not forget Leland Franks,
That old schoolboy, the player of pranks.
Although those heroes did not all enlist here,
Yet to them that old school was once very dear.

Long white gloves are worn with three-quarter sleeves.

Sweet corn should never be boiled more than three minutes, if it is, the sweetness is destroyed.

Camping in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

Tented Life In Canadian Rockies

FOR sheer joy of living, for the most complete emancipation from the bondage of civilized life, give me the tented life in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

With a guide, a pack and a saddle pony, a supply of food and a tent or two, we leave Banff or Field and face the alluring trail and the untrodden vales. Miles and years behind are cities and streets and trains and creditors and sky scrapers, and even war. After hours of trail journeying, over as many kinds of paths as you can count on fingers and toes, the first camp is struck and none too soon for the tenderfoot who hasn't been in the saddle for some years.

Then one enters upon the tented life and a rare life it is. How tiny the little tent in the world of hills, but it is Home for the time. No sooner is it pegged down that Bill has by magic started a roaring fire going and set free the most delicious odors for the epicurean feast that soon follows. A fallen tree serves as a mahogany table, a stump or two as upholstered chairs and what more would you have? We actually can get along without finger bowls or napkins. Could a cannibal be greedier than we are, as the bacon and the bread and the prunes disappear and the black old tea pot never runs dry. Then the camp fire! What witchery in the erratic flames with which the mountain winds are playing, what thrills of physical well-being as we fire-worship. Men purr like well-fed cats and are unashamed. Then the camp fire symposium: the tales, true and less true, the singing, classic and otherwise, and such good fellowship as is rare!

So to bed. Three in a row. The centre sleeper in his sleeping bag looks like a stuffed giant, the rest of us are content with the warm Hudson's Bay blankets of ample fold. Oblivion waits on the campers until the morning wash in the ice cold stream makes a complete awakening. And what a day it is, rarer than any poetic day in June in the other part of the world where men crowd together. Trails and paths invite exploration on every hand, mountain slopes say, come over and climb us for the panorama we will reveal. Wild life is revealed at times, for it is the haunt of big and small game—bear, mountain goat and sheep, parcupine, marmot, ptarmigan, eagle. Truly is it a marvel world, and the fleeting life therein, in a little tent, makes one of the happiest experiences of life and one of its happiest memories as well.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Strange Conversion

By F. A. MITCHEL

A tramp called for food at a handsome country residence. The lady of the house was sitting on the veranda. She was a woman to interest herself in building up those who needed building up and ordered a maid to bring a substantial meal out on to the veranda and place it on a table. Then she invited the tramp to help himself. While he ate she questioned him as to the cause of his living a life of beggarly indolence. His replies were not very satisfactory and indicated that he followed the life of a tramp because he preferred it to work.

The lady, having fed him, gave him some money, and he departed. When her husband came home that evening she mentioned to him what she had done. He chided her for wasting her sympathy on one who was evidently undeserving, whereupon she declared that all persons were in a sense undeserving; that the mere fact of a person's being in bad condition, even though through his own fault, was a legitimate object for sympathy, and in any event it was an advantage to the giver to lend a helping hand.

A year passed. The tramp was passing over the same route as before and bethought himself of the aid and comfort he had derived at the place he was approaching. He was no more worthy of help than before, felt no gratitude; he only wished to get another meal and some more money. On reaching the house he saw evidences of a funeral taking place in it. The obsequies were for the lady who had befriended him, and since she had rendered herself much beloved on account of her charities a large number of poor people were in attendance.

The tramp joined those who were passing to have a last look at their benefactress. He noticed on the finger of the dead a diamond ring. He further noticed that when the lid of the coffin was put on the ring was not removed. When the funeral procession went to the cemetery he joined the throng and saw the body lowered into the grave. Then the mourners dispersed, and the tramp, after carefully noting the position of the lot, went away.

When night came he went to the house from which his benefactress had been carried, stole a spade and a shovel from among the garden tools and, going to the cemetery, began to remove the earth that had been thrown into the grave of his benefactress. Having uncovered the coffin, he took a screwdriver from his pocket and removed the lid. Taking the hand, he was surprised that there was in it a little warmth. The diamond ring was there, and he attempted to remove it. Failing to do so, he took out his knife to cut off the finger. Feeling something warm on his hand, he struck a match and saw that it was blood.

Leaping from the grave, he ran away as fast as his legs would carry him. Then he stopped and began to think. The most likely solution of what he had stumbled on was that it was one of those very rare cases of a trance having been mistaken for death. His benefactress was lying uncovered in a grave. What should he do? If he rescued her he would be obliged to confess that he had gone there to steal the ring on her finger.

There are natures so bereft of what is good that they can only be affected by some momentous event. The tramp was one of these. A sudden revulsion came over him. Returning to the grave, he found the body as he had left it. Removing it from its cold bed, he wrapped it in his coat and carried it the nearest house and restoratives were applied.

For a long while the invalid hung between life and death. As soon as there was any hope for her recovery her husband was notified of what had occurred, but not till this was assured was the matter broken to any other member of the family. Then they knew of it by the lady being brought to her home.

As soon as the tramp had done all in his power to save his benefactress, from whose dead body he had intended to steal a jewel, taking advantage of the excitement attending the efforts to restore her, he disappeared. When the lady became convalescent she asked what had happened, but it was not thought advisable to tell her. Seeing that her finger had been badly cut, she inquired into the cause. A story was invented to satisfy her.

One thing puzzled her. Her husband, who had formerly been unsympathetic with her charitable work, which was not a part of organized aid to the poor, but, rather, spontaneous, had suddenly become an unreasoning giver.

The tramp again visited the house where he had received aid and comfort, but not as a tramp. The lady, as at the time of his first visit, was seated on the veranda when she saw a well dressed man coming up the walk. She did not recognize him till he made himself known and told her that it was through her he had become a changed man. But he exercised sufficient caution to discover that she did not know she had been in a grave, and he did not tell her. She asked him if there was anything she could do for him, and he replied that there was. He gave one-tenth of all he earned to criminals, and he thought that his gifts would have more effect if they passed through her hands. She accepted the trust. He made his first donation, and they were continued regularly during his life.

HER HOME NO LONGER CHILDLESS

Operation not Necessary after Taking the Great Medicine for Women.

Miller's Falls, Mass.—"Doctors said I had displacement very badly and I would have to have an operation. I had a soreness in both sides and a pulling sensation in my right side. I could not do much work the pain was so bad. I was also troubled with irregularity and other weaknesses. My blood was poor. We had been married four years and had no children.

After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I became well and strong and was saved from the operation. We are now the parents of a big baby girl and I praise your remedies to others and give you permission to publish my letter."—Mrs. JOSEPH GUILBAULT, Jr., Bridge Street, Miller's Falls, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is famous for restoring women to normal health and strength. When this is done wives no longer despair of having children.

A woman should be reluctant to submit to a surgical operation until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. If you have a case that needs special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

THE QUEEN OF GEMS.

Flawless Emerald Most Valuable of Stones.

An emerald free from flaws would be the most precious of all stones, experts of the Smithsonian Institution maintain in a recently published bulletin.

Unfortunately it (the emerald) is seldom free from flaws, and were this not the case an emerald would be of greater value, carat for carat, than the diamond. To-day a good diamond is worth about $250 to $400 per carat, according to its purity and size, while an emerald varies in value from $350 to $500, increasing very rapidly with size. Flawless emeralds weighing more than four carats are among the rarest jewels; a perfect stone of four carats is practically priceless, whereas a diamond would bring only $1,000 to $2,000.

It is probable that all the emeralds of the ancients came from the so-called Cleopatra emerald mines in upper Egypt, worked as early as 1650 B. C., abandoned and lost sight of during the Middle Ages, but re-discovered early in the nineteenth century, when only cloudy stones of a light color were obtained.

Unlike some green stones, the emerald retains its color when heated and when subjected to artificial light, and in this connection Pliny is quoted as saying that neither sun nor shade, nor yet the light of a candle, caused change in its color or lustre. It was supposed, in ancient times, to be good for the eyes, and Pliny also remarks, "There is not a gem or precious stone that so fully possesseth the eye, and yet never contenteth it with satiety. Nay, if the sight has been wearied and dimmed by intensive poring upon anything else, the beholding of this stone doth refresh and restore it again. While beneficial to human eyes, it was believed to be fatal to the eyesight of serpents, in the words of the poet Moore: 'Blinded like serpents when they gaze upon the emerald's virgin blaze.'"

Many virtues were once ascribed to this stone; when worn it was held to be a preservative against epilepsy and other ailments. It was also valued as a charm against evil spirits; while taken internally, it was claimed to have great medicinal value.

The crystals are simple in form; merely hexagonal prisms attached at one end to the matrix, with usually a flat face at right angles to its axis on the other end. They are invariably flawed, so much so that "a "flawless emerald" has become a proverbial expression for unattainable perfection. The largest single crystal, said to weigh 9¾ ounces, is in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire.

Punishment Postponed.

"The next time you spill your coffee on the tablecloth, my dear, don't try to hide it by setting your cup on it. I shall notice it anyhow when I clear away."

"Yes, but I am in my office by that time."

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and today they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Are You Tied Up Indoors?

If so, your whole system naturally gets tied up too.

A lazy liver and constipated bowels are bad things, dangerous things.

Exercise as much as you can—but keep your liver and bowels up to the mark all the time.

Take one pill regularly—until you are sure you are all right again.

Shell Shock.

Shell shock is commonly supposed to be a new complaint, due to modern heavy artillery, but I have found a case of it as far back as the year 1471. The victim was an elector of Brandenburg, Friedrich of the Iron Teeth, and this is Carlyle's account of his experience:

"In that war with Pommern he sat besieging a Pomeranian town, Uckermunde the name of it, when at dinner one day a cannon ball plunged down upon the table with such a crash as we can fancy, which greatly confused the nerves of Friedrich, much injured his hearing and even his memory thenceforth."

The consequence was that the elector abdicated at once and died soon afterward.

Phosphorescent Skunks.

Patrick Brennan of Phoenix, Ariz., writes to the Scientific American: "The large black, the black and white and the hydrophobia skunks are phosphorescent in darkness, giving off a continuous blue flame, the head being of a more fiery red, then tapering off into blue to the tail tip. This fact may answer in a degree for the blue marsh gas flame, the jack o' lantern and will o' the wisp, the ghost lights of all states. I make this suggestion from my experience in trapping in deserted mine tunnels in this state."

Big Work Of War Salvage

British Make Use of Articles Discarded by the Army.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The British Government is gathering from the battlefield and camps of Flanders all manner of discarded uniforms and other articles of clothing to be worked over for further use by British troops and German prisoners. A depot has been established at Dewsbury, according to a dispatch to the Department of Commerce from Consul Claiborne at Bradford, where a large force of ragpickers is employed in sorting.

Every garment that can be saved is cleaned and dyed and put to some use. In this way $300,000 worth of uniforms has been saved thus far in the war. In ten months the total value of materials saved from the war theatre in Flanders amounts to $3,293,250, while the value of clothing saved and renovated has been $1,702,510. The net credit for the entire project over labour cost and all expenses has been $4,659,230.

The total rags are worked over and made into yarn and cloth blankets. This plan of saving includes a great variety of goods. Bits of leather from riding breeches are saved to the value of many thousands of dollars. Gold lace has been recovered to a considerable amount. Hundreds of thousands of cotton shirts have been saved, mended, renovated and sent to be worn by German prisoners.

Woolen scarfs and belt are cleaned and prepared for sending to the troops when the cold weather comes along.

At the Dewsbury centre there have already been received and dealt with about 45,000,000 separate articles, including 4,100,000 jackets, 4,500,000 pairs of trousers, 620,000 great coats, 903,000 pairs of riding breeches, 2,700,000 puttees, 3,50,000 shirts, 856,000 caps, 1,800

The Aerodrome

To choose the site of an aerodrome in France, judgment and consideration must be exercised. It requires more thought, probably, and is a matter of greater difficulty than most people imagine. In England it is a simpler problem, in spite of the fact that the contours of the country are on the whole less suitable, for there is much wider choice of terrain. In France most of the available ground within a convenient distance of the trenches has already been occupied for the purpose.

How near the aerodrome should be the lines depends to a great extent on the particular purpose for which it is designed. For instance a "Scout" squadron need not be in touch with anything but its own headquarters. Its work may be along the whole of a vast centre, such as the Somme front. In such circumstances it would be no advantage if its aerodrome were close behind one part of this front and disproportionately far away from another. Also an aeroplane must gain height before it can fly over enemy territory, and if its aerodrome is close up, it only means that it must rise by circling round it before it can get to work. On the other hand, if it starts from, say, twenty miles behind the front, a distance covered in a comparatively few minutes, it can go straight for the lines and reach the required height by the time it gets there. But there are other purposes for which aeroplanes are used, and for that large section whose work lies mainly in co-operation with infantry or artillery, reasonable proximity to the trenches is essential. Only by being near at hand at all times can the pilots and observers keep in sufficiently close touch with the units which they are supporting, since it is even advisable that they should have personal acquaintance with the officers of these units.

It is evident, then that for military reasons it may be advisable to site an aerodrome either a very few miles behind the line or a considerable distance behind it. In the case where military necessity permits of the more distant position, it has the added advantage of being out of range of shells, which means increased safety both for personnel and material. But besides distance from trenches and other considerations to be taken into account. The possibilities of concealment must be considered. The nearer one is to the line the more necessary this becomes. Then there is the question of water, which in some cases has to be brought from a distance of several miles. To settle the pros and cons questions, there is a Board composed of the most competent experts on flying. This Board selects positions for all aerodromes in France and labour battalions are employed in their construction. Perhaps a whole battalion will be employed for a month in filling in the holes, levelling the ground, cutting down trees and erecting the necessary buildings.

With regard to the construction, a point which has to be carefully considered is the site of the aerodrome. Aerodromes in France are usually much smaller than in England. Close to the line this is obviously a matter of necessity. The larger the aerodrome the more it will show. Apart from the necessity for concealment it is natural that aerodromes should be smaller in France than in England. In the latter provision has to be made for men in an early stage of training, but in France every pilot is an expert; he would not be fit to fly there if he could not land in a reasonably small space. But even size must be varied in accordance with the purpose of the aerodrome. Thus the "Scout" machine needs more room for landing than a larger and slower type.

Of course an aeroplane, even when not very greatly damaged, has often to descend before it can regain its aerodrome. In the shell pitted country near the trenches this is usually fatal to the machine. Here many an aeroplane, whether Boche or British, has been forced to make a hasty landing. Either the pilot has been wounded, or the machine too much knocked about to continue its flight. Down it comes, low over the trenches, and reaches the ground with a bump. There is a sudden "pancake," and its flying days are numbered. If it is within shelling distance of the enemy it is advisable for pilot and observer to beat a hasty retreat, should they be still capable of doing so, and to leave the aeroplane to the tender mercies of the shells. Not much time for this, for the guns open fire almost immediately and in a few seconds the machine may be a smoking ruin. Many a brave pilot, who has struggled back across the lines fighting against heavy odds, has had to descend in this way. As he lands the shells fall around him, and, if he is lucky, he may die the death of a soldier on terra firma.

But such a fate is the exception and not the rule. Considering the dangers of air fighting it is wonderful with what regularity pilot and observer wing their way back, often after splendid exploits, to their aerodrome. It is like the nest that awaits a bird, as carefully built and almost as cleverly hidden.

GERMAN SOLDIERS TOLD OF BUTCHERY

SHOT IN MASSES, THEY SAID

Wholesale Slaughter of Helpless Russians and Killing of Captured English Charged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Three letters from soldiers of the German Army showing that they considered it necessary to protest to Ambassador Gerard against certain German war practices, among them the unnecessary slaughter of Russian soldiers, were made public by the United States Government to-day through the medium of the Committee on Public Information.

These letters were written to Ambassador Gerard as "the representative of a Christian State" with the expressed hope that he might be able to accomplish something toward putting an end to butcheries which the writers of the letters said they were forced to witness or to participate in. They are to be published in a forthcoming pamphlet on "German War Practices," to be issued soon by the Committee on Public Information.

Here is the protest of a German soldier, an eyewitness of the slaughter of Russian soldiers in the Masurian lakes and swamps:

"It was frightful, heart-rending, as these masses of human beings were driven to destruction. Above the terrible thunder of the cannon could be heard the heart-rending cries of the Russians: "Oh, Prussians! Oh, Prussians!—but there was no mercy. Our Captain had ordered: "The whole lot must die; so rapid fire."

"As I have heard, five men and one officer on our side went mad from those heart-rending cries. But most of my comrades and the officers joked as the unarmed and helpless Russians shrieked for mercy while they were being suffocated in the swamps and shot down. The order was: Close up and at it harder!'

"For days afterward those heart-rending yells followed me, and I dare not think of them or I shall go mad. There is no God, there is no morality and no ethics any more. There are no human beings any more, but only beasts. Down with militarism!

"This was the experience of a Prussian soldier. At present wounded; Berlin, Oct. 22, 1914.

"If you are a truth-loving man, please receive these lines from a common Prussian soldier."

"Russian Poland, Dec. 18, 1914.

"In the name of Christianity I send you these words: My conscience forces me as a Christian German soldier to inform you of these lines.

"Wounded Russians are killed with the bayonet, according to orders, and Russians who have surrendered are often shot down in masses according to orders in spite of their heart-rending prayers.

"In the hope that you, as the representative of a Christian State, will protest against this, I sign myself

"A German Soldier and Christian.

"I would give my name and regiment, but these words could get me courtmartialed for divulging military secrets."

The following letter is from a soldier on the western front:

"To the American Government, Washington, U.S.A.

"Englishmen who have surrendered are shot down in small groups. With the French one is more considerate. I ask whether men let themselves be taken prisoner in order to be disarmed and shot down afterward? Is that chivalry in battle?

"It is no longer a secret among the people; one hears everywhere that few prisoners are taken; they are shot down in small groups. They say naively: "We don's want any unnecessary mouths to feed. Where there is no one to enter complaint, there is no judge. Is there, then, no power in the world which can put an end to these murders and rescue the victims? Where is Christianity? Where is right? Might is right.

WEEKLY REPORT ON ON FARM CONDITIONS

New Fall Wheat Has Made Little Growth—Live Stock Situation

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The new fall wheat has made little growth during the last week or two, and the later sown crop is likely to enter the winter with a smaller top than is desired. The same may be said of winter rye.

The comparatively slow progress of threshing is attributed to the good general yield of grains, the lateness of the harvest, wet weather, the scarcity of help, and, one representative claims, the tough straw.

Fall ploughing and silo filling have also been delayed by bad weather and the lack of farm labour. It is the general opinion that the needed acreage of fall ploughing will not be overtaken unless a long stretch of open weather ensues.

Corn has been an unfortunate crop, most of it having been sown late. As a result of this, and the scarcity of labour, a considerable portion of the crop has been kept lying in the fields in the rain and the cold. The same may be said of buckwheat. Beans were also a late crop, and a Middlesex report speaks of a field of nine acres being covered with snow.

Potatoes are a fair crop, but some of them are yet in the ground. Turnips, mangels, sugar beets and other roots are also regarded as good crops, but the lifting of them, especially turnips, has been slow owing to rainy weather.

Frost caught some of the clover before it could be cut, and injured it for seed purposes. Spring seeding of clover has turned out well, but owing to the lack of growth in the fall the fields must be pastured less if a good crop is to be expected next year.

In Dundas County the St. Lawrence Valley Fruit Growers' Association, as the result of co-operation, have sold their output at the following rates per barrel:

McIntosh Red, No. 1, $7.00; No. 2, $6.00; No. 3, $4.00.

Fameuse, No. 1, $6.00; No. 2, $5.50; No. 3, $4.00.

Winter Varieties, No. 1, $5.00; Nos. 2 and 3, $3.50.

Live Stock.— The cold weather has compelled the comparatively early stabling of dairy cattle and horses, which will mean more consumption of fodder supplies. In Durham County a number of mare in foal have been purchased at good prices, being in fit condition, while ordinary horses, not being in such good form, are selling at comparatively low prices.

Oxford reports a few carloads of fat cattle being shipped out, but farmers are rather looking for "feeders" for finishing later, as there is a good supply of grain and other fodder on hand for this purpose. Stock dealers are complaining of the great scarcity of railway cars.

Milk production has fallen back to the average for the season, as pastures appear to be about finished.

In some of the Western Ontario Counties small pigs are selling at from $12 to $16 a pair.

Reports from Haldimand, Brant, and Prince Edward state that ewe lambs and other sheep for breeding purposes are being bought freely, and the outlook for the sheep industry is much brighter than formerly. Some of the purchasers in Brant were Americans.

THE JOYS OF BRAMSHOTT.

Bramshott Camp, Hants, Eng.
June 26th, 1916

There's an isolated, desolated spot
I'd like to mention,
Where all you hear is "Stand at Ease, Quick March," "Slope Arms,"
"Attention."
It's miles away from anywhere, by jove it is a rum 'un,
A man lived there for fifty years, and never saw a woman.

There's lots of tiny little huts, all dotted here and there,
For those who live inside them, I've offered many a prayer;
It's mud up to the eyebrows, you get in your ears,
But into it you have to go, without a sign of fears.

There's soldiers living in the huts, it fills my heart with sorrow,
With tear-dimmed eyes they've said to me: "It's Bramshott Camp tomorrow."
Inside the huts there's rats, they say,
as big as any goat,
Last night a soldier saw one trying on his overcoat.

For breakfast every morning it is just Mother Hubbard,
You double round the hut three times and dive into the cupboard.
Sometimes they give you bacon, sometimes they give you cheese,
Which marches up and down your plate, "Slope Arms" and "Stand at Ease."

At night you sleep on straw or boards,
just like a herd of cattle,
And if perchance you should turn around your bones begin to rattle;
And when you hear "Reveille" blown
it makes you feel unwell,
You knock the icebergs off your feet and wish the bugler to "Ah, well."

Now, when the war is over and we've captured Kaiser Billy,
To shoot him would be merciful and absolutely silly;
Just send him down to Bramshott
Camp, among the rats and clay,
And let the Crown Prince watch him
as he slowly fades away.

Delivery of interim certificates and of definitive bonds will be made through the Chartered Banks.

Bearer bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $50., $100., $500., and $1,000. and may be registered as to principal only. Fully registered bonds, the interest on which is paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Subject to the payment of 25 cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons, will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons, at any time, on application to the Minister of Finance.

Surrender of Bonds

Holders of Dominion of Canada Debenture Stock, due October 1st, 1919, and of bonds of the three preceding Dominion of Canada War Loan Issues, have the privilege of surrendering their bonds in part payment for subscriptions to bonds of this issue, under the following conditions:—

Debenture Stock, due October 1st, 1919, at Par and Accrued Interest.
War Loan Bonds, due December 1st, 1925, at 97½ and Accrued Interest.

(The above will be accepted in part payment for bonds of any of the three maturities of this Issue.)

War Loan Bonds, due March 1st, 1937, at 96 and Accrued Interest.

(These will be accepted in part payment for bonds of the 1937 maturity ONLY of this Issue.)

Bonds of the various maturities of this issue will, in the event of future issues of like maturity, or longer, made by the Government, other than issues made abroad, be accepted at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to such issues.

Issue Price Par

Free from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

Payment to be made as follows:

10% on December 1st, 1917 — 20% on March 1st, 1918
10% on January 2nd, 1918 — 20% on April 1st, 1918
20% on February 1st, 1918 — 20% on May 1st, 1918

A full half year's interest will be paid on 1st June, 1918

The Bonds therefore give a net yield to the investor of about:

5.61% on the 20 year Bonds
5.68% on the 10 year Bonds
5.81% on the 5 year Bonds

All payments are to be made to a Chartered Bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and the allotment to cancellation. Subscriptions accompanied by a deposit of 10% of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a Chartered Bank. Any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank will forward subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied toward payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Subscriptions may be paid in full on January 2nd, 1918, or on any instalment due date thereafter under discount at the rate of 5½% per annum. Under this provision payments of the balance of subscriptions may be made as follows:

If paid on January 2nd, 1918, at the rate of 89.10795 per $100.
If paid on February 1st, 1918, at the rate of 79.46959 per $100.
If paid on March 1st, 1918, at the rate of 59.72274 per $100.
If paid on April 1st, 1918, at the rate of 39.90959 per $100.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank, or from any Victory Loan Committee, or member thereof.

The books of the Loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of this issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Subscription Lists will close on or before December 1st, 1917.

Austro-German Attempt To Encircle Italians A Failure

The Menace on the Italian Left Wing is Also Practically Past Headquarters Announces---Nothing of Special Interest to Report From the Western Front Says British Official Statement---Von Tirpitz Makes Frank Announcement of German Policy.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, November 12.—The reconcentration of the Italian army along the newly chosen line of defense is now virtually an accomplished fact. The troops have taken up their positions in trenches. The gun emplacements have been made ready, and the whole vast organization is preparing for the battle that is not so far off. The men are in good spirits, and a feeling of determination prevails in all ranks. Retirement of that part of the Italian force in the Carnia district of Northern Venetia has shortened the Italian main front, which now presents a compact line extending about twenty miles along the new river defenses to the sea.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, November 12.—The enemy's operations on the north and east in an attempt at an encirclement of the Italians have not succeeded. The menace on the Italian left wing also is practically past.

PETROGRAD, Sunday — Street fighting is proceeding constantly. Junkers, loyal to the Kerensky Government, regained possession of the telephone station this morning. The exact whereabouts of the Kerensky army, which is reported to be approaching the city is unknown at this hour.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, November 12.—England's optimism of an ironing out of the Russian situation was centred on important events which despatches this afternoon hinted were occurring at Moscow, recently wrested from Bolsheviki control by the Provisional Government forces. Russian diplomats here hoped that President Rodzianko of the Duma, General Kornilloff and General Kaledines head of the All-Cossacks troops, now reported meeting at Moscow, would be able to form a stable government. An authoritative despatch dated at Moscow yesterday at 4 p.m., and received to-day, declared there was considerable street firing in progress there, and that the Provisional troops were doing well.

Those in touch with the Russian situation saw no hope to-day of Kerensky's revival of power. They believed, however, the Provisional Government forces with a strong military backing would be reformed in a strong government. In the House of Commons to-day Foreign Minister Balfour announced that the Foreign Office "was in daily communication with the British Ambassador at Petrograd."

He did not disclose what this official had reported. Except for brief wireless despatches which shed no great light on events of the day, no direct press despatches have been received from Russia since Sunday afternoon. It was believed here that fighting was in progress in or around Petrograd. Kerensky's loyal troops having last been reported close to the capital.

PETROGRAD, November 12.—The announcement was made to-day that no official communication has been received from army headquarters.

BERLIN, November 12.—Austro-German forces in Northern Italy have cut off 10,000 retreating Italians in the Upper Piave Valley, the War Office announced. The Italians are said to have surrendered.

ROME, November 12.—Italians have resisted the enemy everywhere on the northern front along which the Austrians are attempting to outflank the Italian river line. On the plain there is brisk firing across the Piave River. An enemy action on the Asiago Plateau on the Trentino front was a complete failure.

BELGIUM'S FATE THE WAR'S SUPREME ISSUE

Violent Annexationist Speech Made by Admiral Von Tirpitz "Our Military Security Lies in Belgium" He Declares

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, November 12.—At a meeting of the new Fatherland party in Munich yesterday, Admiral Von Tirpitz, the former German Minister of Marine, made a violent annexationist speech. He said the question whether Germany or Great Britain became the protector of Belgium would be the decisive issue of the war. "A mistaken solution of the Belgian question would stunt our exports and the reserve capital of our industry, and degrade us to being the bond slave of Anglo-Americanism," said the Admiral. "Our military security lies in Belgium. It is the only way of obtaining compensation for our enormous economic losses." The Admiral added that it was a mistake to believe the submarine would prove sufficient protection against Great Britain, as some effective counter weapon was bound to be discovered. He declared Germany must have Antwerp, that Austria must become the principal protecting power of the mouth of the Danube, and that Germany was interested in the settlement of the Adriatic question.

"Germany's struggle," he said, "is a terrific battle against the all devouring tyranny of Anglo-Americanism."

THE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION ENDORSES THE VICTORY LOAN

Moved by Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, seconded by Rev. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, and unanimously carried,

That the Peterborough Ministerial Association in session this day, November 12th, recognizing our obligation to assist those who have special responsibility in connection with the present war, and desiring to co-operate with the Finance Minister and those associated with him in furthering the success of the "Victory Loan," it is resolved that we heartily commend this matter to our people as a safe investment and a patriotic duty.

THE BOLSHEVIKI GOVERNMENT IS CRUMBLING AWAY

Every Probability That Expected Battle Between Kerensky's Loyal Troops and Lenine Faction is Now in Progress

FIGHTING IN STREETS

(By Ed. L. Keen).

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The Bolsheviki "Government" of Russia is crumbling fast. It may already have crumbled away. Moscow is once again restored to the control of the Provisional Government. There is every probability that the expected battle between Kerensky's loyal troops and the Trotsky-Lenine factions is now in progress. London does not except the Bolsheviki to put up much of a fight. They are constitutionally not fighting men. They would not stomach a contest where the forces arrayed against them were nearly their equal in number. Despite the kaleidescopic changes and uncertainty of information from various Russian sources, the London press reflected a more cheerful attitude to-day. The conviction was expressed everywhere that Kerensky had once again drawn strength from his initial defeat. German agents, with which the army is known to be plentifully sprinkled, are probably doing their utmost to prevent the lining up of Kerensky's forces against the revolutionists. One despatch received via Moscow told of certain troops ordered to entrain for service against the Bolsheviki, who mutinied and attempted to halt the passage of special trains bearing other soldiers toward Petrograd.

DISOBEYED THE CENSORS.

The most encouraging in the late news was the word from Petrograd that the railway, post and telegraph employees—all Government servants—had switched their allegiance from the Bolsheviki back to the Provisional Government, and refused to obey the Bolsheviki censors. This opened the first channel of news from Kerensky's side as to conditions at the capital. Correspondents for London newspapers in Petrograd sent despatches agreeing that the support of Pacifists was dissolving. According to these despatches there has already been some fighting on the streets of Petrograd, but a great deal has been due to lawless elements taking advantage of the disorganization of the capital to loot and rob. Numerous Government buildings, including the Winter Palace, have been stripped by soldiers of decorations and valuables, the thieving going on openly. Many of these soldiers, loaded with their booty, have encountered the Provisional Government troops closing in on the city and have been shot.

A DOUBLE DROWNING

Messrs. W. R. Grose and Jack Henry Met Death in Icy Waters of Rice Lake Yesterday When Launch Was Capsized

COMPANION SAVED

The city was stirred last evening when the news quickly circulated around that two well-known local young men had met a tragic death.

The victims of the tragedy, William R. Grose, 343 Rubidge Street, and Jack Henry, Brown Street, Byersville, were drowned yesterday at 12.30 in Rice Lake.

At 7 o'clock in the morning W. R. Grose, Jack Henry and Berdean Garside, 173 Adeline Street, motored to Bell's boathouse, near Crawford's Grove, where they boarded Garside's launch, the "Adanac," and set out for Rice Lake. While passing about 30 feet from the lighthouse near Hattrick's Point, Garside, who was sitting outside on the stern of the boat in the sun, felt the launch lurch as the men inside evidently shifted from one side to the other. When the boat tipped he grabbed the post supporting the cover of the launch, and his weight overturned the launch.

Told to Hold On.

He called to the men to hold on to the launch as he was doing, and called for help. This they did, and presently several boats from the shores set out to the men's assistance.

However, Grose and Henry called to Garside that they could not hold out any longer, and they were about to swim for the shore. Garside cautioned them to make for the lighthouse, but not heeding the advice, they headed for Hattrick's Point, and soon sank from exhaustion and the intense cold in the sight of several canoe loads of rescuers.

Saved Garside.

Mr. John Thompson, engineer of the Geneva, came to Garside's assistance, and saved him. Alderman Duncan, who was at his cottage, was an eye-witness of the tragedy, but was unable to render assistance.

Leaves Five Children.

W. R. Grose, who was employed at the Henry Hope Company, having lately left the employ of the C.G.E., leaves a wife and five small children, the oldest of whom is 10 years of age. He was 32 years of age, and a life-long resident of the city.

Jack Henry, who was unmarried, was a tool-maker at the Henry Hope Company. He was 22 years of age, and was the son of Mr. Thos. Henry of Brownton.

A big party of men are searching for the bodies to-day.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF THE G.W.V.A.

Full Attendance is Requested at the Armouries To-night

As many members as possible of the Great War Veterans' Association are urged to attend the general meeting to-night at 7.30 o'clock in the Recreation Room of the Armouries. With the recent developments in the political situation there are some important matters for the Veterans to discuss, and it is therefore essenial that the turnout to-night should be as large as possible. In addition to the political question there are other important matters to come before the meeting, including the Gardini concert and the formation of a Ladies' Auxiliary.

Members are asked to note that to-night's meeting will be at 7.30 o'clock sharp.

GASSED AND SHELL SHOCK.

Signaller Albert E. Thompson, formerly 93rd Battalion, 107 Hazlitt street.

PTE. ORLAND MORROW.

Mr. W. G. Morrow, 362 Water street, received official news from Ottawa this morning that his son, Pte. Orland James Morrow, was killed in action on Oct. 26th. Pte. Morrow was formerly employed in the Bank of Ottawa, here, and was transferred to Sudbury, where he enlisted with the 159th Battalion. He went overseas with that unit and was transferred to the 58th Battalion in France. Pte. Morrow's brother, Lieut. T. A. Morrow, is in France with the 4th Battalion, enlisting here as a private with the 39th Battalion. Another brother, Gunner A. M. Morrow went overseas with the 2nd Heavy Battery in the first contingent, and is now home after eighteen months' active service. The bereaved family will have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

PTE. PERCY LEMAY.

A telegram from Ottawa to-day conveyed the sad news that Pte. Percy Lemay, a well-known Lakefield boy, who was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, has been killed in action. Pte. Lemay went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was transferred to another unit in France. His wife, who was Miss Gertrude Yenney of Peterborough, is at present residing in this city with her father, Mr. H. A. Yenney.

PTE. EDGAR MOWREY.

Mrs. Fred Stinson, 357 Reid street, received word on Sunday that her brother, Private Edgar Mowrey, died of wounds in No. 44 Casualty Clearing Station, on November 3rd, the wounds being shrapnel in his leg.

Pte. Mowrey, who was 40 years of age, previous to leaving for the front, was employed at the C.G.E. He enlisted with the 39th in Peterborough, but was turned down medically unfit. He then enlisted in Toronto with the 35th, and was transferred to the 20th. He went overseas two years ago last month, and had been in the trenches for twenty months.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Richard Mowrey, 357 Reid Street, and three sisters, Mrs. Scrimmger, Hamilton, Mrs. Stinson, and Miss Mowrey, 319 Stewart street.

LIEUT G. R. STRICKLAND.

Mr. R. C. Strickland of the Burleigh Ranch, has received official news from Ottawa that Lieut. George Roper Strickland, previously reported wounded, is now officially reported to have died of wounds. The news of Lieut. Strickland's death will be received with deep regret by his many friends.

PTE. AUSTIN TOBIN.

Pte. Austin Tobin, formerly of the Machine Gun Section of the 93rd Battalion, who was reported wounded a few days ago, is now officially reported died of wounds. Pte Tobin, who was a son of Mr and Mrs. J. Tobin, River Road, was one of four brothers who enlisted in Peterborough and is the second one to make the supreme sacrifice, his brother, Pte. Joseph Tobin, formerly of the 59th Battalion, having met death in an earlier engagement. Another brother, Pte. Maurice Tobin, was wounded some time ago. The other remaining brother, Pte. Leo. Tobin, is still overseas. Pte. Austin Tobin was transferred from the 93rd Battalion to the 52nd. He is survived by a wife and child.

PTE. DANNY MAHER.

A telegram to Mrs. M. Maher, Peterborough, to-day, conveyed the sad intelligence that No. 409342 Pte Danny Maher, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported died of wounds in No. 8 Field Ambulance on Oct. 30th. Pte. Maher enlisted outside of this district.

LANCE CORP. W. H. TARGETT

Mrs. A. Targett, 544 Downie street, received official word from Ottawa today that her son, Lance Corp. William Herbert Targett, is reported admitted to No. 6 Field Ambulance depot, on November 3rd, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the right leg. Lance-Corp. Targett was formerly Quartermaster-Sergeant of B Company of the 93rd Battalion, and was transferred to France in a draft to the 4th Canadian Labour Battalion. Before the war he was a Sergeant in the 57th Regiment, Peterboro Rangers and was employed in the downtown store of the Matthews-Blackwell Company.

PTE. HAROLD LEBARR.

Mrs. Lewis Lebarr, Charlotte street, has received official news from France that her son, Pte. Harold Lebarr of the Mounted Rifles, and formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to No. 8 Field Ambulance on Oct. 30th, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the left leg. Pte. Lebarr was among the first recruits who enlisted here with Lieut.-Colonel Johnston's battalion, and after going overseas with the 93rd, in July, 1916, went to France in September of the same year, with one of the first drafts going to the 5th C.M.R. His father, Pte. Lewis Lebarr, also went over with the 93rd Battalion, and is now in France.

PTE. ROBT. BRUCE HARRISON.

Official word has been received in Lakefield that Pte. Robert Bruce Harrison, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was transferred in one of the early drafts to the 5th C.M.R., has been wounded. The message received stated that Pte. Harrison is suffering from a gun-shot wound in the arm.

Two Exemption Claims Were Disallowed at Tribunal Number 275 —Judgment Reserved in a Number of Cases.

LIST OF CASES

The two local exemption tribunals had a busy session this morning. At the Court House the Board sent two men up for further medical examination, reserved judgment in two cases, granted conditional exemption in another, and disallowed two exemptions, the net result being at least three men for the army. At the City Council Chamber the record differed somewhat, as no decisions were given. A large number of applicants were on hand at both tribunals.

Tribunal No. 275.

J. Klien, 51 Hunter street, a "C" 3 man, applied for exemption on the grounds of ill health and infirmity. Klien, who is a Hebrew, took the Jewish oath. Klien also informed the court that he had a store.

"The less you talk about that the better," said His Honour Judge Huycke. Klien produced a medical sheet signed by a Toronto Medical Board. He also said that he had been twice rejected.

To make the work of the local tribunal uniform, Klien was instructed to appear before a local Medical Board for examination.

Judgment Reserved.

James Alexander Stewart, an "A"2 man, claimed exemption on the ground that it was important for him to continue in his present occupation. Stewart is a farmer in Otonabee. The applicant works the farm with his father, who is sixty-seven years of age. The farm consists of one hundred acres and of this amount about seventy-five acres are devoted to hay and crop. The father is very much afflicted with rheumatism and is partially deaf.

"I don't suppose his hearing would effect his ability to milk a cow?" inquired Mr. Dumble. "If he had a little help in harvest time he could get along. He is just in his prime," added Mr. Dumble.

Stewart did not think his father would be able to get along even with a little hired help.

John Thorne, a neighbour, also an uncle of Stewart, said that Stewart's father was a broken down man.

Judge Huycke could not understand why only thirty acres of grain were raised on a hundred acre farm.

The applicant made a second estimate and brought the grain acreage up to forty-eight acres.

John Whitington was another witness who confirmed the statements of Mr. Thorne and the applicant. Whitington works a hundred acre farm himself and said he could produce twice as much grain if he could secure all the help he needed.

Judgment was reserved.

Judgment Reserved.

"I appear for my dear boy," said Mrs. Sarah Sedgewick, mother of Walter Sedgewick, aged 31 years, and a conductor on the Peterborough Street Railway, who resides at 438 Driscoll Terrace. The applicant, who is an "A"2 man, is the only son of a widowed mother.

"What wages do you get?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"About sixty dollars a month," replied the applicant.

"You would get more than that if you went to war observed Judge Huycke.

"Financially, I do not think the mother would suffer," said Mr. Dumble.

"There are very many mothers in the same position as yours," remarked Judge Huycke.

Judgment was reserved.

Conditional Exemption.

Bruce E. Marshall, an osteopathic physician, and an "A"2 man, applied for exemption on the ground that he

THE PARTY CONTEST.

According to present appearances the election contest in West Peterborough is to be a straight party fight. That is, the two candidates in the field are party candidates.

Mr. Hall is frankly the candidate of the Liberals, nominated at a mass meeting of Liberals. Mr. Burnham is the Conservative candidate, nominated two years ago, at a Conservative convention. At any rate he is not the recognized union government candidate, though he has strenuously claimed otherwise. The answer of Sir Robert Borden is specific on that point. In reply to inquiries made of him, Sir Robert Borden indicates whom will be recognized as a union government candidate. He says:

"If a convention under joint auspices of those supporting the Union Government is held the candidate selected at the convention will be recognized as the government candidate."

This means, as plainly as possible, that a candidate, not being the nominee of a joint convention, can not be recognized as a Union Government candidate. No joint convention has ben held, and no such candidate chosen; therefore, there is no Union candidate.

Mr. Burnham has simply nominated himself. The fact that he says he is in favour of the Union Government does not meet the conditions upon which a Union Government was formed or exists.

Mr. Burnham is the nominee of a party convention held two years before a Union Government was thought of; and stands for what the late government stood for. There is, if the Union Government can justify its name, no Borden government for the purposes of this election or this war; and, as a consequence, no Borden government candidate has any official standing, or standing by right, in relation to the Union Government.

If Mr. Burnham is as loyal to Sir Robert as he professes to be we would respect his wishes and reuiqrements. In his published address to the electors he says, himself, that he was chosen as the "candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his government." Sir Robert Borden and his government have no need of such a candidate; they are not appealing for support in this election, and, ipso facto, a candidate in their interests, chosen two years ago, hasn't any standing in this contest, unless the candidate holds the extraordinary theory that the Union Government is still the Borden government.

Mr. Burnham claims support as the Union candidate, which Sir Robert says he is not, and cannot be, unless he submits to the judgment of a joint convention and gets its nomination.

Of course he has a full right to be a candidate, but he should fight under his true colours and not under the unwarranter pretence that he is the recognized candidate of the Union government.

A Union Government, to be true to name, must be free from partisanship, if it is not it is a farce; partisanship must be as much eliminated in the spirit of its representative support as in its composition.

The only point upon which the people of Canada, of all sorts and conditions, all creeds and parties can agree is the overwhelming importance of the Victory Loan.

THE NEEDS OF THE TIME.

Mr. Hall, who received the Liberal nomination on Saturday, could not be seen since that time, as he had to leave the city on business. He will not return till Wednesday, when he will doubtless issue his address to the electors defining his position in relation to the momentous issues now confronting the country.

It is not known what his address will embrace, but it is evident that at this critical time a candidate seeking the confidence of the electors should stand for energetic war administration and removal of paralysing abuses.

It is obvious that the one great issue, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier said at Quebec, was the prosecution of this war. We must therefore have a Government that will steadfastly and comprehensively lead the people in the performance of the national duty, even at the cost of great sacrifices. A representative, to be true to his trust and the interests involved, should be prepared to support measures of war administration that promise effectiveness, no matter by what governing authorities proposed or organised.

We must obviously give prompt support to our armies in the field—with men, and what is as necessary, with adequate food. We should enlist all the resources of the country; and we must, above all, take measures to provide that the service enlisted must be equitably shared by all—by humble and high, by rich and poor.

As food for our armies and those of our Allies constitutes a more insistent demand than even reinforcements, the problem of increased production should be entered upon. The machinery for getting men is already provided and has only to be put into motion, but the problem of increased production in the interests of our armies, in the interests of effective contribution to war winning, as well as in the interests of the masses of our people, is not in any even approximately adequate sense being dealt with. The policy of avoiding waste and sparing food is only touching the fringe of the problem. Avoidance of waste and saving of food, if we do not have adequate food production to which to apply them, is like making bricks without straw.

Another problem, so far ineffectively dealt with, is the reduction of the high cost of living, which sours the temper of the people, creates a sense of injustice and lessens not only the popular enthusiasm in war participation, but lessens, by diverting to profiteering interests, the financial capacity of the people to respond with their resources to the one greatest and most pressing need. We need more money to help us provide munitions and finance food supplies, and we need more money to increase the pay of our soldiers, increase pensions and provide more liberally for the dependents of soldiers, and treat both with a generosity of practical recognition proportionate to their services and sacrifices.

In a word, any representative who would truly represent the people must firmly stand for vigorous and effective prosecution of the war in all its varied aspects. There must, above all, be honest expenditure of public money and assurances of the impossibility of renewal of the enormous waste of money and ineffective support of our fighting forces. There must be banishment of the political profiteer.

This is a war of regeneration; for a change of ideals applied to methods that will assure to the people the benfits of government fouded upon the principles of democracy, and conducted in the interests of every element of our population, and with regard of right and just relation of all our material interests, as well as personal rights.

It is a question whether Union Government has lessened or intensified the party spirit.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Church Women's Association of St. John's Church held their annual business meeting on Friday last when the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. (Dr.) Boucher.
Vice-President—Mrs. J. Miller.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. H. Stratton.
Secretary—Mrs. T. F. Phillips.
Executive Committee—Mrs. D. Mulholland, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Mrs. W. Sangster.
Convener of Red Cross Work—Mrs. C. L. Brewer.

It was proposed to hold a tea and sale of home-made cooking, to take place at the home of Mrs. J. A. Aylmer.

PTE. AUSTIN TOBIN, formerly of the 93rd Battalion machine gun section, who is officially reported died of wounds.

RUNAWAY YOUNGSTERS LOCATED

Mr. G. W. Powell, agent for the Children's Aid Society, has been successful in locating two youngsters, who, after being before the Juvenile Court, in Toronto, ran away from that city. Mr. Powell received word that they were on a farm in Smith Township, and after finding, notified Mr. J. J. Kelso, who sent an agent down on Saturday. One of the boys will be taken back and the other left on the farm, where he has been placed in a good home.

MRS. THOMAS COX BADLY INJURED

Mrs. Thomas Cox, R. R. No. 9, was painfully injured on Saturday night at 6.20, when an automobile crashed into the carriage in which she was driving.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox were driving east to cross the Hunter Street bridge, when a car going west tried to pass between their carriage and Cooney's express waggon, which was in the middle of the road. The car took a wheel off the carriage, and Mrs. Cox was thrown out. She was carried into the Quaker Oats office, and Dr. McNulty called. Mr. Cox rented another carriage and took his wife as far as Mr. Bob Anderson's house at Nassau, where Mrs. Cox's sufferings were so severe it was necessary for her to stop for the night. Her condition to-day shows some improvement. Besides sustaining severe injuries, Mrs. Cox lost her purse containing $16 and a Yale key, which the finder will kindly leave at the Examiner.

"The Honor System" To Be Seen Here

William Fox's Great Photoplay Melodrama Booked to Show in Peterborough.

THE FILM OF A THOUSAND THRILLS.

Gripping Picturization of Human Emotions is Verdict of Those Who Have Seen It.

William Fox will present soon in this city a film drama which has already come to be known as the pride of his studio. In the great and mighty study of American life, "The Honour System," directed by R. A. Walsh, all of the artistic, scientific and psychological knowledge of film production which this pioneer producer has he has put ungrudgingly into this majestic story of the suffering human soul.

Not a Dramatized Sermon.

And there is a psychology of the photoplay. The late Prof. Hugo Munsterberg, of Harvard, wrote and printed 230 thinking, moving pages to prove it. He says, "The truly upbuilding photoplay is not a dramatized sermon on morality and religion." And Mr. Fox adds: "Your are right, Professor, and in this film drama, 'The Honour System,' Mr. Walsh and all of us are not preaching a sermon. We are telling the greatest human story of life as it has really been lived, and we are offering our public a film, not a fad. But through it all there creeps out the truth, and it cannot be denied that the greatest human endeavour is the Divine attribute to rebuilding a human soul."

This wonderful human interest photo-play comes to the Grand Theatre for 2 days, commencing Friday next, Nov. 16th. There will be a daily matinee at 2.30.

MR. R. R. HALL NAMED AS LIBERAL CANDIDATE AT THE SATURDAY MEETING HERE

At the mass meeting of Liberals in Victoria Hall on Saturday afternoon there was an attendance of about three hundred eectors and the result was the nomination of Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., as the Liberal candidate.

A resolution presented by Mr. Jos. Wearing and Mr. R. Harstone to adjourn the meeting with the object of arranging a meeting of the respective executives of the Liberal and Conservative Associations, was supported by brief speeches by these gentlemen and opposed by Mr. Hall, who said that Sir Robert Borden's record did not justify confidence in him as head of the Union Government, which left him the same man who had winked at gross abuses in war administration.

The motion was put, but failed of majority support.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was also nominated, but after regretting that Labour interests were not represented in the Union Government, he declined the nomination.

After Mr. Hall's nomination on Mr. A. McFarlane's motion, a resolution calling for the appointment of a Liberal committee to confer with a Conservative committee with a view to arranging a union meeting was moved by Mr. Joseph Wearing, seconded by Mr. Robert Harstone. Mr. Wearing's reasons for proposing the resolution have already been published.

Mr. Robert Harstone said that in seconding the resolution calling for a joint convention, he felt that such a course was necessary to facilitate a conference with representatives of the Conservative party. "Let us get together and extend them the hand of fellowship," said Mr. Hartley.

Mr. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. Hartley then called on Mr. G. N. Gordon for a few words. "It has been said that a man nominated at this meeting must be a straight Laurier Liberal," said Mr. Gordon. Continuing, he said that the man nominated by the meeting might be a Laurier Liberal or any other kind of a Liberal. "One thing is certain, and that is this meeting cannot nominate a Union candidate. Mr. J. H. Burnham claims to be the Union candidate, the Conscription candidate and every other kind of a candidate. Personally, I am standing to-day on the platform of the Independent Labour Party. I am not only in favour of Conscription of man power, but also conscription of wealth."

"What department of the great labour question are you affiliated with?" inquired Mr. A. McFarlane.

"Not the capitalistic class anyway," was Mr. Gordon's rejoinder.

Mr. Hall's Criticism of Government.

Mr. R. R. Hall opened his address with a resume of the progress made by Germany in the world war, in which he emphasised the necessity of doing all that was possible to bring the conflict to a successful conclusion. He referred to Sir Robert Borden's apparent inability to cope with the situation and the increasing prevalence of graft at the expense of the nation. The war between Russia and Japan some years ago was won by the smaller of the two nations because of the existence of graft that nullified the efforts of the military powers of the Slavic empire. Defective footwear, the Ross rifle, and the trial of Wesley Allison were characterised by Mr. Hall as concrete evidence of the unworthiness and of the passive toleration of Premier Borden.

"The people of Canada have a right to know these things and not have them smothered up in a Union convention," said Mr. Hall.

The speaker produced a letter written by Sir Sam Hughes to Premier Borden in which the former Minister of Militia took exception to the interference of the sub-committee in the matter of awarding contracts for military equipment. As a result, a number of Canadian units were compelled to go overseas only partially equipped. This, Mr. Hall claimed could easily have been remedied by Premier Borden himself. "If ever the country needed competent, self sacrificing men it is now," said the speaker, who stated that there would hardly be a constituency in the country that would not have a Liberal candidate.

"Hugh Guthrie," said Mr. Hall "became a supporter of the Union Government by questionable means so I am informed. N. W. Rowell left his colleagues in the Ontario House without even as much as a good-bye. I don't believe that there is one man in five thousand, whether he be English, Irish, Scots, or French, who is not anxious to win the war. If I were elected a member of the House of Commons I would vote with any body of men whose prime object was to win the war. I would also go in for the reduction of the high cost of living, the conscription of wealth, and do all within my power to bring the profiteer to justice. The high cost of living cannot be reduced by eating less, as Hanna advises. Has this Government taken one single action to stimulate the production of foodstuffs which is so much required by the Allies? Ten thousand men properly equipped could bring from the idle lands in the North-West Provinces twenty-five million bushels of grain. No concerted action has been taken to produce grain on a large scale. There has been a lot of talk, but nothing done. The high cost of living is caused by this lack of production.

In the Interest of Liberalism.

Speaking of the motion a second time, Mr. Harstone urged that it was in the interest of Liberalism not to proceed further until an effort was made to hold a Union conference.

"Many Conservatives want to meet us," he said, 'and we should defer action until we have tried to meet them. Whatever Borden has done should not be threshed out now. Our main duty is to go on with the war. If I have a certain work to do, but first go out to fight a fellow I may not come back." Mr. Harstone added as an illustration to emphasize his appeal for Union.

Mr. Wearing—If Mr. Hall is nominated he will not support Borden. He has denounced Union government and will be forced behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Hall replied that this was a time when the country wanted a strong spirit of independence in its representatives.

Mr. Hartley called for the vote on Mr. Wearing's motion, which was defeated by a large majority. Among those in favour of it were Messrs. Wearing, Harstone, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., G. Walter Green, Robert Hicks, G. O. Cameron, B. D. Hall, G. R. Munro, Mayor Duffus, G. N. Gordon and other Liberals.

Mr. Gordon Nominated.

The convention resumed its proceedings of nomination. Mr. G. N. Gordon's name was submitted by Mr. Thos. Grimison, seconded by Mr. R. Walker.

When no other candidates were proposed, Mr. Hartley called on Mr. Gordon and Mr. Hall to address the convention. Speaking first, Mr. Gordon said the time had come for organized Labour to take its part in the administration of the country and in the development of its natural resources. It wasn't necessary to be a labouring man to belong to and believe in the principles of the Independent Labour party of Ontario, of whose platform he was a supporter. Its principles he enumerated as follows: Free and compulsory education, the nationalization of the banking and credit systems; direct legislation, the abolition of property qualifications for municipal offices, the abolition of election deposits, the abolition of the Canadian Senate; adequate pensions to all soldiers; pensions for mothers with dependent children, old age pensions.

Direct legislation, Mr. Gordon said, would provide for the recall of a representative who betrayed the people as in the C.N.R. deal. Adequate pensions would give as much to the private soldier as to the officer.

Of the old age pension scheme, Mr. Gordon said, "Ham Burnham has been sitting on it for six years but hasn't hatched the egg.

"I have no quarrel with Capital," Mr. Gordon continued. "I believe Capital and Labour should work in harmony. I don't want the nomination from a Liberal convention as a Liberal candidate. If there is a man nominated on the Labour platform I will not contest with him. I don't want to ask a Liberal convention to nominate me to support the Liberal platform."

Mr. Gordon stated that of the two political parties, the Liberals had been the more faithful to the interests of Labour, but he felt there was not the sympathy between Labour and Liberalism that there should be. "Hence this is a justification for a Labour party," he said, "and I feel certain it will have a representative in the next House that will surprise every man in this room."

"The profiteers led an assault on the Liberals in 1911. As Gadsby said in the Review, Sir Joseph Flavelle gave a cold million dollars to the Conservative fund, but has been getting it back four times over. With pork at 14 cents becoming bacon at 44 cents that looks like it."

Mr. Gordon stated that he favoured the conscription of men and wealth also for the winning of the war. Sir Robert had expressed the wish that the two parties get together in Peterborough. His telegram had overlooked Labour, and in this industrial city the majority of the electors were toilers. But they were not represented in either party and apparently ignored in the deal for Union. And seven-eighths of the soldiers were recruited from the ranks of labour.

"We don't want profiteers building million dollar houses in war time, and Flavelle making three millions out of bacon. Let us give the soldiers, the postmen and other workers a decent wage and at the same time carry this war to a definite and successful conclusion."

Mr. Hall's Address.

"Labouring men should be cut adrift from political parties," Mr. Hall said in his nomination address, "and observe which party comes nearest to carrying out the principles for which Labour contends. I agree that sometimes there has been effective work done by a Labour man in the field. The working man does his own thinking, not as a Liberal or Conservative. I venture to say that, if there is no Labour man in the field, that many will vote for me in this election. If elected I will fight the grafter and profiteer tooth and nail. As far as men like Sir Joseph Flavelle are concerned I will work for conditions whereby the money of the wives and children of soldiers is not robbed from their table."

Mr. Hall pointed out that Sir Thomas White was with the Union government. It was he who put over the sixty million C.N.R. deal, and gave ten millions for the Saginaw railway in Quebec for the benefit of hangers-on of the government. The C.N.R. remains behind Borden in this election and the Toronto Globe and the Star are suppressing the reports of political events.

"We have a national debt of one billion dollars already, and Ontario's assessed wealth is only two billions. No one begrudges the expenditure of money for war purposes, but when so much of the public money goes to profiteers it is time to do some thinking on our own account."

"I am absolutely at your service. If I commend myself to the people of West Peterborough I will regard it as a great honour. I will do my duty in the prosecution of the war, and as I did before in your interests, honestly and faithfully. No more was done in any four years by any one who ever represented you in the House of Commons than during my term as member."

Declared Candidate.

When Mr. Gordon was directly asked by Mr. Hartley if he declined to be a candidate, he nodded an affirmative, and Mr. Hall was declared the unanimous nominee of the party.

"I have always been for Labour, and no candidate will get any support unless he stands for Labour. This convention doesn't debar a Labour convention bringing out a man if it decides to do so."

The meeting closed with three cheers for the King, Mr. Hall and Mr. Gordon.

was supporting a widowed mother.

"Don't they need you in the army?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"In Canada they haven't given us any chance," said the applicant.

The applicant was given until the first of March to wind up his affairs and the Board will recommend that the applicant be used, if possible, in his professional capacities as an osteopathic physician.

Further Examination.

Frederick Goodfellow, a "B" 2 man has been rejected on three previous occasions. The applicant has one brother in France. Goodfellow's medical sheet showed that he had been examined in Toronto. The applicant was ordered to be examined by the local Medical Board.

Exemption Disallowed.

David Weatherstone, 120 Hilliard street, an employee of the Auburn Woollen Mills, claimed exemption on the grounds that his services were necessary at the mills and also on account of domestic position. The applicant has three married brothers residing in the city.

Both Judge Huycke and Mr. Dumble were of the opinion that the married brothers should help to support their aged parents.

"Those brothers had better turn in and do something and leave you free to protect them and their country," said Judge Huycke.

"The family should be represented," observed Lieut.-Col. Clegg.

The exemption was disallowed.

Claim Disallowed.

Frederick Rappe, an "A" 2 man, and a chauffeur by occupation, was the next applicant. "Rappe's father is a paralytic and his mother is also dependent upon the applicant for support. In closing his appeal for exemption, Rappe said that in event of the exemption being disallowed, he would prefer to enter the transport service, where his practical knowledge of cars would be of service.

The exemption was disallowed, and Rappe will be recommended for a place in the mechanical transport service.

Turks Are Organizing For Defence

(Canadian Press Despatch).

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The Turkish troops which have been retreating before the British advance in Southern Palestine are organizing for defence in the vicinity of Hebron, about 20 miles south-west of Jerusalem, says an official statement to-day. British mounted troops are continuing to push forward in some sectors.

PTE. HARRY DOLEMAN.

Word was received to-day that Pte. Harry Doleman, of the Mounted Rifles, has been admitted to No. 8 Field Ambulance, suffering from a gunshot wound in the left eye. Pte. Doleman enlisted with the 93rd Battalion here.

Pte. Doleman's wife lives at 44 Lafayette avenue. The official message states that he is suffering from a gunshot wound in the left thigh. He went to France in one of the first drafts from the 93rd.

SIGNALLER A. E. THOMPSON.

Mrs. H. Thompson, 107 Hazlett street, received official news from Ottawa this morning that her son, Signaller Albert E. Thompson, is officially reported gassed and suffering from shell shock. Signaller Thompson enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas a member of the Signal Section, afterwards being transferred to another unit in France.

Returned men wishing to take up instruction in trades or occupations will note that the officer in charge will be in the city on Wednesday, Nov 14th, and may be consulted at the Patriotic Fund room, or at the Empress Hotel. Ask for Major Good, Vocational Officer.

Information of value is awaiting Pte. James N. McGee. No. 820601, who enlisted from Peterborough in the 141st Overseas Battalion.

If he or friends will communicate with Mr. Dobbin, at the Patriotic Fund Office, the information will be of service.

"OLIVET TO CALVARY" TO BE PRESENTED

The presentation of a choral work new to this city, viz.: Maunder's "Olivet to Calvary," was announced to take place in St. John's Church on the evening of Nov. 30th, the festival of St. Andrew. The high standing of St. John's choir among voluntary choirs in Canada, ensures a thoroughly good performance, under the skilful leadership of Mr. R. J. Deves, who has been responsible for the production of many standard choral works in Peterborough during the last ten years.

To the Electors of West Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM,

Pte. Wilson Wounded In Bombing Raid

Former 93rd Man Not Seriously Hurt Writes a Comrade

Mrs. H. C. Wilson, 63 McGill street, has received the following letter telling how her husband, Pte. Harry C. Wilson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was wounded.

France, Monday, Oct. 13th.

Dear Friend,—I regret to have to tell you Harry got wounded in a bombing raid yesterday, but as far as

PTE. H. C. WILSON
Formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

I know he is not dangerous, but was taken to the hospital. I did not see him after he was hit, although we were only a short distance apart when the bomb lit, but as we were both stretcher bearers it was our duty to make for the first one we saw needing help, and while I was engaged with another he was dressed and taken to the dressing station before I saw him or knew that he was hit. I inquired from the fellows who took care of him and they say he is not serious, but was joking and laughing with them.

I am trying to see after his belongings and have them sent to him as we have worked side by side since we struck France and were very fast friends, so you may be sure I miss him, as 93rd men are getting scarce around here.

I hope this will [illegible] you. It will likely send him back to Canada if it is not worse than I hear spoken of. I will write Harry as soon as possible. I remain,

Yours sincerely,
PTE. DAVID MILLER,
193681, No. 4 Co., 1st Canadian Labour Battalion, B. E. F., France.

MISSIONARY SUNDAY IN METHODIST CHURCHES

Splendid Addresses Given to Large Congregations.--Rev. J. J. Saundby, Recently Returned From Japan, Spoke at George Street Church.

CHRISTIAN DEVELOPMENT

Yesterday was Missionary Sunday and splendid addresses were given by Rev. J. H. Arnup, Missionary Secretary, Mr. C. E. Weeks, B.A., of Lindsay, and Rev. J. J. Saundby, B.A. There were large attendances at all services throughout the day.

An address of special interest was given last evening in George Street Methodist Church by the Rev. J. W. Saunby, B.A. The speaker, who has spent many years in the Mission Field of Japan, in the interests of the Methodist Church, gave an interesting account of the development and extension of Christian endeavour in this land of the Rising Sun.

It is many years since the Government of Japan opened the door of that country to the missionary. In the words of the speaker, the man who is born into the Church constitutes one of the glories of Christianity and it is this type of men who are making a name for themselves in the mission fields of Japan. A desire for knowledge, especially in the form of literature is a characteristic of the Japanese people, and it is this fact that simplifies the work of the missionary more than anything else, and contributes to the ever-growing army of workers. The speaker related an incident which happened many years ago, when two British warships put into a Japanese harbour for supplies. By order of the Japanese authorities, communication between the Japanese people and the ships was prohibited. The official who was authorized to carry out this order, discovered floating on the water a book, which turned out to be a copy of the New Testament. This official secured possession of the Gospel and, despite the prohibitory law which existed in the country at that time against all Christian teachings and gospel works, succeeded in having it translated, and he subsequently became a convert together with a number of his associates. From this small beginning sprang into existence a handful of converts who were inspired with a desire to spread the gospel which they believed in. In due time the Government abandoned the hope of forever prohibiting the circulation of the gospel, and once the door was opened it was not long until a great work was in the making.

The Rev. Mr. Saunby narrated what he characterized as several links in the chain of events that brought about this result. The speaker also referred to the excellent work that is being carried on by the laymen, chief among them being a man who is second in command of the strongly established Salvation Army movement in Japan. This particular layman is a native of Japan and is designated Lieutenant Colonel, and in this capacity adequately fills the highest office in that particular line of endeavour. All orphanages and philanthropic institutions, also the Salvation Army Corps, receive large subsidies from the Japanese Government in recognition of their services to the country.

A millionaire banker of Tokio, who was converted when he was eighty years of age, is devoting the remainder of his life to the extension of a Christian work, and he has endowed a chair in the Imperial University for the propagation of Christian teachings. Another prominent worker is a woman who became a convert after she was seventy years old; she was the owner of a Bank and is considered one of the Rockefellers of Japan.

A third worker whom the speaker mentioned was once a notorious pickpocket, with a record of sixteen years imprisonment. So impressed was the Japanese Government with the Christian work performed by this man that he was re-enfranchised and his criminal record was obliterated from the police records of the various cities in which he was convicted.

To-morrow night the speaker will give an address in George Street Church, and will also show a number of illustrations, consisting of slides made by the Japanese.

Madame Gardini To Sing Here Under The Auspices of G.W.V.A.

It is with pleasure that the Examiner announces that Mme. Nelli Gardini, the famous singer, has been secured for one concert in Peterborough, appearing at the Grand Opera House on the evening of 24th November for the benefit of the Great War Veterans' Association.

Mme. Nelli Gardini, the eminent French prima donna, who will be pleasantly remembered as the bright particular star of the Boston Grand Opera Company upon its tour through Canada last season, has just returned from a successful concert tour of the capitols of South America, giving the money received to the French Red Cross, thus relieving the suffering of thousands of our brave soldiers overseas. Mme. Gardini will give twelve concerts for the Returned Veterans' Associations and Daughters of the Empire before the commencemnt of her season at the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York City.

Assisting Mme. Gardini at the piano is that well-known American pianist, Mr. Frederick C. Frein, who was selected by the great Paderewski to finish the piano engagements of his tour in America last season, when he was appointed Superintendent of the Polish Red Cross funds. Mr. Frein is numbered among the most popular artistes appearing in concert in America this season.

Remember the date, 24th November, at the Grand Opera House, for the benefit of the Great War Veterans' Association. Tickets should be secured at once, as large delegations of music lovers from our neighbouring towns are preparing to be present and to enjoy the opportunity of hearing these two great artistes upon this occasion.

The War Veterans will seek the assistance of the Daughters of the Empire, Kitchener League, and other organisations in making the visit of Madame Gardini the musical event of the season.

To-day marks the opening of the engagement of "The Fall of the Romanoffs" at the Opera House for a 3 days' run. This is a motion picture which tells vividly the inside story of the Russian revolution and events leading up to it. It is a Brenon production, and is without question the best work that this master producer has ever made. It shows how Russia was betrayed by the rascal Rasputin, how he tried to influence the Czar into accepting a separate peace with Germany. It reveals the relationship between the German Emperor and the Czar, and the activities of the pro-German Czarina. It takes one into the secrets of the court of Russia, with its seething mass of intrigue and graft, and tells how that great country was being sucked dry by the hangers-on. It shows Rasputin holding sway, and explains why Russia would forge ahead and then fall back and answers the question, "What is Russia Doing?"

EXPERIMENTAL FARMS AND THEIR WORK

For the convenience of specialists, farmers and others interested in the different lines of agriculture dealt with in the three-vol. annual report of the Dominion Experimental Farm the several subjects have been issued in separate pamphlet form. These include the reports of the Dominion Animal Husbandman, of the Dominion Cerealist, of the Dominion Horticulturist, of the Supervisor of Illustration Stations, of the Dominion Tobacco Husbandman. Any of these reports can be had on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Resolution For Union At Saturday Liberal Meeting

The Unionist sentiment at Saturday's Liberal meeting was expressed in the following resolution, moved by Mr. Joseph Wearing, seconded by Mr. Robert Harstone:

Whereas, this convention of Liberals is assembled here for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the coming Federal election,

And whereas, a union non-partizan, win-the-war Government has been formed for the purpose of carrying on the war, so far as this country is concerned,

And whereas, the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, has given the assurance that a candidate nominated by a union convention of Liberals and Conservatives, supporting the Union Govgrnment, will be recognized as the Government candidate:

It is therefore moved by Joseph Wearing, seconded by Robert Harstone, that this convention appoint a committee consisting of the executive of the Liberal Association, for the purpose of conferring with the executive of the Conservative Association with a view of calling a Union convention in this riding and that this convention stand adjourned to await the result of the Union convention.

Appeal For Victory Loan In All Three Catholic Churches

The Victory Loan was strongly recommended to the Catholic people of the city yesterday in all three churches. At St. Peter's Cathedral, His Lordship O'Brien spoke of the opportunity afforded of participating in a patriotic duty, and at the same time sharing in a safe investment. Referring to the Military Service Act, he expressed the hope that all the men designated for service would abide by the decisions of the authorities and perform their duty manfully and in the right spirit. His Lordship also appealed to parents at this time of extreme crisis.

Girlish Coats That Are Smart as They can be and Remain Moderately Priced

OUR CHILDREN'S department is comprehensive in its scope. It will outfit the child from babyhood, until the time when she is near her twenties, and then she passes out to the misses' section.
We have contented ourselves with the mention of a few of our coats that have been selected from a complete assortment.

COAT OF PRUNE coloured blanket cloth for the girl of 15 years; has wide belt with two nickle buckles at back and metal buttons on collar and sleeves; has large collar and patch pockets. Price $11.75

FOR THE GIRL of 12 years we recommend this wide coloured velvet. The material has a deep close pile; large collar edged with black fur and black velvet buttons on sleeves and front. Price $15.00

BROWN is usually becoming to the girl who has reached her twelfth birthday, and this coat of niggar brown whitney will justify this statement. Needless to say, it is belted; a large plush collar buttons close around the neck, and in all is a snug, comfortable garment. Price $12.95
The same model is obtainable in grey.

A COAT for the girl of six years. Navy blue curl cloth with smoked pearl button trimming. The collar is edged with navy velvet. Lined throughout with black and white shepherd check. Price $5.75

THIS COAT of brown chinchilla has been made expressly for the child of six years. It is a clear shade of brown in a medium colour, with a smart belt of same encircling the waist and trimmed with brass buttons; lined throughout with black and white shepherd check. Price..... $5.00

IMPORTANT REGULATIONS REGARDING COAL BUSINESS

Customer May Have to Sign a Statement That Coal He is Ordering Added to the Quantity He Has on Hand Will Not Exceed the Supply Permitted Under the Regulations.

The issue of the Canada Gazette for date of October 31st, contains the new regulations concerning the buying, selling and delivery of coal, throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The regulations are of especial interest to the public, inasmuch as they provide for the business of selling coal, maximum prices therefor, conditions on which such business may be carried on and also for such action as may be required to meet any emergency likely to arise during the coming winter season.

These regulations apply more particularly to all months of the year, with some exceptions to prevail during the months 1st of April to 1st September.

Ample regulation is made for the mining, selling by brokers and wholesale dealers, and legitimate charges in connection therewith, and those regulations can be consulted by those interested in such branches of trade. But what especially interests the consumer is the regulations made for his protection and to ensure as far as possible an equal distribution of coal during the winter months. These regulations are summarized, as follows:

The maximum price of coal shall be the average cost delivered to the dealer, plus a reasonable proportion of overhead expenses and fixed charges and a profit of fifty cents per ton. This price remains steady during the month in which it has been fixed.

Subject to contracts existing at date of these regulations no one shall sell or deliver to a consumer any quantity of coal, which added to the quantity of coal which the consumer may have on hand would constitute more than an estimated supply sufficient for the consumer's needs for two months.

Certain industries and occupations are relieved from the enforcement of this clause, as to its conditions, but with the exception of public institutions, such as hospitals, etc., the maximum amount to be taken in by any one house or residence, between April 1st and Sept. 1st, shall not exceed three tons. This clause it would seem would effectually prevent for the future getting into store any large amount of coal, to the detriment of other users.

Any broker or dealer, (the dealer is one who sells to the consumer as well as one who sells wholesale), may require the customer to sign a statement in the following terms:

"I, ..., hereby certify that the quantity of coal for which I now apply, added to the quantity which I have on hand at the present time, will not exceed the supply which I am permitted to have under the above regulations."

No leader shall be allowed to deliver more than the minimum amount of coal called for by any arrangement or contract, until he has met the reasonable requirements of others desiring to purchase coal from him. This provision does not apply to public institutions, etc.

Should any emergency arise in a community, whereby the available supply of coal in the hands of dealers be not sufficient to meet the needs of such emergency, the Fuel Controller may requisition any quantity of coal in the possession of any consumer, in excess of supply as indicated for period as above noted in preceding paragraphs, and may direct the disposal of such excess coal.

The significance of this regulation is seen when it is found that not only may coal be taken from those who have an excess supply, such as two years' fuel, but even those who have what might be termed a winter's supply, may have to give up the coal in the cellar, leaving only two, or at the most, three tons. Due regard is paid to the matter of compensating any one whose coal has been taken, and at the current market rates. But persons benefitted by getting the coal will have to pay, in addition to the cost of the coal, the costs of re-delivery and 25 cents per ton in addition. And in addition seven per cent. interest on the value of the coal while it has been in the bin of the customer who first purchased the coal.

For the information of the Fuel Controller, in carrying out the provisions of the new regulations the Mayor, Warden, Reeve or Overseer of any municipality may be required,

To cause an immediate investigation to be made into any application for the requisitioning of coal:—

To submit to the Fuel Controller recommendations with regard to any matter connected therewith:—

To certify, whether or not, in his opinion an emergency justifying requisition of coal exists.—

To fix the value of any coal requisitioned in case the parties concerned cannot agree, and Generally to act as the agent of the Fuel Controller for any such purposes.

With regard to ascertaining just what coal has been brought to a municipality, and delivered to persons or firms, should such information be needed, the following provision would seem to be full and ample—

The Fuel Controller, or his duly authorized agent, shall have access to all books, records, documents, and papers of any kind dealing with and relating directly or indirectly to the business and affairs of any person producing or buying or selling or otherwise dealing in coal, or of any person importing coal, and all persons shall supply the Fuel Controller, or his agent, with all information as and when required by the said Fuel Controller or his agent. Any person failing or declining for a period of thirty days to give any information demanded shall be guilty of an offence and subject to penalties.

Further regulations are made as to procedure. And as bearing on infractions of the regulations in specific or assumed cases. No information shall be laid against any dealer or broker without first submitting the facts to the Fuel Controller and obtaining his consent in writing. The regulations shall be in force from the 1st day of November, 1917.

Sixty Local Men Ready When Needed

Waived Their Claims For Exemption—895 Others However Will Be Dealt With by the Tribunals

The total registrations at the Peterborough post office, under the Military Service Act numbered 955. When the time limit set for registering came to a close on Saturday night it was found that sixty Peterborough Class One men had waived their claims to exemption and signified that they were ready to serve whenever the country calls upon them.

On the other hand 895 others have filed claims for exemption. Many of these, of course, were men who have been placed in B, C and E categories by the Medical Board and who will be practically automatically exempted by the Tribunals until their respective categories are called.

The World's Week of Prayer

The World's Week of Prayer. Topic for Monday, Nov. 12, "Man's Resistence to God's Purpose for the Nations."

Jonah, 1-4. The Elder Brother of the Old Testament. The most vivid picture of the struggle within the Jewish nation of the spirit of exclusiveness and the catholic spirit. Note the contrast between (1) the generosity of the heathen and their responsiveness to the light they received (1, 5, 6:12-14; 3, 4-9) and the grudging unwillingness of Jonah to see any good thing come to them (IV, 2, 3.); (2) God's love of the nations and the prophet's love of himself.

The countries to be remembered in prayer to-day are:

Africa.— The Young Women's Christian Association in South Africa asks that we join with them in praise for every token of the good hand of our God having been upon us through a year of extraordinary difficulty; for a new building in course of erection at Johannesburg; for a property secured by the Capetown Branch which will be opened this year as a seaside holiday home; for the training centre for workers which will be established at the Cape within the next two or three months. Prayer that more may rest upon the training centre, and that it may attract young women from South Africa to offer themselves for Association work; that we as workers may know how to lay hold of all needed equipment which God has provided for those who would be His channels of life and power to others, and that in all methods of work we may be kept in line with His will.

Egypt.— Praise for the coming of Miss Grace Saunders, that a suitable permanent house has been bought in a central position in Cairo; for guidance and encouragement in opening a campaign for £6,000 to pay off the debt on the house; for further enlargements of Victoria House in Alexandria; for extension of work among school girls. Prayer for more spiritual life in the branches; for guidance in dealing with many nationalities; for blessing on the new house in Cairo, and that the whole debt be paid off before Christmas; for a secretary for Alexandria, an assistant secretary for Cairo, and a travelling secretary for student work in Egypt; for funds to start a magazine for the girls of the country.

Nairobi.—Praise for blessing on the Association; for sympathy and financial support given by residents of the city. Prayer for still more help in the future, for the secretary, committee and members; for funds to open the new building free of debt.

Let us pray also for work for girls in Tunis, Algiers, Mambasa, Onitsha, Abeobuta, Lagos.

Engineers' Club Dinner

The Engineers' Club met for dinner at the Empress Hotel on Saturday evening, and afterwards listened to a most interesting and well prepared paper by Mr. G. R. Mrs. W. Coulthard, Water street, has been visiting Mrs. (Rev.) Gay, Toronto.

Pte. B. M. Shelton has returned to Toronto, after having spent the week-end in town, visiting his parents.

The Misses Mabel Patterson, Jessie Cressman, Irene Scott and Helen MacLaren, the "Overall Club," augmented the splendid success of their labours as the "Overall Farm," by which the sale of the vegetables they grew, realized $54, by a tea on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, 487 Hunter street. The tea, which was novel and appropriate in every respect to the idea of the Club, will long be remembered by the three hundred who attended. The table decorations of a large red cross, extending the length of the table, and a small auto loaded with vegetables, and four elves, rake in hand, were most fascinating, likewise the costumes of the young hostesses, who, discarding all feminine fripperies, wore their working garbs of overalls. Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Patterson poured tea, and Mrs. MacDiarmid, Mrs. Cressman, Mrs. Adam Hall, Mrs. Denham, Mrs. Brodigan, and Mrs. Gillman assisted. Vocal solos by Mrs. King, Miss MacLaren, and Miss Florence Scott, and a piano solo by Miss Agnes Logan were greatly enjoyed. $50.00 was presented by Mrs. Patterson to Mrs. Matthews for Red Cross, and the $72 realized by the tea go the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., for the support of prisoners of war.

Peterborough Aroused To The Victory Loan By Chorus Of City's Whistles And Bells

The Victory Loan sounded its appeal to Peterborough this morning in a clangorous chorus of factory whistles, church bells, and the long shrill calls of railway engines in the local yards. As a demonstration, it carried far into the country announcing to the farmer intent upon his late ploughing, the workman at his bench, and the women busy at their work, their children just off to school, that this city is expected to subscribe $750,000 to the new Canadian war loan, and that the rural section of the county is allotted $200,000. Farmers called up city officials wondering what message the bells and the whistles were rolling out across the city.

"We thought it was some big victory," a North Monaghan man said. He was somewhat disappointed, but quickly replied, "The Victory Loan will help anyway."

The mingling, strident tones that greeted the nine o'clock "zero hour" of the Victory Loan made an impressive discord, perhaps, but their liet motif, if there was one, was a strong undercurrent of harmony exhorting the people to accept their share of the new loan. All the churches of the city have recommended the new bonds to their congregations as good investment and a patriotic duty; the financial houses have turned their best salesmen over to the Government to act as organisers throughout the country; the banks, the press, and on all sides here has been unanimity and the close co-operation that presages a splendid contribution from Peterborough County.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, the chairman of the County Committee, gathered his workers about him this morning for final instructions, and by ten o'clock the whole corps was working.

Messrs. Bruce Johnston and Fred Stinson, of Monaghan, were in, and also Mr. T. Braden, of Douro.

Each man received one of the new Loan buttons, and a special "carryall," or cardboard satchel, containing various information that is usually termed literature.

Citizens are requested to make their contributions through the committee in order that this county may get credit for every dollar subscribed here.

Norwood Is Optimistic.

Norwood has sent an exceedingly optimistic report to County headquarters. Mr. J. L. Squire, in a letter Mr. Warren received to-day, states that he has already received several thousand dollars, and the prospect is so bright that a public meeting may be considered unnecessary.

The Norwood committee is composed of Messrs. J. F. Elliott, E. C. Squire and Reeve B. W. Squire. They will canvass the village of Norwood and the Township of Asphodel.

Most Critical Time in The World's History

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 12.— President Wilson to-day delivered a message to the workmen of the United States and Canada in an address before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labour. His entrance to the convention hall was the signal for a tremendous outburst of cheering from the six thousand persons assembled to hear him. Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation in introducing Mr. Wilson, referred to him as "This man of destiny, spokesman for freedom, interpreter of the aims and spirit of our time, leader of thoughts and action among the nations of the earth." President Wilson referred to the present as a time more critical than the world has yet known. He said the war was started by Germany. "Her authorities deny it, but I am willing to await the verdict of history on the statement I have just made."

A CALL FOR MR. HANNA.

"I think," observed a broker mournfully, as he gased at the board when stocks were at their weakest, "that we'll have to get Hon. W. J. Hanna to take a hand in this. I notice that every time he takes hold of anything to control its price it immediately goes up. It's happened with potatoes and bacon and all sorts of things like that. Why wouldn't it work the same way with stocks?" And his hearers agreed that it could not hurt to make the experiment, anyway.

Wire At Hill 70 Cost British $2,800,000

But Germans Lost the Position, and Glorious Page Added to Union Jack History—Destruction of Entanglements Was a Costly Affair

SHELL HOLE WARFARE

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Stewart Lyon, late Canadian War Correspondent at the front, was the guest of the Canadian Club at luncheon yesterday at St. James' Parish Room, and spoke to one of the largest audiences that had ever assembled in the history of the club. In addition to the members at luncheon, who filled every available seat, a large audience assembled in the gallery to hear the address an hour before the time of speaking. Mr. Lyon received a great ovation, and spent the short time at his disposal in a detailed description with the aid of maps of Canadian operations at Hill 70, with the object of extolling the fine initiative, resource and courage of the Canadian army. He spoke in terms of praise of the work of Col. Mitchell, the chief of the Intelligence Department of the 2nd Canadian Army. The thoroughness of that organization, he said, had made possible the splendid success of the advance on September 20 as compared with that on July 21st. No greater service had been done than that of sending Col. Mitchell to modernize the intelligence department of the 2nd Army.

In describing the operations at Hill 70, Mr Lyon said that the hill was protected by an elaborate system of barbed wire entanglements. It was the strongest defence line of the German frame. The problem was to sweep away the wire by gun fire. For weeks, day by day, hundreds of guns pounded away to get rid of the wire and day by day aeroplanes went over and recorded progress by means of photographs taken in the air at a height of 7,000 feet. These photographs were examined under a microscope and by the detection of a series of minute dots on the prints the Intelligence Department was able to find out the movements of the enemy, as well as their own progress.

The destruction of these wire entanglements, Mr. Lyon showed, was a most elaborate and costly affair.

There were 3,500 yards of wire involved in the Hill 70 operations. For the destruction of every square yard of wire one shell was needed, so that a front line trench of 3,500 yards long would require 35,000 shells. But that front was not all that was required in the operations. There were four lines to be cut and that meant 14,000 yards of wire. Each of these required ten shells because the wire was thirty feet thick. The average cost of each shell was $22.50. The total cost in shells of these operations was $2,800,000.

This was the work that Gen. Currie had done in taking Hill 70, and this was an illustration of the mechanical work required in carrying through a battle that did not last more than three hours. It was a splendid example of thoroughness in preparation and the saving of the lives of Canadian soldiers.

Mr. Lyon gave a similar illustration in connection with the work of Gen. Rennie of the 4th brigade.

Because of the success of the Canadians at Hill 70 in the wire operations they were chosen by the commander-in-chief to defeat a new German method of shell hole warfare. These were very difficult to discover, and some of them contained machine guns cunningly concealed. The object is to force the British guns to pound away at empty shellholes covered over with wire.

THE VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGN

"Your credit is good." That is the feature of Canada's Victory Loan, which is offered to the public to-day; that, and the high rate of interest, 5½ per cent. The bonds are in denominations of $50, $100, $500 or up, and all anybody has to "pay down," is 10 per cent. on Dec. 1. But though a deposit of only $5 is required for a $50 bond (and a like per cent. for the others), the full first half year's interest will be paid on June 1 of next year JUST AS TROUGH THE SUBSCRIBER HAD PAID THE FULL PRICE ON DEC. 1. That means that while the interest is nominally 5½ per cent., it figures out 5.61 per cent. for buyers of 20 year bonds, 5.68 per cent. for buyers of 10 year bonds, and 5.81 (over 5¾ per cent.) for buyers of 5 year bonds.

How to invest? It's the simplest thing possible. The citizen simply signs an undertaking to pay on Dec. 1, ten per cent. of the value of the bond for which he wishes to subscribe. If he has a bank account, he gives his check; if not, his promise is sufficient. Then, on the date mentioned, his check is casher by the Government or his undertaking to pay is made good. Having thus paid his first ten per cent., he continues to buy his bond on the instalment or "easy payment" plan as follows during the year 1918; Jan. 2, 10 per cent.; Feb. 1, 20 per cent.; Mar. 1, 20 per cent.; April 1, 20 per cent.; May 1, 20 per cent.

Put it another way. A man who can afford to pay $5 down on Dec. 1 of this year can buy a Victory Bond by saving the following amounts per day thereafter: During December, a little over 16 cents; during January, February, March and April, about 33 cents. He will then have his bond fully paid up by May 1 of next year, and on June 1 he will receive his first interest at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum, not reckoned on the payments as has made them, but on the par value of his bond as though it had been paid for in cash on Dec. 1, 1917.

Where will he get his interest? At any branch of any bank in Canada by simply presenting a coupon. Everything has been done to make it easy for Canadians to subscribe for the Victory Loan. And everything has been done to simplify the process whereby they will get the very generous interest which the country is prepared to pay.

CARRY YOUR COUNTERFOILS

Class One Men Are Liable to Be Held Up on the Street—Burden on Employers

Yesterday marked the beginning of period when every Class I man who failed to take advantage of the month set aside for reporting through the post offices will find himself in the class of the deserter, with every man's hand against him, chiefly the employers and the civil authorities entrusted with the enforcement of the Military Service Act. It is quite too late to attempt to make explanations, to say that a man didn't know it was a serious matter, that he thought the authorities didn't mean business, or that he was too careless at the first and too busy at the end to respect the decrees of the proclamation of 13th October.

To-day, if the civil or military police see fit, they have the power to stop any seemingly Class One man who walks the street, and they may compel him to show exactly where he stands with regard to reporting. They can stop him in the pool room, the restaurant, or his own back yard, or even his own home, if there are reasons to believe that he has not complied with the law. While the authorities have the power to do this, it does not mean to say they are going to exercise their prerogatives in a very stern manner for some days to come.

The public is just reminded that if such a request should come there is authority behind it, and objection should not be raised by any man who does not wish the unpleasantness of explanation at a police station. The advice to all Class One men is: Carry your counterfoils received at the post offices when you reported for service or claimed exemption, as such counterfoils when shown a civil or military police official is as good as a passport to walk the streets in freedom.

Burden on Employers.

As to the system of checking up those who did not report, full machinery has been prepared. It will not be any spectacular effort to round them up, but of a quiet nature, which will automatically make it quite impossible for a Class One man who has not reported to hold a position anywhere in this Dominion after 17th November. The burden is on the employers, and the employer who tries to shield a defaulter will pay most dearly for his labour.

The authorities are relying further on the general public to furnish the names of any men whom they know have failed to comply with the Act, and though a large number of names have already been received, the plan is to wait and check over the lists before steps are taken against any man. In the ordinary course of events, it will be the middle of the week before all the lists can be prepared at the office of the Registrar, and after that it will be possible to check them over and determine who has reported and who has not.

NEW DECREASE IN BIRTHS.

Copenhagen. — The birth rate in Hamburg, according to the latest weekly statistics, has fallen below 7.7 a thousand, as compared with 9.1 during the first week of June, which itself was highly alarming as indicating a serious decline in the number of births.

There were more than 50 per cent. more deaths than births during the week, although the mortality is still somewhat lower than June, owing to the improvement in food conditions, through the availability of fresh vegetables.

"Gentlemen, We Vowed Never Again Would We Spare A German Life"

New York, Nov. 13. — Captain David Fallon, a young Irish-Australian, veteran of Gallipoli and Belgium, thrilled 200 artists at the Society of Illustrators' dinner in the Hotel des artistes last night, with the story of German atrocities he had seen.

"In Belgium," said the young captain, "I saw a Mother Superior crucified to the door of her convent, and within the bodies of noble women who had consecrated their lives to the teaching of the young and ministering to the poor, cut to pieces and mutilated.

"In Belgium I saw an aged blacksmith, his folded hands pinned to his anvil, and a note on his breast proclaiming in German, "He will shoe no more of the horses of our enemies."

"When it came our turn our boys went into the trenches to do their bit. And, as has happened to your boys, the trenches were raided, and when the clash was over some of our boys were missing.

"The next day we saw their heads. Cutting them from their bodies, the Bosches had stuck them on bayonets above the trenches, scarce fifty yards away. That time when the word came our boys needed no spurs to send them over and into the enemy's trenches. There we found our comrades cricified and disembowled, and then and there, gentlemen, we vowed that never again would we spare a German life.

"Once, in the trenches, I asked a German captain for a truce in which to bury the dead and aid the wounded. He agreed, and we approached each others' lines under white flags. As we neared the Germans suddenly dropped to the ground, and over them poured a hail of machine gun bullets.

"Again, when we had some of them trapped in a corner of a dugout and I was about to bomb them, they threw up their hands, crying 'Merci, kamerad!' I lowered my aim and as I did so, a soldier cried, 'They are attacking you from behind, sir.' I gave them the bomb and we cut our way out as best we could. The only time a German cries 'kamerad' is when he has no more bombs, no more cartridges, no more chance to use knife or bayonet.

"But we don't fool with bombs any more. When they cry out from a dugout for 'Merci, kamerad!' we ask how many there are down there. If the answer comes back, 'Six,' we chuck in a bomb and tell them to divide it between them.

"What has happened to our boys will happen to your boys. The world won't know of it until some of them begin to come trickling back. Then you'll know how their heads were cut off, how they were crucified, how they were mutilated, just to show how brave Germany is and how great is kultur.

"I have just come from Atlanta. While in the South I visited the German detension camp. There were 840 of the Germans there living on the fat of the land ,in magnificent huts, with every comfort—everything even to the tennis courts, that go to make life worth while. In Germany our prisoners are being starved."

If you don't believe that men are just as curious as women, tie up one of your fingers and pour liniment over it.

GRAIN MARKET

There is such a strong demand for cash oats that the market is evidently cleaned out of the Manitoba grades. The situation yesterday in the Winnipeg market was reflected in an advance of 2 3-8c over Saturday's prices. It is believed that Government buying is responsible for the recent sharp advances. Locally, the Board of Trade gave out no quotations yesterday on C. W.'s in store at Fort William. Ontario cash oats were advanced in a strong market. Peas were advanced another 10c, briging them close to the $4 mark. Baled hay goes up another 50c per ton.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2, store; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-2 including 2 1-2c tax in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats—Not quoted.

American corn — Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 68c to 69c, nominal; No. 3 white, 67c to 68c, nominal.

Barley—New, $1.21 to $1.22.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, new, $2.22 basis in store Montreal.

Peas—No. 2 $3.80 to $3.90, according to freights outside.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 303 cars, with 5,889 cattle, 269 calves, 1,429 hogs, and 3,326 sheep and lambs.

There was another very heavy run of cattle for the opening market. Nearly 6,000 head of cattle came near to making a record, but the average in quality was very poor. Good to choice butcher steers and heifers were, in fact, very scarce and 25c to 30c higher. But for the great bulk of commoner stuff the market was slow. Canners and cutters were 25c lower.

THE BRITISH FRONT FROM WEEK TO WEEK

THE DESERT OF MUD

The weather has imposed a pause on the British front in Flanders during the past week. A serious part of the burden of this war, especially for the fighting men themselves, is the fact that it is being so largely fought on an "impossible" terrain; and worse than the Somme terrain, worse even than Mesopotamia, is Flandeds in the mud season, which lasts from the end of September to the end of May.

During the Marlborough campaigns, when war was a light and frolicsome affair compared with what it is to-day and a piece of ordnance did not weigh much more than a single charge for one of our modern giant howitzers, Flanders was judged as no fit place to fight in except in the very best of the Summer season. Now, when the transport of thousands of tons of artillery and munitions is indispensable to any forward movement the Flanders mud is an enemy more formidable to an advancing army than any invention of German frightfulness.

This year, as it happens, the weather has been particularly wicked, the rainfall making a record, and the battlefield where the enemy still holds desperately to a fraction of the ridge which is the last barrier between the British and the great railway centres of Roulers and Menin, is a sea of evil mud. The thin skin of dry ground with which the summer coats the morasse of the Flanders plain has been broken through everywhere, and off the paved roads there is no footing for man or beast; still less for the great engines of modern war. Fighting, of course, has not ceased, but big movements have been impossible.

That under the circumstances, so much has been done, and a further big section of the diliquescent area wrested from the enemy has given him an impression that British force and stubborness border on the miraculous. This one gathers from prisoners and from captured documents. If the Allies had had no other object in taking the area they have won this autumn it would have been well worth while from their point of view, because of the dejection it has caused the enemy to note the British infantry appearing as an amphibious force and taking forts entirely surrounded by a sea of mud waist-deep.

In one instance a German garrison held a little lump of ground which was quite an island except for a narrow causeway built up to keep their communication with the rear. The garrison held a miserable life there, but they reckoned themselves at least safe from assault. But the slime around them was suddenly filled with floundering figures who came on in spite of heavy machine gun and rifle fire, holding aloft their rifles, with bayonets fixed. And soon the remnant of that German force was wading through the same slime on their way to a prisoners' cage.

An artillery observing officer, who saw this little action, describes it as at once the most horrible and the most thrilling incident of the campaign as he has seen it. The mud was more than waist-deep. The figures charging through it did not look like men but like strange monsters. As the German machine guns played on the mud it was churned up in the air in a horrible thick cloud. And the Germans thought it was not reasonable to expect them to fight against men who could do things like that.

OFFICER CASUALTIES.

Officer casualties have been in greater than the usual high proportion of the rank and file during this trying week, and the fact, sad in itself, has given further proof of the elan and spirit of the British army, and has given perhaps an extra degree of hardness to its grim determination to see things through. For the increase in the proportion of officers' casualties came about in this way: As we won here and there a little patch of country in the dreadful and confused battlefield, the issue had to be decided on the spot as to whether a further creep forward was possible; and the company officers invariably took it as their job to go forward and see. In hundreds of a time these daring reconnaissances were going on, saving the lives of the rank and file, but taking heavy toll of the leaders. They were only doing their duty as the British army knows its duty, but it was magnificent under all the circumstances, and such things always have their effect in the ranks. The English soldier is no talkative about these matters. They have to be very impressive indeed to draw him off from the usual camp chat of leave, of rations and football prospects; but in the supporting lines to-day memories of a trying week are brightened with incidents of how heroically officers and men played up to the very highest tradition of the British army.

GETTING UP SUPPLIES.

Supply numbers are almost as important as fighting numbers during such periods as this in Flanders. Some wonderful things have been done between the base and the shell-ponds — there are no longer shell-holes—facing the German mud trenches. The High Command, recognizing that the call for extreme heroism on the part of the men in line needed to be supported by the most strenuous efforts to keep them in food and munitions gave special attention to supply. Wonders were worked, especially by the battalion supply detachments. Rations got up somehow to the most impossible places, and there was often hot tea and hot stew within actual smell of the Germans. Stories of supply are the most cheerful and not the least moving of the week. One unit tells of rations coming up in a cart with one mule and one man pulling in tandem harness. The rest of the outfit were casualties on the road up. "And that mule," recorded the narrator, "was as good as a Christian the way he understood what he had to do."

No eulogy was considered necessary for the mule's companion in harness.

Another figure, so mud-encrusted as to look like a rough model in mud of a man, but who would show out as a corporal when he got back to divisional rest, explained how a small batch of prisoners had been taken.

"We was in a mud-hole—they was in a pill-box not 50 yards away, and they couldn't get their fire down low enough to get at us, and we couldn't rush them: and we lay a-watching of one another. Then we got up a dixey of hot stew, and the smell of it was too much for Fritz, so out out he comes and KAMRADS!"

On the enemy's side, of course, supply difficulties have been greater than on ours, because our artillery superiority makes the rear transports more dangerous. A German writer, Baron von Ardenne, stresses this. He writes in Berliner Tageblatt: "All lines of communication are under heavy fire. The columns have to break up, and the wagons find their way one by one through the holes and the swamps. A wave of gas often floods the whole district and makes it necessary to put on the cumbersome gas masks. Some teams are killed, others rush away in wild terror....The return journey, when day comes brings still greater dangers....The strength of our horses has also decreased as a result of the scantier fodder."

Indeed the German command in Flanders no longer attempts now to keep up a daily supply of rations to the men in the line. They go in weighted with some days supply of preserved foods. The effect of this can be judged. There is nothing cheers up a man in the line more than the idea that the butcher and the baker and the grocer are still calling day by day. He feels that he is in touch with his country; that he is being looked after; that there is something supporting him. Correspondingly there is nothing more deadly to morale than the thought of being isolated—cut off.

It is no wonder that the prisoners we take witness to a growing dejection in the German ranks. The German authorities seem to be trying to keep up the courage of the men with optimistic reports about the food supply in Berlin. Some picture postcards captured in the trenches, give representations of massive food-hogging in imaginary eating houses of the Fatherland. What comfort this brings to a man sent out into a wilderness of mud to hang on with a week's supply of "iron rations," it is hard to say. But presumably the German command at least understands the German mind; and the pictures certainly depict a German paradise of fat and sausages.

Why this highly nourishing Food is so Inexpensive

THE most economical food is that which gives most body-building nutriment for every cent you pay. Foods refined by costly processes are really the most expensive because they lose so much of their essential dark parts containing the body-building protein and saline elements.

Dr. Jackson's

is an inexpensive food because it is so rich in these precious body-building elements. It is actually a better tissue builder than meat. It costs no more than wheat or oats used alone, yet it is so much more nourishing! Besides, it prevents indigestion and relieves constipation without the use of costly drugs, or we return your money.

Roman Meal is composed of entire berries of wheat and rye with flaxseed and bran. The flaxseed is rendered absolutely tasteless and odorless by electricity.

It is the dark parts of grains that contain the body-building elements and health preservers. The white parts are mostly starches which cannot possibly build up tissue. Any food that is deficient in body nutriment is dear at any price, especially if it gets you into trouble. When the bowel muscles do not act, due to impoverished food, which is also lacking in waste, you have constipation. Roman Meal is a fully balanced ration, highly nutritious, and having the correct amount of waste. It incites the digestive tract to full natural action and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor.

Roman Meal makes the most delicious porridge when you follow directions and do not stir it while cooking. Never stir it except while mixing meal and water or you positively spoil the porridge. Stirring while cooking destroys the granular form and restores the taste of flax which Dr. Jackson removed by electricity.

Roman Meal also makes splendid bread, pancakes, muffins, cakes, etc.—all kinds of delicious baked products. At all grocers.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

PUBLIC OPINION

SO WOULD WE.

(Puck.)

When a banker lends me money I have to pay him five, six or ten per cent. interest, perhaps more. When I lend the banker money by depositing it in his bank so that he may invest in various financial enterprises of secured return, he pays me anywhere from nothing to two per cent. When I lend the banker money, I lend him my own money; when the banker lends me money, he lends me some other man's money, and not his own. I would like to be a banker!

LIBERTY BOND SALESMANSHIP.

(The Wall Street Journal.)

One of the cleverest methods employed in the selling of Liberty bonds was used by a hard worker in the ranks who plied his trade on a street corner in the middle of the shopping district. Taking a position on the street he cried: "Will any one bet me a dollar that I can't sell a $50 Liberty bond in one minute?" "I will," said a passerby. "All right, sir. Now," turning to another spectator, "here's a $50 Liberty bond for $49." "Taken," said the spectator. The salesman sold 47 bonds on that spot.

Economy Begins at Home

Now-a-days Governments, Chancellors, bankers and business men talk economy. However, it is one thing to talk economy and another to put it into practice.

FOOD PROFITEER MUST GO.

(New York Tribune.)

There is no hope for the food profiteer. He must be put out of business, be he a collossus or a pygmy. The people who support the war will demand that elimination as a minimum measure of self-protection. And they will get it, because only by granting it to them can the Government hope to carry this vast war enterprise through to success.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Fortune Telling System

By F. A. MITCHEL

A table was between them. They had been playing euchre. She suggested a game of hearts.

"No, thanks," he said, "I am not so stupid as to play a game of hearts with a coquette. Your victims are already sufficiently numerous without adding so unworthy a person as myself."

"You know very well what I mean. You simply wish to say something smart."

She was shuffling the cards, but her mind was not on them. What her mind was on, or, rather, what was on her mind, did not interest him. She was right in inferring that his remark was intended for something smart.

While she was listlessly shuffling the cards she leaned forward so that the perfume of a flower she wore in her corsage was perilously near his nose. Her red lips were still nearer his. She was looking down at the cards, but presently raised her eyes. They met his resting upon her admiringly, but she dropped them at once.

"Shall I tell your fortune?" she asked.

"Do."

She began to distribute the cards on the table in four piles. Whenever she put a card on the fourth pile she paused and studied it. He asked her what process she was using and she told him it was one she had learned from a fortune teller. A spider laying for a fly is not expected to speak the truth.

She put down four cards, then another four cards, the second fourth card being the knave of spades.

"That's you," she said.

"I'm no knave."

"But you're awfully smart. You scintillate with bright sayings."

He swallowed this little bit of preliminary bait, and it made him hungry for more.

Presently the ten of diamonds fell on the second pile of cards.

"That's a wealthy girl who is angling for you," said the fortune teller.

"What's her name?"

"I know her name, but I'm not going to tell you."

The two of spades fell in the first pile.

"A black deuce indicates that she is crafty. Better look out for her. She will make you a lot of trouble."

The ten of hearts fell on the first pile.

"That's the girl who really loves you. She is true hearted, and if you return her love she will make you very happy."

"I don't quite understand this scheme under which you are working all this out," he said, with a puzzled expression. "I don't see why the ten spots are a couple of girls or why you infer those things, no matter what pile they fall on."

"Of course you don't. What kind of fortune would it be if you did?"

By this time she had dealt all the cards and, putting them together again, shuffled them and began anew, this time laying them in six rows, placing one card beneath another, so that all were exposed. The third card in the first column was the ten of diamonds, and the fourth card in the sixth column was the jack of clubs.

"Too bad!" exclaimed the fortune teller. "The expected has happened. The rich girl has thrown you over for a man who is brutal."

"That's the queerest fortune telling system to understand I ever came across," he said.

She continued to deal the cards very slowly. They were both watching them intently as they fell, gradually bending lower and lower over them. At last a rebellious strand of her hair grazed his forehead. A fine wire is sufficient to carry an electric current, and a few hairs may carry a love current. The ten of hearts fell at the bottom of the fifth column. She left her hand on it, and, parting his hand on it at the same time, he touched hers. She did not withdraw hers, and he maintained his position.

"Don't go any further till you have explained to me why the card falling at the bottom of the fifth column means that the girl who loves me is"—

"Is what?"

"What you're going to say about her."

"What am I going to say about her?" This dialogue, spoken slowly and softly, is not especially brilliant, but it was quite sufficient to serve the purpose of these two—that is, keeping their hands in touch. She raised her lashes and looked into his eyes with something that might have been reproachful; it might have been inviting; it might have been anything he chose to infer it to be. Meanwhile the fragrance of the flower mingled with her breath, circled about his nose and penetrated through it up into his brain.

It would be sacrilegious to follow further the blending of these two young hearts. Besides, it would be a repetition of what has occurred since Cupid first began his pranks. And yet the little rascal has an infinite variety of ways of practicing his profession, and nothing is achieved in life in so many different ways as the drawing together of a pair of lovers.

"I say, mummy," he said when their daughter was receiving attention from a desirable parti, "you'd better teach her that fortune telling game you taught me."

"It is not necessary," replied the wife and mother, with dignity.

"Humph! That's about as intelligible as your fortune system."

RETIREMENT OF ITALIAN ARMY—Gentral Cadorna on Wednesday was crossing the Livenza River, twelve miles behind the Tagliamento, and about half way to the Piave line, which is marked and its western southern limits indicate the battle front. It is unlikely the Italians will

Food for Genius.

Somebody with time to kill has been hunting up what sort of diet is affected by different literary experts. So the amateur had better feed upon such food as is recommended for the particular style of work they want to do.

A literary man, according to the new thought, can get any kind of a game he wants by regulating his diet. Toast and tea, for instance, would be about the right feed for spring poetry, while pig's knuckles and sauerkraut would be fine for any topic that called for plain speaking, right to the point.

Thus J. Whitcomb Riley was at his best when subsisting on graham crackers. When J. Whitcomb was in a condition of absolute hunger he was capable of reaching out and grabbing a word to rhyme any time that he wanted it.

Mark Twain favored champagne and light lunches, and some of his most sparkling humor was tossed off after lunch.

Ben Johnson, we are told, wrote heavy stuff, almost exclusively, following his regular meal of beer, bisquits, and beef, and whenever the biscuits were stale there was a distinct note of pessimism in his writing.

Carlyle wrote some of his most ponderous messages on a cornbeef and cabbage diet.

Poe was particularly given to melancholy poetry, after toying with beer and pretzels.

Dante, we are told, wrote "The Inferno" after absorbing a heavy meal composed almost exclusively of macaroni that was a trifle underdone.

No doubt, by watching literary production closely, we can, in time, segregate the menu into its varied literary meanings. Even now there is a strong impression that various writers are subsisting on sawdust, baled hay, rhubarb, and desiccated barbed wire. Have you a little writer in your home? Try the system out.

Model Bird Marriages.

The married life of most birds could be taken for a model by members of the human family. For instance, the staid, dignified, and homely baldheaded eagle never mates but once and lives with his one mate until he or she dies. If left a widower — even a young widower — the baldheaded eagle never mates again. He remains alone and disconsolate in the nest of the rocky crag or in the branches of the tall pine that formed his domicile while his mate was alive. No other female eagle can tempt him to forsake his desolate life. With him once a widower, always a widower. The golden wood-peckers live in a happy married state, mating but once. If the male dies his mate's grief is lasting, and she remains a widowed bird the rest of her life.

GOING INTO BATTLE.

Donald Hankey Describes the Emotions of a Soldier.

Everybody wonders what are the sensations and emotions of the individual soldier as he waits in the front-line trench for the order to charge and as he rushes across the death-swept zone towards the enemy. Does he think of the chance of death? Is he physically afraid? Does he shrink from the necessity of facing and inflicting death? Donald Hankey, the Englishman who wrote so frankly and interestingly of the soldier's experiences at the front in "A Student in Arms," considers this matter in his new volume, "A Student in Arms, Second Series." Mr. Hankey spent nearly the whole of two years at the front, in the trenches, and in the supporting lines, and was killed in action at the Battle of the Somme. He says:

The fact is that at the moment of a charge men are in an absolutely abnormal condition. Their emotions seem to be numbed. Noises, sights, and sensations which would ordinarily produce intense pity, horror, or dread have no effect upon them at all, and yet never was the mind clearer, the senses more acute. It is before an attack that a man is more liable to fear. Of all the hours of dismay that come to a soldier there are few more trying to the nerves than when he is sitting in a trench under heavy fire from high-explosive shells or bombs from trench mortars. You can watch these bombs lobbed up into the air. You see them slowly wobble down to earth, there to explode with a terrific detonation that sets every nerve in your body a jangling. You can do nothing. You cannot retaliate in any way. You simply have to sit tight and hope for the best. Some men joke and smile, but their mirth is forced. Some feign stoical indifference, and sit with a paper and a pipe; but, as a rule, their pipes are out and their reading a pretence. There are few men, indeed, whose hearts are not beating faster and whose nerves are not on edge.

But you can't call this the fear of death. It is a purely physical reaction of danger and detonation. Personally I believe that very few men, indeed, fear death. The vast majority experience a more or less violent physical shrinking from the pain of death and wounds, especially when they are obliged to be physically inactive, and when they have nothing else to think about. But this is a purely physical reaction which can be, and nearly always is, controlled by the mind. Last of all, there is the repulsion and loathing for the whole business of war, with its bloody ruthlessness, its fiendish ingenuity, and its insenate cruelty that comes to a man after a battle, when the tortured and dismembered dead lie strewn about the trench and the wounded groan from No-Man's Land. But neither is that the fear of death. It is a repulsion which breeds hot anger more often than cold fear, reckless hatred of life more often than abject clinging to it. The cases where any sort of fear, even for a moment, obtains the mastery of a man are very rare.

MILAN'S COURAGE HIGH IN FACE OF DISASTER

Times Correspondent Finds No Disposition to Blame Cadorna or the Allies.

(By Charles H. Grasty.)

MILAN, Nov. 5, (Delayed.) — At Turin I had my first chance of seeing how Italy was taking the crisis. Crowds lined the route for miles to see the soldiers off for the front, but there was no excitement.

I occupied a compartment with an Italiana officer returning from Petrograd, and as we were invaded in the free Italian way by fresh sets of passengers going short distances, with whom the officer conversed freely, we got a good line on the feeling of this part of Italy. The people had been shocked to the core. They were unprepared. the very worst they had been reckoning on was the halting of the Italian advance for the winter, which was causing considerable grumbling.

When Cadorna's frank communique was read by the crowds assembled in the Milan Galleria Vittorio Emanuele (the famous arcade) last Sunday night scores momentarily gave way to their grief, weeping hysterically, but soon a common instinct of courage and loyalty asserted itself, and the whole crowd joined in shouts of acclaim for Italy and the King. The latter possesses the love and confidence of the people, who also trust Cadorna absolutely. Reasons for the loss in a few days of all that has been taken with such sacrifice and cherished so passsionately as the homeland free from alien rule are sought elsewhere than at the Commando Supremo.

Milan, which is Italy's chief commercial city, is also the centre of the war spirit. The public here is uninformed about details of the military operations, not even knowing the present Army Headquarters, but faith is pretty general in Cadorna and in allied co-operation. I have not heard one word of criticism of any ally except Russia. I feel safe in saying that this part of Italy and, so far as I can gather, other parts have stood the shock of the disaster well, and that there is not going to be the kind of collapse which alone could make Italy put an eventual allied victory in danger.

Yesterday Morning's Session of Tribunal At Council Chamber

No decisions were announced by the tribunal composed of Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr W. H. Moore, K.C. at the Council Chamber yesterday a.m. The medical sheets of some of the applicants had not arrived from Kingston and these cases were transferred pending the arrival of these papers. A number of appeals were heard, but decisions were reserved.

A Busy Young Man.

Joseph Henderson, pattern maker at the Canadian General Electric Works claimed exemption for business, domestic and financial reasons. He was married on September 1st of this year, but Mr. Aylmer reminded him that under the Military Act he was regarded as a single man. In addition to his regular work at the C.G.E. plant he has farmed his nine acres west of Victoria Heights in North Monaghan and conducts a grocery store at the corner of Bethune and King streets.

"You must be a hustler," Mr. Aylmer remarked.

"I've always had to hustle for a living; thats the only way you'll get it."

The appellant showed that he was supporting his mother, and presented the details of his personal and business affairs in support of his claim The Board reserved its decision.

A Witness in Belleville.

His wife appeared in behalf of Gilbert Downer, an "A2" man. He was called to Belleville yesterday as witness in a Peterboro' case being heard there. He was married in September of this year. Without his medical sheet which the Kingston authorities failed to forward, the Board transferred the case to to-day's session.

Claims Laid Over.

Chas. G. Kingan, Aylmer street, and Harry Montgomery, R. R. No. 3, did not respond to the call of their names. Their claims were laid over.

The same action was taken with Thos. Doughty and V. C. Hayes.

A Class "E" Man.

Stanley Jos. Richardson said he was an "E" category man, but his medical sheet was not available. He was informed that when the sheet was received verifying his statement he would be notified of his exemption.

Munition Maker.

Joseph McClure, Townsend street, a munitions worker with the Metal Products Company, said he was going to Montreal with them. He understood the compahy had applied for the exemption of three or four men they needed in their new Montreal plant. Mr. McClure said he had come to Peterborough from Kingston, where he had worked on munitions, and hoped to leave for Montreal last nght. The Metal Products Co. planned to begin operations in their Montreal plant by December 1st.

Mr. Moore said it was necessary for his employer to present a statement that Mr. McClure was indispensable to the munitions work. The latter replied that he was sure an application would be made for his exemption.

The applicant said he had enlisted with the 77th Battalion, Ottawa, and after several months he was rejected owing to a disability. His present medical sheet classed him as "A2." Decision was reserved.

Before 18 Doctors.

Wm. Naylor, a Class "E" man, was quarantined for scarlet fever and couldn't report for service or claim exemption. He volunteered under the former system, had appeared before eighteen doctors altogether, and was finally rejected. His claim will be forwarded to the Registrar.

His Brother Killed.

Wm. C. English, the only brother of the late Private Jas. English, who was killed at Langemarck, applied on the ground that he was the sole support of his mother. Judgment was reserved

Brother Killed in Action.

Adolphus Picard, brother of the late Capt. R. E. Picard, killed in action, appealed for the exemption on the ground of domestic hardship resulting from his brother's death. Decision was reserved.

Draughtsman at Hope Factory.

Robert Hopkins, an "A 2" man, said he was the only draughtsman with Henry Hope and Sons, and his work was entirely connected with the making of munitions. Mr. A. L. Young, general manager of the company, had applied for his exemption. Decision reserved.

His Examination Arranged.

C. Shannon, 294 Lake street, stated that he had been prevented from obtaining a medical examination because of the large number reporting. He had first appeared on Wednesday. He was given an order for examination by the local Medical Board at three o'clock this afternoon.

Walter Vass appealed on domestic grounds. Hearing postponed.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON'S SESSION.

TRIBUNAL No. 275.

Percy Ernest Telford is the sole support of a widowed mother and owing to his mother's health has to support one sister. An only brother is with the Canadian forces in France. Telford is an A2 man. Judgment was reserved.

Leo Herlchey was sent up for further examination.

EXEMPTION DISALLOWED.

James Shaughnessy, an A2 man, claimed exemption on the ground of serious financial obligations. The applicant is one of three sons living, two of whom are unmarried. Shaughnessy also claimed to be the sole support of his widowed mother. One brother is in poor health, and hardly able to do a good day's work.

"Don't you think you should go and fight for him and your mother?" enquired Judge Huycke.

"It would be hard for my mother to get along," replied the applicant.

The applicant also said that he owned a one hundred acre farm which he intended to take over from the tenant in the spring.

Lieut-Col. Clegg was of the opinion that one member of the family should be represented in the service.

The exemption was disallowed.

ANOTHER RECRUIT.

Domestic position and exceptional finacial position were the grounds upon which Joseph Patrick O'Brien, 513 Weller street, claimed exemption. The applicant said that he was the sole support of father and mother. Two sisters are nurses.

Judge Huycke pointed out that most of the obligations referred to had been entered into since the outbreak of the war.

The applicant and two sisters are liable for the payment of the Weller street home.

"Whose business is it to protect your father and mother? Somebody is doing it and doing it every day with their lives," said Judge Huycke.

Lieut.-Col. Clegg was of the opinion that the exemption should be disallowed. The ability of two sisters to make as high as twenty dollars a week each as nurses largely influenced the Board to allow the exemption.

O'Brien's claim for exemption was then thrown out and he will be drafted into the service.

David Leahy, a Class "E" man, was exempted until his class was called for.

CITY HALL BOARD.

The City Hall tribunal Monday afternoon heard the claims of Wm. H. Outram, who said he was indispensable to the T. Kinnear Co., and Maitland Wells, foreman for the Adam Hall Company, who said he was the sole support of his mother. Decisions were reserved.

Harry Montgomery works at the Henry Hope Company. Three brothers have been with the overseas armies, and he is living at home on the Gravel Road. He has a brother preaching the Gospel at Morrisburg, but if either of them have to go Harry states that he will be first. Decision reserved.

Mr. G. N. Monerief, a young farmer of North Monaghan, applied on the ground of his usefulness in that work. He is a tax collector for the township and wanted to know as soon as possible the decision of the Board.

Wm. J. Jefferson and C. J. Lowe, were two of the Henry Hope Company employees who were supported in their claims by the general manager, Mr. Young.

Just Apply This Paste And the Hairs Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.

Counter Attacks Are Repulsed By Canadians

(By W. A. Willison, the Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press).

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, via London, Nov. 12. — During an intense artillery fire last Saturday counter attacks were launched by the enemy against our line. The first was broken up by our artillery, which swept the area, inflicting heavy casualties, while the second attack, though further advanced, was equally unsuccessful, the attacking forces being driven off with heavy losses by our artillery, machine gun and rifle fire. Since then the enemy has made no further infantry attempt against our lines. The prisoners captured pay tribute to our artillery fire of the 10th. Men of the Third Battalion of the 114th German Regiment report that their battalion suffered tremendous losses, and were withdrawn from the line after experiencing twelve hours' shelling. The increasing disorganization among the enemy forces is indicated in the statements made by captured prisoners, while the decline in the morale of the officers is unquestioned. One officer says that when we attacked on Saturday all the other officers in his battalion ran back to shelter some three hundred yards behind the front line, leaving warrant officers, N.C.O.'s and men to carry on.

Miss Annette Benton, on returning from a visit, brought a gift to each one of her mother's coloured servants. It was a "day out" for Lily, the housemaid, so Annette distributed her gifts, reserving for Lily a scarlet-silk blouse.

"That won't do," said Mrs. Benton. "Lily's in mourning."

"Mourning?"

"Yes, for her husband; he died in jail, and Lily's wearing a long crepe veil."

When Lily returned, her young mistress expressed regret. "I'll give the blouse to Lizzie," she said, "and get you something else."

Lily looked at the blouse, then she swallowed. "Don't you give that blouse to no Lizzie, Miss Annette, co's nex' mont' I'se gwine outa mournin' from the waist up."—Harper's Magazine.

Don't Say— "Call Again."

Yesterday an army of men started out to sell Victory Bonds.

For the next three weeks theirs will be a colossal task.

From Cape Breton to the Yukon, they will try to call at every city home, every farm home, and every office, factory, and business institution to ask people to buy Victory Bonds.

Conceive, if you can, the magnitude of their work; the hard labour it involves, and the high necessity for it.

Then, realizing all these things, do your utmost to make their task easier.

Decide now to buy.
Decide the amount you will buy.
Be ready to sign your application when the salesman calls.

You should and will buy Victory Bonds, but, don't—please don't—ask the salesman to call again.

The worker's time is limited. He has hundreds of calls to make; and although there is an army of workers, each one has a large field to cover.

Don't say you're going to hold your application for someone else, because each worker is limited to his own district.

The salesman will not accept money. The application blank includes a form of cheque, payable to the Minister of Finance, which you can draw upon your bank; or, if you have not a bank account, there is a form of undertaking which you can use.

Be Ready— Don't Say, "Call Again."

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

KERENSKY'S TROOPS FIGHT THEIR WAY INTO PETROGRAD

Fierce Street Engagement Reported as Loyalist Troops Deployed Down the Historic Nevsky Prospekt Fighting From Barricade to Barricade ---800 Killed and Wounded at Petrograd and 700 Casualties at Moscow.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

STOCKHOLM, November 13.—Premier Kerensky's troops have entered Petrograd and are "masters of a portion of the city," according to a Telegraph Agency despatch received here to-day. This is the first word indicating that the fighting known to have been in progress for the past forty-eight hours around the capital, has actually reached the city itself.

The despatch asserted that Kerensky's troops now controlled the Nevsky Prospeckt. No details of the battle were given, but from private reports it was believed that the fighting had been sanguinary. The Bolsheviki were reported by the Telegraph Agency to be fleeing to the Smolny Institute, their Governmental headquarters, for refuge.

The Provisional Government's loyal forces deployed down the historic Nevsky Prospeckt and swept through other thoroughfares. According to unofficial report, the fighting was from barricade to barricade in the streets themselves, but with the Bolsheviki making fainter and fainter resistance as the strength of the loyal troops was made apparent. The Smolny Institute was reported in previous despatches to have been put in a state of defense preparatory to withstanding a siege if necessary. The Bolsheviki numbered sailors from the Kronstadt garrison in their forces, and were fairly well armed with both rifles and machine guns. Apparently the fighting centred on the Nevsky Prospeckt—the same street which has already geen repeatedly dyed with the blood of various revolutions.

It was along this thoroughfare that the Czar's Guards made their last stand against the victorious Duma revolutionists back in March, where the Kronstadt rebels swept along with their armoured automobiles a few months later spattering death, and along which, during the last week the Bolsheviki executed their coup in seizing control of the Governmental machinery.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, November 13.—Leon Trotsky, principal aid of Nikolai Lenine, at Smolny Institute, to-day replied to a request from the Associated Press for his views on the situation as follows: "I may say that we are making all our statements now by means of cannon. I have nothing to say otherwise."

Premier Kerensky is reported living in the Palace at Gatchina. The Bolsheviki leaders appear to be confident of the support of the army.

A London cable says that Bolsheviki leaders are negotiating with Kerensky for a new Socialist cabinet.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, November 13.—Eight hundred killed and wounded at Petrograd, and seven hundred at Moscow, it what the Bolsheviki experiment in government has so far cost Russia, according to reliable reports reaching here to-day. These fifteen hundred casualties will be increased in the fighting which is now in progress around Petrograd, or is about to occur.

So far reports to-day indicated both sides drawn up for an engagement at the capital, but was neither ready to strike in force. Scattering engagements were reported. The day is going against the Bolsheviki. In Petrograd latest despatches detailed a growing wave of anarchy, robbery, murders and rapine. The Trotsky-Lenine combination lacks sufficient men to exercise authority.

(By J. W. Pegler.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMERICAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, November 13.—All American aviators now fighting in the French army were to-day formally commissioned officers in the United States Aviation Service.

Labour Bureau For War Veterans

At the regular meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association last night a letter was read from Capt. J. H. Burnham, stating that there was a vacancy in the letter-carrier staff of the local Post Office. The position was open to a returned soldier.

Two applications for the position were made during the meeting, and, on a ballot being taken, Comrade J. Coppick was selected.

A Labour Bureau.

The meeting decided that the Veterans should organize a Labour Bureau for the purpose of securing employment for returned men. They are not at all satisfied with the work of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, and are going to take a lot of the responsibility of the task of securing employment for their returning comrades upon their own shoulders. Returned men wishing employment are asked to register with the Secretary of the G.W.V.A. Letters will be sent to all the employers of labour in the city.

Kerensky Issues Orders

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.— A cablegram received here to-day from Petrograd via Paris says the Narjdnco Slovo publishes a ukase by Kerensky dated from Gatchina, announcing his arrival there at the haad of the loyal troops and ordering all units of the garrison who had joined Bolsheviki to return immediately to their duties. The paper also prints an order from General Korniloff, who has been named by Kerensky as commandant of the forces and operations against Petrograd, demanding from the garrison that delegates should be sent to him in order to know who were the traitors to Russia.

CLAIMS THAT KERENSKY HAS BEEN DEFEATED

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The complete defeat of Premier Kerensky and General Korniloff is claimed in a Russian communication received here by wireless. After bitter fighting near Tzarskoe Solo the revolutionary army completely defeated the counter revolutionary forces of Kerensky and Korniloff yesterday, says the announcement. The Soldiers' and Workmen's deputies have ordered that all measures necessary be taken for the capture of Kerensky who is retiring before our offensive.

PTE. J. J. DINEEN.
Formerly of the 93rd Battalion and now of the 18th Canadians. After spending eight months in the trenches Pte. Dineen was wounded at Vimy Ridge, and was for five months in hospital in England. CHIEF THOMPSON ORDERED TO ROUND UP THE DEFAULTERS

Police Force Instructed to Locate the Men Who Have Not Registered Under the Military Service Act Papers Will Be Asked For

CARRY YOUR COUNTER FOILS

Chief Thompson has received official instructions to carry out those clauses of the Military Service Act affecting the responsibility of the civil authorities, and as a result all Class One men may, from now on, be expected to be held up at any time on the street and asked to give proof that they have complied with the Act.

Chief Thompson has instructed his men to get busy, and so if you are stopped by a policeman and asked for your papers, you would be advised to produce a counterfoil at once and save a trip to the Police Station.

The Military Service Council has announced that defaulters who did not register before Nov. 10 can escape punishment by reporting themselves to the military authorities, so there is an avenue of escape in this way. However, this only applies in the case of a man who has not been apprehended by the police. That such men will be drafted at once is indicated by the following despatch received by the Examiner to-day from Toronto:

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Officers administrating the Military Service Act in the city decline to estimate the number of men belonging in the first class who have failed to register as provided by the proclamation of October 12 last. The worst that can happen to a man under the existing procedure is that he will, if found fit for service, and is not exempted, be drafted into one of the depot battalions at once. Then, even, it is at the discretion of the commanding officer of the depot battalion to grant any such men such leave of absence as will give them a chance to close up their affairs. "There is no desire on the part of the military authorities to deal harshly with any of these men," said a leading military officer. "We are only detaining the men brought in by the police, or who come in themselves, long enough to have them examined."

FRANK JENNE says:

UNION HAT IN THE RING

Prominent Liberals and Conservatives Last Night Decided to Call Public Meeting on Friday

ON COMMON GROUND

Prominent Liberals and Conservatives of the city, who are anxious that a strong effort be made to form a Union party here before the election is allowed to drift into a party fight, met in the offices of Moore and Wearing last night. It was pointed out that Union sentiment has been gaged in this riding by the very men who should have led the way to at least a sincere effort to bring together representatives of the two parties. Last night's conference was practically the first opportunity since the Union cabinet made its plea to the two old parties that an opportunity to bridge the local gap has been afforded those electors who believe that it is in the best interests of the country at large, not excluding West Peterborough.

Liberals and Conservatives were equally represented. Old scores were forgotten, if there were any, and a strong desire was expressed without reserve that a big push be given the Union movement here. It was realized that obstacles were being thrown in its way and that others were being dragged into the path, but these difficulties were not magnified unduly.

Meeting Friday Night.

It was decided to hold a public meeting in Victoria Hall on Friday night to which the friends of the Union plan are invited to be present. One decision was resolutely taken that the strong agitation for Union will not be thwarted until the electors, including the ladies who want Union, have had a chance to consider the prospect.

Nearly 400 Appeals Have Been Filed

(Special to the Examiner).

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Nearly 400 appeals have already been lodged with the Ontario Registrar, Mr. Glynn Osler, and approximately half of these are being made at the instance of the military representatives on behalf of the army. "We are beginning to get a pretty heavy flood of appeals, but they will not be taken up until they are sorted and listed in sufficient number to be heard by the Appeal Tribunals," said Mr. Osler to-day.

"The machinery for hearing appeals has yet to be constructed."

It is understood that one Appeal Tribunal will be established for every five exemption boards throughout the province. Registration returns continue to arrive from the outlying points within this (No. 2) district. The latest official totals show 63,586 registrations, including 57,958 claims for exemption and 5,626 reports for service.

Local Case In Belleville Goes To Spring Assizes

Mr. William Quinn's damages action against Mr. G. A. Gillespie as one party and Chief Thompson and Detective Meagher as the other, on charges of malicious prosecution and false arrest, were postponed until the Spring Assizes by Judge Masten at Belleville yesterday, providing the plaintiff pays all the costs of the action up to the present.

The suit against Mr. Gillespie was set down for hearing first, but the plaintiff was not ready to proceed because of the absence of a material witness. Both hearings were thereupon suspended.

A crate of butter had been shipped to a stranger in Belleville from the Peterborough Creamery, and the recipient, who did not pay for it, was later arrested in Western Ontario. Mr. Quinn was arrested on a mistaken identification.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH CAUSES A BIG STIR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 13.—The speech made yesterday by Premier Lloyd George in Paris, has made a stir in the local press where his references to the Allies "incredible blunder" and other matters are printed under sensational headlines. Comment on the speech is mixed up with criticism of the new Allied War Council as announced here yesterday by Chancellor Bonar Law. Some of the newspapers endorse the speech in the main, or are non-committal. Others criticize adversely the new military plan, and accuse the Premier of wishing to take over the strategic direction of the Allied campaign. Rumours in Sunday newspapers of the impending retirement of Field Marshal Haig and General Robertson, Chief of the General Staff, caused some commentators to insinuate that the reports were sent afloat intentionally by semi-official hints.

EXEMPTION BOARDS REFUSED NUMBER OF CLAIMS THIS MORNING

Sent Up for Further Examination.
Hyman Klien.
Robert George Langford.

The first applicant this morning at Tribunal No. 275 was Hyman Klien, a Russian, twenty-six years old, who has been a resident of Canada for eighteen years. Klein was slated to appear yesterday, but instead sent a letter explaining his absence.

Judge Huycke contended that a man who failed to appear on the day specified by the notice should not be given preference over men who appeared on the day they were notified. "Men who fail to appear when they are notified should be arrested," said Judge Huycke. "It is not fair to the men who comply with the Act."

The examination of Klien was proceeded with. The applicant claimed exemption on the grounds of being the sole support of a widowed mother who resides at 430 George Street. Klien is a chef by occupation, and his wages amount to $125 a month.

"You ought to make a good cook for the boys at the Front," observed Judge Huycke.

The applicant said that he would like to go, but did not think it would be right to leave his mother. Klien had not been medically examined, so the Tribunal decided to send the applicant before the local Medical Board for examination.

Exemption Disallowed.

The father of A. J. Marshall went overseas with the Railway Construction Battalion and is now an orderly in the Orpington Military Hospital, England. A. J. Marshall sought exemption on the grounds that his mother suffered from ill-health and needed his support.

"How was it you didn't enlist and your father stay at home?" inquired Lieut.-Col. Clegg.

The question went unanswered.

The financial position of the family was considered good enough to enable Marshall to join the Colours, and the exemption was disallowed.

Alexander Rose McGregor presented a Class B medical sheet, and was exempted until that class is called out.

A. T. Fontine, an E man, was exempted on the same grounds.

Farmer Exempted.

Thomas Cardwell, an A man whose post office address is Westwood, said that he was a farmer, and together with his father shared the reponsibilities of working three hundred and fifty acres.

"If we exempt you, Cardwell, you must work hard and raise all the grain and pork you can for the boys at the Front," advised Judge Huycke. "You did quite right to stay on the farm," added Judge Huycke.

The exemption was granted until such time as the applicant ceases to be a farmer.

Not Averse to Going.

The next applicant was Robert George Langford, 592 Water Street, brother of Ald. William Langford. The applicant, who is an A2 man, claimed exemption on the grounds of ill-health, also on the grounds of the importance of continuing his occupation.

"You don't mean to say that your occupation is of national importance," said Judge Huycke.

"You can't bring women in to do the work or take a man off the street," replied the applicant.

"That's a very flimsy excuse," said Judge Huycke.

Langford said that his main claim for exemption was based on a matter of health. The applicant said he was not averse to going overseas, but he did not wish to go unless he was satisfied that he could stand the work.

Langford was instructed to appear before the Medical Board for further examination.

Conditional Exemption.

V. C. Tully, an A2 man, and a telegrapher by occupation, was granted conditional exemption until 1st July on account of domestic position. Tully, who has a brother overseas, is the sole support of his mother.

Alexander Darling, another A2 man, was given conditional exemption until 1st July on account of domestic position. A brother of Darling's was killed in action.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

In this time of conflicting opinions and assertions of partisan ambition, there is one thing upon which every body can unite in sentiment and action.

We may divide our votes between or among rival political candidates, but we all can vote for the Victory Loan, and use our means—for in this matter money can not only be legitimately used, but be employed with the highest patriotism, and as good business.

Everybody is for the Victory Loan.

Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, has received letters of commendment of the Loan from our most distinguished men.

His Grace of Devonshire, the Governor-General, writes asking that he be the first subscriber.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier warmly commends the loan as an appeal not only "to the business sense, but also to the patriotism of the community," and hopes for a response "instantaneous, universal and enthusiastic."

Sir Robert Borden, on behalf of the Government, points out the obvious importance attaching to the success of the loan.

The arguments submitted are good. The loan is a good investment—5 1-2 per cent. interest and earth-solid security; but, above all, its very greatest importance consists in its necessity as a means to help accomplish what is the earnest wish of everybody—the winning of the war.

The loan is not only a good investment in the limited financial sense, but in the ultimate financial sense; the money it secures will all be spent in Canada. It will all come back to the people through manufacturing, commercial and production channels, and in this sense everybody will be benefitted.

And it is the only means by which we can help win the war without making sacrifice.

Conserve the fruits of the soil by eating more of the fish of the waters.

"DESIGNATING" CANDIDATES.

The Union government has a "parliamentary committee" whose function is to conscript Union candidates, when partizans of the Borden government want to bog the situation. In West York on Friday, at a big meeting, the five Liberal members of the joint committee of ten appointed to "designate" a Union candidate, refused to accept Mr. Wallace, the late Conservative member, and the five Conservative members insisted upon his right to be named, because he had early declared for Union government, etc., the usual partizan excuses. Nothing was done but reach an agreement to refer the naming of a union candidate to Hon. Mr. Rowell and Hon. Dr. Reid, the parliamentary candidate committee. If the committee has any luck it might come east and operate upon East and West Peterborough, where two partizan candidates are claiming to be union candidates, in spite of Sir Robert Borden's ruling. The Union government may be non-partizan, but the trail of the serpent shows in a good many of its supporters.

The Conservative machine is antagonizing Lt.-Col. Cole, of London, the nominee of the War Veterans. The Vetrans don't look so good when they interfere with pratical politics.

STRENUOUS DAYS.

Canada is in the midst of strenuous days—up to the eyes in big business, whose proper transaction involves big demands upon our patriotism and our principles.

We are in the midst of the application of compulsory service by the Military Service Act—something that seems likely to demand unremitting and undiverted attention, if the object aimed at is as speedily and effectively met as the emergency demands.

Then we have the Victory Loan campaign in full cry. That also seems to be a first duty, for the need of money and what it represents is a companion demand in the way of emergency, to the demand for reinforcements for our troops on active service.

Then we have a general election, to provide endorsation or otherwise of a Union government. There will, of course, be difference of opinion in regard to the fate of the Union government as a matter of supreme importance.

Even one of the most prominent members of the Union government seems to think the election a matter of subordinate importance to the Victory Loan. Speaking at Toronto on Friday night, Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister in the Union government, in a speech at the launching of the Victory Loan, said:

"When the campaign starts on Monday, and continues for three weeks, I shall be surprised if we do not make a sideshow of the Dominion elections."

Here we have the condition of relative importance emphasized. Canada cannot carry on the war, as she is pledged and resolved and bound in honor to do, without money, which, having regard for all considerations, is more indispensable than men.

Canada would not be out of the fight even if she sent no more men to the front. Though our splendid divisions in France and Flanders dwindled to the point of absorption in other units, Canada could still be mightily in the fight. We could supply munitions and also perhaps the greatest factor and need of fighting, food; but we can't do neither without money.

We cannot keep Canada in the fighting ranks without money, which is the measure of our service, whether in the matter of men, munitions or food. But we can at a pinch do without the Union government.

Canada is a unit in its determination to carry on the war. There is no difference of opinion upon that point. The divergence consists only as to the wisdom of the means to be employed.

The Union government is not the only Moses to lead Canada to the promised land of victory. Its chiefest justification consists in its being an improvement upon the late Bordon government. It is, however, not the only way, though it may be the better way, and the only presently available way, to help Canada to the discharge of her inevitable duty.

We once had good government in this country, under a great Canadian, whose imperialism and Canadianism—administered, not merely professed—ranked him amongst Canadian statesmen, as one of the truest friends of the Empire and of Canadian nationhood.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in the militant mania and the heroic hysteria that national intensity of interest in the war simulates, may, for the moment, seem out of sympathy with national sentiment and the sentiments of many of his devoted political disciples; but, in the larger aspect can he be altogether condemned, because thinking perhaps more broadly, regarding things with deeper insight, he strives to reach the goal by a different way?

Sir Wilfrid is in Quebec, trying to undo the work of officially-aided outlaw mischief makers. His words are not the words of an untrue Canadian. In his opening speech in Quebec he did not make a campaign speech. In his first words he "brushed aside all political problems." He declared:

"The great and dominating question, the one question, is the problem of the prosecution of this war. Every other issue is swallowed up in this."

These are true words, and the words of a true man. They need to be heeded by all Canada, and are especially needed in Quebec, where the issue has been bedevilled and the spirit of war service deadened, by a treasonable propaganda, fostered, encouraged and officially rewarded by the late government, with the specific object of "killing Laurier"—gaining party advantage and holding on to office at the risk, and with the result, of debauching a whole province, destroying unity of sentiment and unity of action, and throwing sand into the machinery of war administration and national participation in the work of Canada doing her duty, with the least impediment in the way of winning the war.

The great and dominating question, the one question, is the problem of the prosecution of this war. Every other issue, personal or party, is swallowed up in this.

SOLDIERS' VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Session of the Local District Training Board to Be Held on Nov. 14th

Returned men who wish to take advantage of the facilities afforded by the Vocational Training Courses instituted by the Board, under the Military Hospitals Commission, will be glad to learn that on Wednesday, November 14th, the District Vocational Officer, Major Good, of Kingston, accompanied by Captain Randall, will be in Peterborough to confer with men desirous of taking up training.

It is not intended that men will be assisted to change an occupation if they are at all fitted physically, to go back to it. But to endeavour to afford opportunity and instruction to any who from physical unfitness are now obliged to look to some other trade or occupation to afford employment.

The very best possible results are coming out from the efforts of the Vocationala Board, and many men to whom the future seemed to offer very little chance for employment have been placed in a position to go on with work profitably.

The officer will arrive in the city on the evening of the 13th, and can be consulted by any who may be engaged in the day time. Make appointments, in advance, with the local member of the Board, F. H. Dobbin, at the Patriotic Fund Room, and the case will have every attention.

It will be well to communicate wishes in writing, and as early as possible. These statements will be forwarded to the Kingston Office, for early consideration, and then on personal interview, the matter can be closed up.

In the meantime register your wishes at the office, as above.

USE FISH FOOD

TO THE CITIZENS OF OUR CITY:

Your City Council realizing the responsibility of this community in helping to conserve the food of the country so that we may better support those who are gallantly fighting for us in the trenches in Europe, would ask for the co-operation of every householder in the city, by urging them to buy fish, rather than beef or bacon, which are needed for the army.

Fish food is especially recommended for the reasons that with proper cooking it is appetizing and is one of the most healthful foods known. And it is very reasonable in price.

To encourage larger consumption of fish in the community a committee has been appointed by the Council to co-operate with the Dominion Fish Committee and the Fish Dealers, with the object of ensuring for the householder a continuous supply of fish at reasonable prices. Absolutely fresh fish.

Any complaints or suggestions that will tend to benefit the service may be addressed to the Fish Committee, City Buildings, Peterborough.

MIRIAM COOPER, DIRECTION WILLIAM FOX

MIRIAM COOPER, NEW MADONNA OF THE FILMS, A REAL SCREEN BEAUTY.

Co-Star with Gladys Brockwell Is Sought by Artists to Lend Her Features for Religious Subjects.

William Fox ought to go on the pay-roll of the National Arts Association as a discoverer and advocate of feminine beauty. Since the opening of his great million-dollar picture beautiful, "A Daugther of the Gods," Miss Annette Kellerman has been besieged by artists and sculptors, who desire to reproduce in oils and marble the figure of the most perfect woman in the world. Now many of those same enthusiasts are "hectoring" Miriam Cooper, co-star with Gladys Brockwell in Mr. Fox's great human story, "The Honour System," to sit for portraits for the sake of universal Art, to lend her features as a pattern for stained glass heads in church windows and pose with a babe in her arms against a fleecy cloud as the American vision of the Madonna.

Miss Cooper, who in private life is the wife of R. A. Walsh, the young genius who directed "The Honour System," is perhaps the first real beauty of the screen. There are many stars who are "cute" and pretty, but none have shown that divine radiance which is born of the presence of what, for want of a better word, we call soul, that shines through the eye and is so surely the Creator's crowning mark of perfect loveliness. Lina Cavalieri might have looked so at sixteen.

In this great melo-drama, Miss Cooper plays the part of a young girl just graduated from a convent school and she is the rarified religious type, from her saintly face and slender white hands to the little willing feet, constantly bent on errands of mercy. If any producer has the wisdom and courage to bring out a great Bible story, like the Passion Play of Oberammergau, she is the virgin for it. Her features are as clear cut as those of a cameo, and her face shines with the pure light of an altar candle.

She is not only the visible inspiration for the worshipping hero in "The Honour System," but a delight to all who see her, as a welcome and radical change from the pert, dimpled, pouting faces of the heretofore screen "divinities." When you take off your hat in the theatre which shows this throbbing drama, you will feel that you have bared your head reverentially before the visible soul of womankind.

With less experience than even the ordinary movie aspirant can muster, Miriam Cooper has already won a commanding place in an art which has enlisted many actors and actresses of talent and distinction. But if she had less experience than most of them, she has displayed qualities that are, to say the least, unusual.

Her success in "The Birth of a Nation' led to her obtaining an important role in "Intolerance," and the abilities she displayed there have brought her to the leading role in the greatest human story ever told, "The Honour System."

This wonderful human interest photo-play comes to the Grand for two days, commencing Friday, 16th November. There will be a daily matinee at 2.30.

BELGIANS CRY FOR MORE FOOD

Seven Million in Danger of Starving, 25 Million a Month Needed.

PARIS, Nov. 10. — Seven million Belgians are in danger of starving unless aid is forthcoming. Tuberculosis is mowing down the undernourished Belgian children. The funds the United States lent to the commission for the relief of Belgium are exhausted, and no provision has been made for further loans. At the moment the United States is giving nothing for the relief of Belgium.

The Relief Commission estimates that $25,000,000 a month is the minimum sum needed to continue its work. No European country can afford to lend any such sum. The commission hopes the United States will make it possible for it to feed Belgium, and permit it to buy food wherever it can be obtained with least difficulty and greatest speed, whether in America, England or France.

The tuberculosis that has swept Belgium for the last six months so alarmed the relief commission that it purchased ships despite their tremendous cost, and so was able to increase the food ration to one capable of sustaining life. Thereupon the Germans cut down the propotion of the ration they had been supplying.

THE A. B. C. OF VICTORY BONDS

Q—What is the Victory Loan of 1917?

A—It is a loan of money by the people of Canada to their Government.

Q—What does the Government want the money for?

A—To help finish the war.

Q—Yes, but where is it spent?

A—It is spent in Canada to buy supplies for the soldiers, ammunition for the guns and a thousand other things.

Q—When I lend my money to the Government what do I get in return?

A—You get a promisory note given by the Government. This note is called a "bond." It is nicely engraved and on it is the Government's promise to you signed by the Minister of Finance or his representative.

Q—What security do I get?

A—Your security is the whole power, strength and wealth of the Dominion of Canada.

Q—What interest do I get?

A—You get 5½ per cent. a year, payable every June 1st and every December 1st.

Q—You mean $5.50 on every $100 bond?

A—Yes.

Q—But I say that my interest would be 5.81 per cent.

A—So it is. You see you pay for the bond in installments while the Government pays you a full half year's interest the 1st of June next.

Q—I notice that there are 5, 10 and 20 year bonds. What does that mean?

A—It means that if you buy a 5 year bond the Government will pay your money back on December 1st, 1922. If a 10 year bond on December 1st, 1927. If a 20 year bond on December 1st, 1927.

Q—But supposing I buy a bond and find I need the money for something else?

A—Any stockbroker or bond dealer will sell the bond for you in a few hours.

Q—What is the smallest amount of money I can invest in a bond?

A—Fifty dollars.

Q—Do I have to pay cash for the bond?

A—No, you pay $10 on December 1st, $10 on January 2nd, then $20 on the first of every succeeding month until the bond is paid for.

Q—Are the bonds free from all Dominion taxation?

A—Yes.

Q—Where can I buy a bond?

A—From any broker, bank or canvasser. A canvasser is almost sure to call on you. If you are overlooked call up Victory Loan Headquarters and one will be sent.

Q—Now I presume I am making no mistake. The bonds are absolutely safe?

A—Absolutely. There is nothing safer in the world than Victory Bonds.

Q—Supposing the people of Canada do not loyally buy the bonds, what would happen?

A—Many of our industries would have to shut down and there would be general depression all over Canada. But they will buy the bonds all right, because the people in buying the bonds are going to realize that not only are they helping the Government, but they are helping themselves, as they are getting a wonderful investment.

Q—How many people do you believe will buy them?

A—Perhaps 300,000. Just think of it, over 8,000,000 people in Britain bought the last British Government bonds.

Q—I notice the prediction has been made that bonds will appreciate in value after the war. Is that correct?

A—All we can say is that most financiers say they will. If the war ends in six months some expect Victory Bonds will be worth $105 or even more.

Q—It is clearly then the duty of every Canadian to buy bonds not only to help his Government in the war but to protect his own interests.

A—Absolutely. The man who has to stay at home and buys a Victory Bond is doing his "bit." He is firing a safe and sure shot for Civilization.

German Raids Unsuccessful

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), Nov. 13.—In the region northwest and east of Rheims last night the Germans, after lively bombardments, carried out several raids, says to-day's official announcement. Their efforts brought them no success. Elsewhere the night was calm.

"What do they mean by poetic license? Does a poet have to pay for a license?" "No, if he did we'd see fewer poets."

WAR MENUS

How to Save Wheat, Beef and Bacon for the men at the front. Issued from the Office of the Food Controller for Canada.

MENU FOR WEDNESDAY.

Breakfast
Baked Apples
Buckwheat Griddle Cakes Syrup
Tea or Coffee Milk Sugar

Luncheon
Tomato Soup Croutons
Scones—Syrup
Tea

Dinner
Baked Beef Heart Potatoes Onions
Apple Dumplings Sauce

The recipes for Scones and Apple Dumplings mentioned above, are as follows:—

Scones—
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
1-3 cup milk

Mix and sift together flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt. Rub in shortening with tips of fingers; add egg well beaten (reserving a small amount of unbeaten white), and milk. Toss on a floured board, pat, and roll to 1-4-inch in thickness. Cut in squares, brush with reserved white, sprinkle with sugar, and bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes.

Apple Dumplings—

Make a crust as for tea biscuits, using suet instead of butter. Roll to a quarter of an inch. Cover with a layer of finely sliced apples. Sprinkle over with sugar and cinnamon. Sew this into cheese cloth as for Rolly-Poly. Fasten the ends. Plunge into boiling water, and boil rapidly forty minutes.

Madge—"Poor Helen! Has the worst been told?" Grace—"I think not. We are waiting for your version."

Have You Bought Your Victory Bonds?

Special For To-morrow Matinee

High-Class Fox feature drama, six parts, entitled "Sister Against Sister." The situations created in this picture make it a wonder screen production.

For Friday and Saturday we will present the greatest picture we have ever shown. It is entitled the "Jockey of Death," and thousands have been turned away at Leow's Theatre, Toronto.

No matter how big the programme we do not change the prices—10 and 15c.

Political Meetings In The Armouries

Capt. J. H. Burnham has received word from the Department at Ottawa, stating that the Armouries are at his disposal for political meetings. Mr. Burnham has notified the local representatives of the Liberal party and Mr. R. R. Hall that the Armouries are also at their disposal.

WHAT IS BEING DONE BY WOMEN'S TEACHERS' GUILD

Following is a report of the Women Teachers' Guild, Peterborough, 1916-17:

The work of the Women Teachers' Guild might rightly be divided into three phases— patriotoc, educational and social.

To raise the necessary funds to carry on the work of the first phase, patriotic, the Guild procured the able services of Ada L. Ward. Her lecture "With My Blackboard at the front," was very much appreciated. Also each teacher paid a fee of one dollar. With this money wool was purchased and one hundred and seventeen pairs of socks were knit by the teachers.

During the year the Guild met the last Friday of each month in the Kindergarten of one of the schools. The programme carried out at these meetings was both educational and social. The countries of the Allies were studied. At each meeting a paper was read on one or two of these countries, and as far as possible a few times the refreshment served was the food of the country studied.

Victory Loan Public Meeting in the Grand Opera House Thursday

A "booster" meeting to push along the Victory Loan campaign in Peterborough will be held in the Grand Opera House on Thursday night. The city is invited to the full capacity of the theatre, and it is expected that the enthusiasm generated will provide an auxiliary energy to the campaign teams, and that the addresses will fully inform the public of all the facts and details of the Victory Loan.

Among the speakers will be Mr. W. L. McKinnon, B.A.; Mr. N. S. Davidson, K.C., of Toronto; Judge Huycke, and other local men. A programme of music will be provided. A big attendance is expected, and it is hoped that this mass meeting will be an event in the Victory Loan campaign.

EXEMPTION BOARDS REFUSED NUMBER OF CLAIMS

vented by a scarlet fever quarantine from filing his claim for exemption. He was ordered to write Major Cook at Kingston explaining the cause of his failure to comply with the regulations.

Father Applied.

Edward Brock, 328 Charlotte street, who stated that his ill health prevented him from attempting heavy work, applied for the exemption of his son, George Cameron Brock, whose assistance was said to be essential to the father.

"I've been troubled for fourteen years with hemorrhage," said the father, who is a carpenter. "I'm troubled a lot with lumbago," he added.

"We've all got that," commented Mr. Aylmer. "A little soda will fix it up."

Mr. Brock presented a statement of ill health from Dr. Amys, but was sent back for a more detailed report.

His other son has been at the front thirteen months.

Was With 39th Battalion.

Frank Milliken, Wolfe street, is employed as an inspector with the Imperial Munitions Board. He enlisted with the 39th Battalion, was discharged at Belleville, but is now classed an "A2" man. He was also rejected three years ago by Col. Young when he recruited the first overseas battery here.

"The trouble is they have raised you to "A2" grade now," Mr. Aylmer stated.

Mr. Milliken claimed exemption under the domestic clause. He is the sole support of his aunt, who has taken care of him since his mother died when he was seven months old. His only brother is on service in France. Exemption allowed as long as Mr. Milliken remains in the employ of the Munitions Board.

Claim Was Refused.

Rejected twice under the voluntary system of recruiting, Gilbert Downer, now an "A2" man, is still game. The appeal on the ground of domestic hardship was disallowed, but his chief concern seemed to be whether his wife whom he married in September, would receive the separation allowance if he were taken into service. Mr. Aylmer reassured him on that point and stated that the men would not be called out until December 28th.

Claim Disallowed.

Vincent M. McCabe was classed "A2" by the Medical Board. He was the third man examined under the Military Act and did not tell the doctors of a nervous trouble, upon which he based his claim for exemption. His appeal was refused.

Norman Arnold Pammett, 277 Stewart street, a loom fixer at the Auburn Woollen Mills, applied on domestic grounds, stating that he was helping support his father, mother and cousin. Exemption was refused.

James E. Flett, a C.P.R. telegrapher, made a claim on the ground of the importance of continuing in his present position. Decision reserved.

Neglected to Report.

Harry Clements, a Dummer township man, boarding at 82 McDonnel street, is in Category "E," but through a misunderstanding failed to report at the post office. He was instructed to write Major Cook at Kingston.

Father Died Recently.

Noble Maxwell, 708 Concession street, told the tribunal his father had died two weeks ago, his mother had been ill four years and had been confined to bed during the past week. He has three sisters, two of them married, and one at home who is partially crippled. One of the married sisters made the claim for his exemption, but the tribunal disallowed it.

Just Two Days Within the Act.

Thos. J. Doughty was declared just two days within the Military Act. He reached his 20th birthday on October 10th and the proclamation was issued on October 12th. His father went overseas but was discharged in England. He also has a brother at the front.

"I think our family has done pretty well, two out of three," Mr. Doughty said.

His appeal was made on domestic grounds, but was disallowed. He declared he would carry his case to a higher tribunal, and Mayor Duffus, the military representative, stated that he intended to support Mr. Doughty's claim.

Joseph Henderson's claim, heard yesterday, was disallowed. He was given until January 15th to arrange his business affairs.

Tried Flying Corps.

James Michael Heffernan, a pattern maker with the Colonial Weaving Company, failed to meet the physical requirements for the Flying Corps, but is an "A2" man. He tried to enlist about eighteen months ago, but was rejected. His only brother was killed in action not long ago.—Decision reserved.

MADAME NELLI GARDINI—Famous prima donna, who will appear here in a concert under the auspices of the Great War Veterans' Association on November 14th. She will be assisted by the well-known pianist, Mr. Frederick C. Frien. Madame Gardini will be remembered here by her magnificent singing of the role of Leonora in "Il Trovatore," with Boston Grand Opera Company last season.

LABOUR AND LIBERALS UNITE IN WINNIPEG

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WINNIPEG, Nov. 13.— Labour and Laurier have united in Winnipeg. This fusion of parties opposed to the Union government and conscription was effected yesterday at the Laurier Liberal headquarters. At the Laurier Liberal conventions to be held this week the names of R. A. Rigg for North Winnipeg and R. S. Ward for Centre, Independent Labour party delegates will be endorsed. The political situation in Centre and North Winnipeg Federal riding has reached what political observers to-day described as the zenith of political complexity. The prospects are that in the north there will be at least a three sided contest, while in the centre, unless something extraordinary happens, the chances are that five candidates will appear on the ballots.

St. Andrew's Church Notes

Tuesday evening at 8 p.m., the regular monthly meeting of the Young Ladies' Mission Band. It is hoped that every member will make a special effort to be present as this will be a business meeting. All those having mite-boxes are requested to return them not later than Tuesday evening.

Wednesday evening, at 8 p.m., the regular mid-week prayer meeting.

Thursday, from 2.30 p.m. to 5.30 p.m., the Red Cross Society will meet for sewing, for receiving and giving out work.

Thursday, at 8 p.m., the Military Service Committee will meet at the home of Mrs. F. L. Robinson, 225 Charlotte street.

Shaughnessy Means To See Law Obeyed

MONTREAL, Nov. 12—The following has been sent out by Lord Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., as a "23 message," which takes precedence over all other messages, and is communicated to every employee of the company.

"Under the Military Service Law, it is illegal to engage or to continue in the Company's service, any person within class one, who has not on or before November 10, 1917, reported for military service, or applied for exemption, and the Company is required forthwith after said date to ascertain and report to the Government the names, addresses and whereabouts of all employees within class one who have not so reported for service or applied for exemption. Please take measures to secure observation of the law in these respects. (Signed) Shaughnessy."

ARE YOU "MUSIC HUNGRY?"

Call and have a talk with Mr. J. W. Stuart at 372 Water Street. He has the agency for the Willis and Gerhard Heintzman Pianos, and can satisfy your "music hunger." He will put you wise about the right way to buy on an easy instalment plan.

Arranging For Gardini Concert

At last night's meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association the action of the executive in arranging for the appearance of Madame Gardini in a concert under the auspices of the G.W.V.A. was endorsed, and an entertainment committee, composed of Comrades W. R. Elliott, chairman; E. W. Watson, W. Hughes, W. Perks, G. Fallen, J. J. Cook, F. Barnes, and W. Badley, was appointed. This committee will meet tonight at 7.30 o'clock to arrange the details in connection with the concert.

CHILL STARTS COLD WAS SICK FOUR WEEKS JUST ABLE TO CRAWL ABOUT

Mr. Weldon T. Hawkes, Curryville, N.B., writes: "Last spring I was taken very ill with a severe cold. I got wet and it started with a chill. I was sick four weeks, and was just able to crawl about. People all said I had inflammation of the lungs, and I think I did. I told a friend to get me two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the first one was taken my cold and cough were broken up, and the second did its work completely. I am raising a family and I find that it is a good medicine for the children."

There is no remedy that will cure stubborn colds or coughs, the kind that won't let go, like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It allays the inflammation, soothes the irritation, heals the diseased mucous lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and rids the system completely of all the bad effects of lingering coughs and colds.

There are so many spurious "Pine" preparations on the market that you should see you get "Dr. Woods" when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FUNERAL OF J. L. WOOD

The funeral of the late John Leigh Wood took place yesterday afternoon. A service was held at his late residence, 39 Balsam Avenue, Toronto, on Saturday by Revs. McIntyre and Stewart, and the remains were brought to Peterborough for burial in the Little Lake Cemetery.

Yesterday the funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Rowand, assisted by Rev. Mr. Whattam, Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton singing "Abide with me."

The pallbearers were Messrs. James Finnie, Robert Hall, James McDonald, Alex. Fitzgerald, Harry Morgan, and C. H. Huffman.

The deceased was a member of Alpha Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Toronto, which sent a beautiful floral tribute, as well as a large number of friends both in Toronto and Peterborough.

The late Mr. Wood will be greatly missed in the circle of friends in which he was to be found, both in Toronto and Peterborough.

The World's Week of Prayer

In the programme for the World's Week of Prayer special attention is given to the countries in America.

Canada. The Association in Canada gives thanks and praise for a year of real advance; for enlarged opportunities of reaching girls in factories; for the opening of new departments of national service, both for munition workers and for girls working on the land. Prayer that the right workers to go abroad under the Foreign Department may be found, now that the interest and giving is increasing; for the rapidly growing Girls' Work Department in many cities and the conferences held in conjunction with the Sunday School; that the training course to be held in Montreal next winter may be blessed, and that University graduates may see in Association work a great field for Christian service.

United States. Praise for the opportunities offered in connection with the Cafeteria near the Bill Sunday Tabernacle, where for ten weeks many thousands have been ministered unto in many ways; for the satisfactory work done on the border in connection with the mobilization camps, and for the opportunities opened in connection with the new camps all over the country; that among the students there have been results along religious lines which are deep and satisfying especially through evangelistic campaigns; class and round table work and the splendid giving on the part of women students to the prison camp work in Europe.

Barbadoes. Praise for steady continuance of work in spite of any difficulties. Prayer for a revival of spiritual life, and that sympathetic friends and supporters may be raised up for the Association.

Grenada. Praise for the spirit of liberality evidenced among our members at this time of crisis. Prayer that members and workers may realize their need of God's divine spirit and more earnestly seek to be set apart for His service in the world.

South America. Prayer for the work already in progress; that the nine secretaries needed at once may be found; that an industrial secretary and a student secretary may be found for Buenos Ayres.

MISS HELEN LOSANITCH—Of Serbia, who will deliver a free lecture in the Collegiate Assembly Hall on Wednesday evening.

WESTERN FARMERS ADDRESS MEETING

That the farmers' clubs in the vicinity of Peterborough are wide awake has been shown within the past few days, when following the receipt of word that farmers prominent in the organized farmers' movement in Western Canada were to be in the vicinity of Peterborough, arrangements were made within a few hours for these men to address a series of meetings this week.

To-night Mr. J. Orchard, a director of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, and Mr. A. A. Powers of Orono, a director of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, Limited, of Toronto, will address a meeting in Stewart's Hall, Otonabee Township. To-morrow (Wednesday) night, Mr. P. F. Woodbridge, the secretary of the United Farmers of Alberta, and Messrs. Orchadd and Powers will address the members of the Fairmount Farmers' Club, near Ida. On Thursday evening Messrs. Powers and Orchard will attend a meeting of the Sixth Line Farmers' Club in the Sixth Line School House, Otonabee. Other clubs in the vicinity would have been pleased to have heard these speakers, but they could not stay long enough to make this possible.

Arrangements for these meetings were made through Farm and Dairy, which received word from Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, that these speakers would be available for the meetings.

Boy Scouts Have A Hike

St. Alban's Boy Scouts, comprised of two patrols, took their first "hike" last Saturday afternoon. No. 2 Patrol led the way to some woods on the Gravel Road, which was followed by No. 1 Patrol picking up the Scout signs. Semaphore messages passed between the two patrols. A very enjoyable time was spent. This troop of Boy Scouts is growing rapidly and making good progress under their instructors and a hearty welcome is extended to any boy, twelve years or over who would like to join. Information may be obtained by addressing Mr. G. Whiteside, Brownton P.O.

"The Water of Eternal Youth"

The beauties of the Austrian court used a lotion which was so effectual in keeping the face smooth and free from wrinkles, even in the aged, they named it the "water of eternal youth."

Some one recently has divulged the secret of this wonderful, though exceedingly simple, wrinkle lotion, which in her gratitude she has similarly dubbed a preserver of youth: One ounce pure saxolite (powdered), dissolved in a half pint witch hazel—that's all there is to it. Any woman can get these ingredients at her druggists, put them together, and use the solution with entire safety. To bathe the face in the same brings immediate results, even in case of the deeper wrinkles and furrows. This is also effective for hanging cheeks and double chin.

Dear Sir: If it is no presumption, will you kindly grant a working man a little space in The Examiner.

At the Liberal convention on Saturday, after nominating Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. Wearing put a resolution favoring a Union Convention to adopt a candidate. I think the attitude struck by the Liberals very commendable, showing, as it does, the desire to meet the Conservatives on equal ground. It is hoped the Conservatives reciprocate this same spirit. I cannot see why all parties cannot get together, and nominate a candidate that would be acceptable to all, and send him to Ottawa by acclamation. By so doing, avoiding the turmoil and expense of a contest. I am impartial to any political party, for the simple reason I do not see the need of parties. To my mind, if large business concerns, towns and cities, can be run successfully without antagonism, why not a nation. Not only that, the country probably loses the services of some of its ablest men because they are on the Opposition. For to my mind parties are very much the same as two men in an argument—not so much to get the best out of it, but to down the other fellow—and may be antagonistic to the welfare of the country.

We have an object lesson in the case of Russia, which has been reduced to anarchy and death, and not even able to defend her own frontiers. In view of this and the critical state of affairs in Italy, there never was a more urgent need for all to be united in our determination to do all in our power to win the war. Everything depends upon it. If we lose—well, it doesn't matter. The Central Powers will look after that. I don't suppose that we would fare much better than Alsace and Lorraine, after the Franco-Prussian war. It is my conviction that the British navy has saved the world so far from German domination. If Germany was dominating the seas, she would soon dominate everything else Munroe doctrine, or no Munroe doctrine. They are only scraps of paper. Anybody who has read any of their pan-Germanism will know what their ambitions are in this direction—a world-wide organization to propagate their German gospel. If they were a foe that observed the rights of others, that observed the laws of international warfare, they would be worthy of respect. They have, and are, and will violate anything and everything to win. Germany is smart—and so is Satan.

In my humble opinion, our boys are fighting to maintain our national independence. The Allies are fighting for the rights and privileges of smaller nations to live unmolested. They are fighting for peace and the destruction of Prussian militarism—"when the swords shall be turned into plowshares and the spears into 'pruning hooks'"—when the efforts of all men shall be turned into usefulness and construction, rather than destruction and waste. This can only be accomplished by the defeat of the Central Powers. To do that there must be unity of purpose. A house divided against itself cannot stand.

So let us unite to strengthen the hands of those in authority by electing a Union member by acclamation. Let us remember that we are citizens of no mean country, with all the resources, practically untouched. Canada with wisdom and good management, clean and sound administration, should become one of the greatest of nations.

W. HUNT.

Chamberlain St., Nov. 12th.

Editor of the Examiner.

Peterborough, Nov. 12, 1917.

Sir,—I would like to send this open letter to the organised labour of this city, with your permission, through the columns of the Examiner.

What is organised labour going to do with regard to the coming election? Conservatives are putting up a win-the-war candidate; Liberals are doing the same thing. Why does not Labour start right now and put up a "Labour win-the-war candidate?" If labour is to reap the reward that will be its due after the war, it should have its members in the very next Parliament. Mr. Burnham no doubt has served West Peterborough well. As one walks the streets of this city, he is still seen in company with the old gang. Nowadays things in general are going apace, and anything fossilised will be crowded out. Let Labour introduce the young blood, and have it borne in mind that labour is not, as has been claimed in the past, a mere commodity. It is human power. It expends itself for the purpose of maintaining not only its own life, but the life of those dependent upon it; and those dependent upon labour include the whole world, capitalists, financiers, manufacturers, etc. In the past, labour was given as little as possible, consequently labour was abused and weakened. Now, let us place it upon the basis where it belongs, where it can secure from the Government the recognition of its services. Let the world know that without labour, human life cannot continue, and that labour's ideal is the betterment of the whole race. Let us look forward to the time when the worth of a man is not in money that comes from the toil of others, but in the service he is able to render society. New ideals must be maintained, placing the welfare of mankind above the present concern of prosperity.

The treatment of labour is the tragedy of history. Now labour looks forward to a new era, rich with the promise of achievements and with the prospect of intellectual and moral advancement, giving the whole race a more certain hold on the principles of wise living that alone can lead to happiness. Organised Labour, please go to it. There are plenty of good local men—young men.—Yours,

T. Tooms.

GREAT WAR VETERANS ENDORSE BURNHAM

Unanimously Decide to Support His Candidature in Coming Election—"I'm Prepared to Sacrifice My Life to Defeat Laurier" One Comrade Announces.

Moved by Comrade R. H. Muir, seconded by Comrade Alf. Glendennen—That this Association endorse and unanimously support Capt. J. H. Burnham as the win-the-war candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his union administration, and that we cable our comrades in the trenches the action we have taken and impress upon them that we who have fought alongside of them call upon them to fully support the candidate whom their comrades who have returned to Canada are placing before them and who is pledged to support the Union government in the full prosecution of the war. And that we who have returned, assure them that we are still in the great fight with them and are prepared to go the limit to see that they are not left alone by Sir Wilfrid Laurier or his followers.

The above resolution was unanimously passed by a standing vote at a largely attended meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association held last night in the recreation room of the armouries, with President H. J. Staunton in the chair. The motion came after an interesting discussion on the political situation, during the course of which the Veterans left no doubt as to their feelings in regard to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his policy concerning the Military Service Act. There was some difference of opinion shown, but only as regards the advisability of postponing action by the Veterans until after the official nominations, in view of the possibility of a Union convention being called. President Staunton advised delayed action, but the majority of the members favoured going ahead at once with the work of endorsing a candidate.

Capt. Burnham, who is honourary president of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. was present at the meeting.

The discussion over the political situation was prefaced by the reading of a manifesto from Comrade Jos. J. Shanahan of Ottawa, the acting president of the Dominion executive of the G.W.V.A., calling upon the members everywhere to leave no stone unturned to ensure the defeat of any anti-conscriptionist candidate.

"What action do the comrades wish to take in this matter?" asked President Staunton.

"I am of the opinion," remarked Comrade R. H. Muir, "that we are entitled to send a strong delegation to a Union convention if one is held to choose a candidate. As far as I could see the soldiers were side-stepped at the Liberal convention on Saturday and were not considered in the fight at all."

President Staunton pointed out that Saturday's convention was purely a party one, and the Veterans had no right as a body to take part any more than they would at a Conservative convention. If it were a Unionist meeting the situation would be different.

Comrade Muir explained that his idea was that the Veterans should be strongly represented if a Union meeting were held.

"How are you going to hold a Unionist convention?" asked Capt. Burnham, "when the Liberals voted the proposal down?"

"The Liberal party has spoken," continued Capt. Burnham, "and we can't have a Union convention as a result."

Capt. Burnham said that he had been striving all last week, writing to the press and to others to avoid party strife, but the Liberal convention had voted down by a large majority a resolution introduced by two representative Liberals and calling for negotiations for a Union convention. The convention refused to go ahead with the proposal, and put a straight Liberal in the field," concluded the speaker.

Urged Action.

"It is up to us to endorse a candidate right now," said Comrade Muir, "and let the people see where we stand."

"Personally, I think it would be better to defer action until after the official nominations on Nov. 19th," remarked President Staunton. "The candidates will be official then and we will know just what to do."

"After reading that letter from our acting president," said Secretary Whatley, "I think it is up to us to speak now and let everybody know our position."

Capt. Burnham remarked that he did not want to take advantage of the fact that he had been invited to the meeting and that Mr. Hall was not present. "However, the invitation to join in a Unionist convention had been turned down by the Liberals and there was nothing left but for the Veterans to go on and decide which of the two candidates in the field they wished to support. A third man coming in would wreck the campaign.

"Our instructions from headquarters," Secretary Whatley pointed out, "were that we should invite the candidates to come before us and state their position. However, Mr. Hall is pledged to Laurier, and I think we can dispense with him all together. We all know his views. What we want is a man who is out and out to enforce conscription and to bring the war to a successful conclusion as quickly as possible."

"The only man we can support," said Comrade E. Bird, "is the man who is in favour of conscription. There is not a member of the Association who wants to support a Laurier man."

"It is absolutely impossible for us to support Laurier," said Comrade A. Glendennen. "The only way to get conscription is to support the Borden government."

"There is none of us want to support Mr. R. R. Hall," remarked Comrade Coppick.

Comrade Theobald suggested sending a resolution to the Liberal Association giving the views of the G.W.V.A.

"I think we should support a man who has already proved himself, a man who is present to-night," was Comrade H. Gilbert's views.

President Staunton pointed out the possibility of there being a third man in the field if the Unionist plan goes through, and again advised delay.

"We are the men who should have the say," said Comrade Muir. "We don't have to take back water from them. We faced everything under God's sun in Belgium. Why should we hesitate to take steps to face Laurier and his crowd. I am prepared to sacrifice my life to defeat Laurier."

Endorse Soldiers' Candidate.

"There is nothing for us to do but to go ahead and endorse our soldiers' candidate," said Comrade J. C. Smith. "That'll put a stop to the third man coming out."

Comrade W. R. Elliott, M.C., pointed out that if a third man came into the field there would undoubtedly be two with practically the same platform and the vote in favour of conscription would be split. "We want to get the whole body together," said Lieut. Elliott, "and come out for the man we want to endorse. The time is short and we might do good by endorsing our man now."

Comrade Coppick agreed that the candidate should be endorsed at once it might stop a third man from coming out.

Comrade Muir's motion was then put and was unanimously carried by a standing vote.

Capt. Burnham's Address.

Addressing the meeting after the motion had been declared carried, Capt. Burnham expressed his gratification at the confidence that had been shown in him. Discussing the situation, Capt. Burnham remarked that the Administration was not really a union one. It could only have been so if Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as the titular head of the Liberal party, had accepted Sir Robert Borden's offer to form a coalition. However, Sir Wilfrid had refused and Sir Robert Borden had been compelled to pick prominent Liberals here and there simply in a desperate attempt at unionism.

"It is not really a Unionist administration," remarked the speaker. "There has been a lot of nonsense talked about it. The situation is that the Liberals who are in the government do not officially represent Liberalism. In fact they have been denounced as traitors."

Capt. Burnham said that the Veterans were at liberty to withdraw their support if another candidate came out. "If a better man comes along, vote for him if he is for Borden," said the speaker, who wound up his address by saying that he wanted all the Veterans' names on his nomination paper.

"I'd rather have one soldier's name than all the people in Peterborough," remarked the speaker.

FORCED INTO GERMAN ARMY.

Persons who have Lost Original Citizenship Must Serve.

Copenhagen, November 12. — The German military authorities continue the practice of putting into the army persons living in Germany who have lost their original citizenship without acquiring German nationality.

A new order says that former nationals of foreign states, including former Americans, will not be employed with the front line troops, but must serve in the armies of occupation, or elsewhere behind the front. This applies to German-Americans who returned to Germany to live after being naturalized in the United States.

The children of such parents are liable for service in the trenches in case they have not completed the necessary steps to obtain American citizenship.

WAS OFF WORK 4 or 5 MONTHS A YEAR WITH CONSTIPATION

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mr. Sylvester Clements, Galt, Ont., writes: "I desire to express my heartfelt thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I have been suffering from a bad stomach and constipation and would be off work 4 or 5 months a year. I was hardly able to be inside without getting a severe headache. I tried doctors' medicine and other remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Now I can work inside without any headaches or pain. I would not be without your remedy for anything. I write this so that anyone suffering the same as I did may use them and be cured."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The British Forces that captured Gaza have made fresh progress, and the forces on the south-west are moving westward. The enemy is hastily trying to escape down the railway, from which some of his forces may be cut off. Other British forces are moving northward from Beer-sheba and down the Hebron Road. The British are very close to Hebron, where the Turks were yesterday reported to be making a stand, and are only a little over 20 miles from Jerusalem. The principal roads and railways are shown on the map.

A WAR WIDOW FOR SECOND TIME

Wife of Late Pte. A. Leach Has Lost Two Husbands Through the War

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—In the happy summer of 1914, before the war saddened every bright day, Private Harold Goodall of the Queen's Own Rifles, and Miss Barnes, 13 Mansfield Avenue, were married.

It was only a few months later, when Canada sent her first troops to help the Mother Country, that Private Goodall volunteered to go with his regiment.

At the time when the bridegroom soldier with his comrades-at-arms was waiting for the great push at St. Julie one of the first Toronto war babies was born at his home. After that famous victory, the young husband was first of all reported "missing" and then "presumed killed" on 22nd April, 1915.

In December of the same year Mrs. Goodall lost her baby too.

Was Happy Again.

While staying at Gravenhurst in the summer of 1916, Mrs. Goodall met Pte. A. Leach, a 33rd Battery returned man. Pte. Leach was a Peterborough lad of twenty-three years, and had been over a year overseas.

It was not unnatural that the young war widow and the sharer of her late husband's perils should be naturally attracted. For the second time Mrs. Goodall was led to the altar by a soldier of the King, although Pte. Leach was not thoroughly recovered from his illness. As time went on he became worse, and it was found that tuberculosis had been contracted through exposure at the Front. Pte. Leach died at Gravehurst Sanatorium last month, and was buried with military honours in Toronto.

At 13 Mansfield Avenue Mrs. Leach has a sweet baby boy to lessen her grief.

In three years Mrs. Leach's unique experience is—the bride at two weddings, the widow of two soldiers, and the mother of two soldiers' sons. Both husbands were born in England but had lived in Canada for many years.

Mrs. Leach's mother is English-born, too, although the past thirty-two years of her life have been spent in Canada. She has had twelve children, ten living, and has just buried her youngest baby of ten months.

Another daughter's husband, Cor. Frank Waite, was wounded in April, 1917, and later died from wounds. He was a 95th Battalion man, and leaves a widow and three small children.

BERLIN BUTTER RATION CUT.

Copenhagen, November 12. — The butter ration in Greater Berlin has been reduced for the winter to thirty grams (approximately one ounce) weekly. Fifty grams of margarine are also granted but the newspapers point out that war margarine is principally water and has slight nutritive value.

Food Minister von Waldow has announced that a special department would be organized to enlighten the people on the food situation. The announcement evoked the comment from one newspaper that "the stomach cannot read."

PETERBOROUGH TOOK $103,600 OF VICTORY LOAN ON FIRST DAY

Manufacturers Facilitate Work of Committee—Over Six Millions Absorbed Up to Noon To-day —Little Stories of the Campaign

$6,710,600 OF VICTORY LOAN ALREADY TAKEN.

TORONTO, Nov. 13. — The financial committee of the Dominion Executive of the Victory Loan announces that up till noon to-day $6,710,600 had been subscribed in 33 Ontario centres out of 58. Canvassing is continuing briskly at centres all over the Dominion, and those in charge of organization are thoroughly convinced of the success of the campaign.

Peterborough's subscription to the Victory Loan yesterday totalled $103,600.

W. L. McKinnon wired this morning as follows to the local committee: "Three counties in the Eastern division haven't reported. If all had, I feel sure the Eastern division team members would have headed all divisions. It seems clear that we have beaten Toronto team members. Our division shows over $800,000."

The first day's local purchases of the Victory Bonds were reported as follows:

By the local banks	$70,050
Norwood banks	2,000
Local collectors	31,550
	$103,600

The teams showed the following subscriptions:

North Ward—
T. W. Robinson, capt.	$11,150
South Ward—
Ed. Walton, capt.	3,350
East Ward—
F. Whitehouse, capt.	6,500
West Ward—
Peter Campbell, capt.	7,650
Centre Ward—
D. H. Moore, capt.	2,900
	$31,550

The canvassers called at one house and found nobody at home but the maid. The latter enquired if she could buy a bond, and when given an affirmative answer, immediately signed up for a fifty dollar bond.

The greeting Mr. E. R. Wilson extended Messrs. Ed. Walton and Ward Patterson in their canvass of the Peterborough Machine Company's employees yesterday was decidedly helpful and encouraging. Every facility was offered the Victory Loan team, and as a result over thirty-five applications for bonds were received, and it is practically certain that this number will be increased to fifty for a total of $7,500.

Mr. E. G. Patterson called at headquarters yesterday afternoon, and as Superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Company assured the committee that he would give every assistance to the teams that visited the C.G.E. plant. Assurances of his nature are stimulants to the workers.

An apprentice at the Peterborough Machine Company's factory, only a boy making his first step up the ladder of a trade, told the Loan workers on their first approach that he was not in a financial position to buy a bond. It was pointed out to him that he could subscribe to a $50 bond by paying one dollar a week, and by this easy plan have it entirely paid for within a year, and thus secure the advantage of the interest, promote his own thrift, and help in he patriotic work the Loan represented. He said he would think it over, and when the canvassere returned he called to them that he wanted a bond. His name was entered on the same list with workmen who had subscribed as much as five hundred dollars each.

Mr. Frank Whitehouse reported an incident that illustrates the spirit in which this Loan is being taken up. A woman had a sum of money earning six per cent. She wanted to buy some of the bonds, but to do so she had to sacrifice an investment that was earning six per cent. for the Victory Loan bonds at 5 1-2 per cent. She was moved, of course, by the patriotic desire to help in the subscription of the Loan.

The first Victory Bond bought through the Peterborough office of the new Canadian Loan went to a young woman who is engaged as a maid in an Ashburnham residence. It was for one hundred dollars.

A waitress at the hotel at which Mr. Warren is staying is down for $500 of the Loan. Her husband is at the front, and she has been saving his allowance and her own earnings, and now she is lumping the litle nest egg into a subscription of which she may well feel proud.

City Engineer Parsons has presented headquarters with six maps of the city that should prove very useful to the workers.

ANOTHER HEAVY LIST

Clearing Station on Nov. 4th, suffering from multiple gun-shot wounds. Pte. Mulligan enlisted at London, Ont., and went overseas with No. 5 Canadian Field Ambulance. He had been in France about six months.

PTE. G. G. EASON.

Mrs. Geo. Hurl, 486 Rogers Street, has been officially notified from Ottawa that her brother, Pte. George G. Eason, of the Mounted Rifles, was formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to the 3rd Australian Casualty Clearing Station on Nov. 5th, dangerously ill and wounded. Pte. Eason, who is only nineteen years of age, enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion in October, 1915, and went overseas with that unit, going to France with the first draft to the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

PTE. WM. JARVIS.

Mrs. Wm. Jarvis, 253 Bethune St., received official word from the Director of Records that her son, Pte. William Thomas Jarvis, of the Mounted Rifles, and formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to the 149th Field Ambulance on October 30th, suffering from gun-shot wounds in the head and thigh. Pte. Jarvis went overseas as a member of No. 5 Platoon of the 93rd, and went to France with a draft to the 5th C.M.R. This is the second time he has been on the casualty list.

PTE. LAWRENCE JOHNSTON.

Pte. Lawrence Johnston, who enlisted here in March, 1916, with the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, afterwards being transferred in a draft to the 5th C. M. R. in France, is officially reported wounded in the recent fighting. No particulars have been received as to the nature of his injuries.

PTE. O. E. CARRINGTON.

Pte. O. E. Carrington, a former member of the 93rd Battalion, who enlisted with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit in March, 1916, is officially reported wounded. This is the second time he has been mentioned in the casualty list. Pte. Carrington's relatives live at Consecon, Ont.

PTE. DUNCAN McKINNON.

Pte. Duncan McKinnon's name has to be added to the long list of former 93rd men who have been killed or wounded in the recent fighting. Pte. McKinnon, who enlisted in the 93rd here in November, 1915, is officially reported wounded. His next-of-kin resides at Cambray.

LANCE-CORP. W. G. NICHOLLS.

Word has been received that Lance-Corp. Wesley G. Nicholls, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here just after the battalion left for Barriefield Camp, has been admitted to the 1st Field Ambulance on Nov. 3rd, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the right elbow. For some time after going overseas Lance-Corp. Nicholls was with the Pay and Records Office in London, and then went to France in a draft to the 21st Battalion. His mother, Mrs. Wm. Nicholls, lives in Bridgenorth.

PTE. JOHN DUNN.

Official word was received to-day that Pte. John Dunn, who enlisted with the 59th Battalion, here, has been admitted to 44th Casualty Clearing Station on Nov. 5th, suffering from gun shot wounds in the legs. Pte. Dunn has been in France for some time.

PTE. LORNE WEAVER.

Mr. Robert Weaver, 184 Brock St., was notified from Ottawa this morning that his son, Pte. Lorne Weaver, Canadian Infantry, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to No. 6 Field Ambulance Depot on Nov. 4th, suffering from shell gas. Pte. Weaver is only eighteen years of age, and reached France in a draft from the 93rd Battalion just before his seventeenth birthday. He has been at the front for over a year with the 19th Battalion.

PTE. CHAS. JOHNSTON.

An official message from Ottawa to Mr. Wm. Johnston of Chandos, states that his son, Pte. Chas. Johnston, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was drafted to France, is ill, and has been admitted to No. 26 General Hospital, Exaples.

The Entertainment Committee of the Great War Veterans' Association are requested to meet at the Barrie Building a 7.30 o'clock to-night. All the members are requested to be present.

Mrs. Shadgett has received word that her husband, Pte. James Shadgett, has returned to the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and is again in the front line trenches. For some time Pte. Shadgett was a member of a transport unit.

Punishment Is Certain

BRITISH JUSTICE INEXORABLE IN FINDING OUT OFFENDERS UNDER THE LAW.

British justice is just as direct and sure to punish those who break the country's law as it is to punish the Huns who break international laws. Sooner or later, a British country, but usually sooner, law-breakers are run down and become very sorry that they offended. Their punishment is severe.

The Military Service Act is the law of Canada and, as such, it will be enforced, with all necessary firmness. It has back of it a stronger determination and a greater weight of available power than any other law in the country since, for the time being, it is probably the most important of our laws, to this country and to the Allies. Those who imagine they can fly in the face of this legislation are carrying out the wishes of their worst enemies. Their number is small, but compared with the majesty of British justice, their influence is smaller than their number.

"The Fall Of The Romanoffs" Is Wonderful

"The Fall of the Romanoffs" at the Grand Opera House last night proved one of the most interesting and instructive seen here for a long time. It furnished a good answer to the question, "What is Russia doing?" The piteure realistically and vividly depicts the story of the Russian revolution and the events that preceded it. The betrayal of Russia by the villainous Rasputin and his attempt to secure a separate peace with Germany are clearly shown.

Secrets of the Russian court, the activities of the pro-German Czarina, the graft and intrigue all become clear to the spectators as they watch the firm. "The Fall of the Romanoffs" is cleverly acted and staged and should be seen by everybody. The film will be at the Grand to-night and to-morrow night, with matinees in the afternoon.

Miss Winnifred Evans added to the enjoyment of the evening by her singing of two patriotic songs, "Liberty" and "When We Wind Up the Watch on the Rhine," in which her rich voice was displayed to good advantage.

Taking Inventory of All French Property

Paris. — The obligatory declaration by French citizens of property, real or personal, belonging to them, and situated in countries at war with France, decreed recently, is explained officially to be "necessary to determine what measure should be taken concerning the interests of French citizens in the enemy's territory and to negotiate with the allies as to concerted measures."

This information will also be required in peace negotiations, it is pointed out, to enable the government to defend both public and private interests and safeguard an important part of the national wealth.

Similar measures were long ago taken by Germany, but with a more radical purpose in view—the actual confiscation of the property of French subjects, according to the view held here. Retaliation has been advocated and even recommended by parliamentary committees. The decree does not intimate that the government intends to go that far. The main object is to arrive at an approximate estimate of the value of the pledges of this kind held by Germany, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria.

The decree applies to property held by the Germans in occupied French territory. There are some necessary exemptions arising from obvious difficulties of application.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

This week the Five-Pin League, which has been in progress during the past two months at the Water Street Bowling Alleys, will come to a close. The Grocers look like the League champions, with the Centrals close behind them for second place. There will be a great fight for third place.

The remaining four games to be played are:

To-night — Frontenacs vs. West Ends.
Wednesday—Printers vs. C.G.E.
Thursday—Centrals vs. Eko Club.
Friday—Grocers vs. Eurekas.

Smith won last week's prize for three high games in five pins, his total being 633.

The two new 10-pin tournament alleys have been attracting much interest, and some good scores have been rolled.

A new 10-pin league will be formed in the course of a few days, a number of teams having already been entered. This league promises to be the best ever, as the new alleys are in A1 condition.

A five-man team from the Toronto Bowling Club will journey to this city in the near future, and the local boys are looking forward for a great game.

WHY LOOK?

Epworth Herald: Mrs. Jenkins, a regular visitor in the doctor's consulting room, started on the long story of her troubles. The doctor endured it patiently and gave her another bottle. At last she started out and the doctor was congratulating himself when she stopped and exclaimed:

"Why, doctor, you did not look to see if my tongue was coated!"

"I know it isn't," wearily replied the medical man. "You don't find grass on a race track."

To the Electors of West Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,
Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM,
Peterborough, Nov. 10, 1917.

Social and Personal

Last evening a few friends gathered at the home of Mrs. MacFarlane, 264 Murray street. The nature of the event was to give her as a welcome home from England.

A most enjoyable evening was spent in games and music, after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Ormond have returned from an extended visit to Victoria and other western cities.

Mrs. W. H. Sherman of Ottawa, was in the city yesterday attending the funeral of her brother, the late J. L. Wood.

Mr. O. B. Ormond of Victoria, B.C., is in the city, the guest of his sister, Mrs. J. R. Stratton.

Dr. Letellier, wife and daughter, of Syracuse, N.Y., were in the city yesterday, having been called home owing to the illness of Dr. Letellier's mother, Mrs. Letellier, Crescent Street, who is now considerably better.

Mr. N. Tobin, deputy superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., left for New York yesterday on business.

Mrs. Carrie M. Lundy, who has been seriously ill at her apartment on George Street, has sufficiently recovered to spend the week-end with Mrs. (Dr.) Carmichael.

Miss Helen Springer, of Belleville, is the guest of Miss Isobel Donnelly, King Street.

Dr. J. A. and Dr. H. H. Melburn left this morning for Vancouver after spending a week here, the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Melburn.

Mr. C. Leonard spent the week-end with Mrs. Jack Strickland, Lakefield.

Mrs. M. Kelleher and Mrs. M. Tobin will be the hostesses at the week-end tea given by St. Peter's Ladies Patriotic Society at St. Alphonsus Lyceum.

Miss Helen Rush returned last night from an extended visit in Syracuse.

Miss Mary Traill, graduate nurse of the Brantford Hospital, is spending a few weeks with her aunt, Miss K. Traill.

Mrs. T. O. Rush returned last night from visiting friends in Ottawa.

Miss Aylmer was the week-end guest of Mrs. Jones, Toronto.

Mr. W. H. Casement, Postmaster of Lakefield, was in the city to-day, on business.

Mrs. J. D. Wainwright returned last night from Toronto.

Mrs. Fred E. Hooper (nee Miss Isabel Morphet) will receive, for the first time since her marriage, on Thursday, 15th November, from 4 to 6 p.m., at 166 Dublin Street.

At the linen and jam shower held yesterday at St. Alphonsus Lyceum, Mrs. Bernard Morrow poured tea, and was assisted by Mrs. Merrell, Mrs. Fairen, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. J. Coughlin, Mrs. Rollie Hunter, Mrs. McFadden, Mrs. Dunn, and the Misses Mabel Morrow and Mabel Merrell. The shower was a decided success, and most liberal donations of jam and linen were received. During the afternoon and evening piano selections by Miss Hurley and Miss McCarthy were most acceptable and greatly enjoyed by the large number who attended.

Mr. Walter Stout, Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Suckling, Dalhousie Street.

Mrs. Hall and Mrs. MacLean were the guests of friends in Lindsay, yesterday.

Mrs. Salter, Toronto, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McWilliams, Gilmour Street.

BODIES HAVE BEEN RECOVERED

Funerals of Victims of Drowning Accident Will Take Place To-morrow

The efforts of the large body of searchers from the city and country, who yesterday dragged Rice Lake in the region of Sunday's double drowning, culminated in the recovery at 7 o'clock of the bodies of William Grose and Jack Henry.

Indians, who had been searching since morning, found the bodies which had drifted a considerable distance from the place the men were seen to sink. Although the men went down several hundred feet away from each other, the bodies were recovered close together.

THE VICTIMS.

William Grose, who was a son of John Grose, was born in Greenbank Ont., 32 years ago. He was a machinist by trade, and up to a month ago had been employed by the Cressman Co. as chauffeur, when he took a position at the Henry Hope, as tool maker. He is survived by his wife and five small children.

The funeral, under the auspices of the Oddfellows, will take place to-morrow afternoon. Service at the house, 343 Rubidge street, at 3.30, conducted by Rev. Mr. MacKenzie.

John Lloyd Henry was the son of Mr. Thomas Henry, Brownlown. He was 22 years of age and unmarried. He leaves two sisters, Hazel, and Mrs. Westmeyer, and one brother, William.

The funeral will take place from the family residence under the auspices of the Oddfellows, to-morrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Service at the house, conducted by Rev. Mr. MacKenzie, before leaving for the Little Lake cemetery.

One report stated that Ald. G. H. Duncan was an eye-witness of the tragedy, whereas Ald. Duncan did not arrive on the scene until two hours after the accident.

Thanks are extended to the people in the vicinity, also Chief Crowe, and his band for the refreshments provided the workers in the form of hot coffee, etc.

Two Per Cent. Drinks Within The Law

License Inspector Stewart recently received the reports of an official anaysis of 2 1-2 p.c. porter and ale samples of which were taken from the temperance beverages served at local hotels. The rports showed the following strengths, all of them within the law:

Grand Hotel—Ale, 2.43, porter 1.85 p.c.

King George Hotel—Ale, 2.22; porter 2.37.

Montgomery House—Ale, 2.12; porter, 2.43.

American Hotel—Ale, 2.16; porter, 2.45.

This analysis shows that in these hotels the denatured "booze" is of real local option weakness.

MONEY IN GARBAGE.

When it is considered that the city of Paris reaps the huge sum of six million dollars annually on the sale of its garbage, it is more than "passing strange" that Montreal, which is so fearfully hard up, does not give attention to the subjects of replenishing its coffers in a like manner. It is quite a common custom both in European and American cities, to add very materially to the revenues by the sale of garbage. Its destruction in this city is a most costly affair. As a usual thing tenders are called for now for garbage collection and disposal — and competition is active. The successful tenderer not only recoups himself in the collection of enormous amounts of "junk," but in the sale of fertilisers. By well known processes the garbage is converted into substances that renew the soil with fresh vigor. Once give the city a competent Commission and such vital questions as these will receive consideration.—Montreal Herald.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKETS

Two developments of more than usual interest to the hardware trade during the week were the firmer trend to the lead market and the activity and higher prices in the tin market. These movements may have a far-reaching effect on commodities in which the hardware trade is interested. One of the lines to show an immediate response to the condition in the lead market was solder, in which considerable advances have been made. Lead traps and bends are lines which show a decline in price during the week, due to declines that had previously taken place in pig lead. Advances in manufactured hardware lines have been quite numerous and include game traps, oil heaters, shotguns and rifles, shoe thread, sidewalk scrapers, sleighs and auto coaster wagons, and woodenware such as lard and candy pails, tubs. Further declines have been registered in black sheets and galvanized sheets as the result of announcement of fixed prices in the United States. Supplies of iron and steel available for domestic uses will in all probability be further restricted, due to the intention of the War Industries Board of the United States. Business in hardware is reported splendid with considerable movement of goods to Northern and Western points which take advantage of water transportation before the close of navigation. This goes into effect usually about the middle of the present month.—Hardware and Metal.

"WETS" ARE LEADING IN OHIO ELECTION

Recount in That State Shows Considerable Loss For Prohibition.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 14.—At the end of the second day, following the prohibition election in Ohio, as the result of which the citizens will be subjected to a wet or a dry State, was still in doubt, but with complete returns from the eighty-eight counties, seventy-seven of which had turned in official figures, the wets were leading by a majority of 3,643 on the face of the face of the returns.

This figure, however, included a gain of 1,832 wet votes in Hamilton county, officially allowed by the Board of Elections in that county, which had not been reported to the Secretary of State to-day.

An announcement made by Secretary of State Fulton from figures compiled in his office gave the wets a majority of 588. These figures included all except one county and the 1,832 gained in the unofficial vote of Hamilton county.

HEALTH MINISTRY FOR GREAT BRITAIN

"Overseas" Sees a Great After-War Problem in the Recuperation of Man Power

LORD RHONDDA HAS A PLAN

With the argument that for every Englishman who falls upon the battlefield an English baby dies, a strong plea for the establishment of a British Health Ministry, is made in a late issue of Overseas, the organ of the Overseas Club, which has just reached New York. Lord Northcliffe is the head of the Overseas Club.

The writer makes the point that the greatest post-bellum task of England will be the recuperation of her manhood, and that the most efficacious way to solve this problem is to lessen infant mortality. Many of the arguments presented in favor of a Health Ministry are similar to those which have been advanced in this country for the creation of a Department of Health in the agitation for which the Equitable Life Assurance Society has been a leader.

"The blessed day when peace will be declared—a peace we have won—will not be our last day of war," says Overseas. "The new war we shall have to wage will not be against the Hun but against our lessening numbers. Learned professors may assure us that a low birth rate means a greater percentage of sound children; it may be so, but one doubts it, recalling the lusty members of the comparatively few large families that exist in Britain. But, whether they are right or not on this particular point, they are most assuredly wrong from an imperial point of view

The great need of the nation to-day is for children. Even if they are not all Samsons, everyone of them is needed. From all Britain's far-flung dominions her sons have rallied to the battlefields where she is proving her might. They have left their homes and lands, and many of them will return no more. Their ranks must be filled up. And not only filled up but strengthened. We people of the empire hold enormous tracts of lands, and to keep them we must populate them with our children.

TO CONSERVE INFANT LIFE.

"To talk of the birth rate now is to label oneself a bore. Most of us have no eyes or ears save for the battles being fought on the Continent and in the East. This is natural but it is not wisdom. We must refuse to be hypnotized into watching this struggle and neglecting others no less vital interests. The time for conserving infant life is now. Every day sees us bleeding a little whiter in men and in infants. We cannot stop the battles; we can stop many of the children dying from preventable causes.

"Some time ago Lord Rhondda, then President of the Local Government Board, proposed that all the departments which have the care of the public health, some fourteen in number, should be linked up under a central authority, say, the Local Government Board, and the whole be called a Health Ministry. In this way we should get more efficient and connected service from them. At the present time there are periods in the life of an individual when his life is no one's care. This has proved to be bad from the point of view of the individual and of the State. As it is a mistake for a parent to neglect his children's health, so it is a mistake for the State to neglect the health of its children. Also it is not economy. I wonder how much the doctors cost the country to-day. Prevention is better than cure and much cheaper.

"Although Lord Rhondda's scheme called for little change in the existing order of things, that little change has not yet been made. Yet we are losing babies at a greater rate than we are losing men on the battlefield. Mrs. H. B. Irving said, and she knows: 'It is more dangerous to be a baby in England, than a soldier of the line in France.' To put it into figures we lose 130 babies out of every 1,000. This is a serious loss to the empire and a heavy indictment of our present system. We have got to save the children, not because we are humane people, or like to be philanthropic, but because we urgently need young life to insure the continuance of our race.

NO OVER-POPULATION NOW.

"Britain may have been over-populated during the last century. It has been so stated, but I do not think this is a fact; it has only appeared so because of the congestion in the towns. We ceased some years ago to be an agricultural country and gradually people flocked for employment to the towns and stayed there. After the war many of us believe, farming will pay, and be an occupation more generally followed. We therefore need not fear, but should welcome an increased population here in Britain, and it is absolutely certain we must endeavor to make up for the failure of our stream of emigrants to the overseas dominions during the last two or three years of war. For in these dominions there has always been room and a welcome for people from the old country, and now the population has been weakened by the loss of many sons there is a very real need for fresh life—a living stream from the home country.

"To save lives in war times is a fine aim. Let us not forget the sinister fact that at present for every man that falls in battle, a baby dies. So say the statistics. It is our clear duty to save that baby to carry on the fine traditions our men are upholding and adding fresh laurels. We have a mighty empire and our fighting men should be the first to point out that it should be peopled with those of our own breed."

superior to wheat in some ways as a food grain. But home users have been unable to get hold of much barley flour.

This difficulty is all smoothed out when you use

Grape-Nuts

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 53 cars, with 775 cattle, 126 calves, 560 hogs, and 652 sheep and lambs.

The usual light run for Tuesday's offerings of fresh stock made a comparatively quiet market, but prices held good and steady for anything of quality. A choice load of heavy steers sold late Monday at $12. Good to extra choice butcher has sold up to $11 this week. But for the commoner stuff there is an easier feeling, and canners are lower. Lambs are quite firm. Calves are strong and firm.

There was a very light offering of hogs and the market early advanced 25 cents, later going to 40 cents over Monday's quotations.

Refugees Run Over Holland By Thousands

Include Horde of German Deserters and Spies—Vast Number Offers Menace—Dutch Fear Results If Nation Goes to War

The Hague, Netherlands.—Thousands of deserters mostly from the German army, now are swelling the stream of refugees pouring into Holland from the adjoining countries. Holland has become a great place of refuge for fugitives fleeing from the terrors of the German front, food hardships or the German military regime.

So numerous have these war refugees become that a weekly periodical called "The Combat," has been established at Amsterdam to carry on a revolutionary socialist propaganda among them. A society of Deserters has been formed in Holland, apparently by German agents, to discover the names of Germans and exert pressure on their families to induce them to return to Germany. Returning deserters no longer are shot but are sent to the front.

The country is overrun by a small army of spies, persons of both sexes, whose work is to spy into Dutch affairs, to spy upon the belligerents, and sometimes to spy upon one another.

PROBLEM ACUTE IN HOLLAND.

These refugees, deserters and government agents, added to escaping prisoners of war of virtually every Entente nationality, fugitive Poles, and other peoples of eastern Europe, fleeing from forced labor and other evils, have swelled the immigration flood until the problem of what disposition to make of these foreigners, has become acute in Holland.

There are many decent men among the deserters who, made desperate by the sufferings and slaughter at the front, or rebelling against their government's system, or policy, have shaken the dust of their fatherland from their feet. Quite a number are convalescent men who were ordered back to the front. A great number are undesirables to whom many crimes are attributed. Some become smugglers but wholesale banishment from the frontier regions now virtually has closed this profession to them Police control of them is very inadequate.

Proud of its traditional hospitality Holland opened its frontiers freely to all comers, but public opinion and the government has discovered that there are formidable dangers inherent in this aggregation of immigrants.

VAST NUMBERS A MENACE.

What might not happen, Hollanders often ask themselves, if Holland suddenly became involved in the war with all these vast numbers of foreigners spread all over the country many of them of the worst or at least of the most doubtful character?

Smallpox has a real hold in parts of Germany, as well as in countries farther east, and it is pointed out how easily this and other sources may be brought across the frontier.

The prime minister, Cort van der Linden, announced that the increased influx and the bodily condition of persons entering the country, had necessitated more drastic sanitary measures. As regards the national danger, the minister of war, Major-General N. Bosboom, endeavored to reassure public opinion in parliament a few days ago by declaring that if Holland became involved in the war it would be made evident that the government was far more conversant with the position as regards foreigners, and had taken far more adequate precautionary measures than most people thought.

THE STORY OF A GERMAN GUARANTEE

Most people know by now that an official undertaking on Germany's part is not worth the paper it is written on. But in every country there are pacifists who dream of a peace by "agreement" with Germany, although their intellectual equipment is not sufficient to lead them to ask the very necessary preliminary question, what chance there is of the present rulers of Germany keeping such an agreement. Germany plays on these people as on the strings of a harp. Most people know perfectly what an "agreement" with Germany would mean; they need no further demonstration. But it is always interesting to take some German agreement, and trace its sequel. The recently published Greek White Book supplies a very good instance; we have a guarantee and its immediate breach set out in official documents which cannot be glossed over or explained away Even the favorite German excuse that circumstances had altered, cannot be made here; for the violation of Germany's word was absolutely prompt.

On 23rd May, 1916, M. Skouloudis, then Greek prime minister, received a letter from Count von Mirbach-Harff, the German Ambassador at Athens, announcing that the German-Bulgarian armies were going to invade Greek Macedonia, (the invasion began three days later) and saying that the German government unhesitatingly gave the Greek Government the assurances set out in the letter. These were six in number; we are only concerned here with two of them. No. 4 runs: "The freedom and property of individuals and existing ecclesiastical arrangement will be absolutely respected"; and No. 6: "The Allies will behave in an absolutely friendly manner to the population." The Bulgarian Government gave similar assurances, but these we need not trouble about. The Bulgarians are only catspaws; had Germany been victorious their turn would have come quickly enough.

Germany followed up this undertaking with another, that the German-Bulgarian troops would not enter Drama, Seres or Kavalla. The Bulgarians of course occupied the three towns forthwith, Kavalla, the last being entered on Sept. 11th. From this point we have a series of reports partly by local Greek officials, partly by M. Naoum, the Greek ambassador at Sophia, which extend from September, 1916, to June, 1917, and illustrative of how the German guarantee of "the freedom and property of individuals" was kept. They show the Bulgarians and the local Turks at their instigation, aided by the Bulgarian army, engaged in a deliberate attempt to extortionate Hellenism in Eastern Macedonia by murdering, deporting and plundering Greeks. The report from Drama exhibits a long list of murders, the names being given Bulgarian comitadjis too were let loose on the people. Churches and schools were seized, and the schools of course Bulgarized.

One village, Nea Medeia, was completely wiped out, and all the inhabitants killed. From Serres we have no report, possibly because thousands of its inhabitants were forcibly removed to Drama. But we have a detailed account from Kavalla. When the Bulgarians entered the population fled to the seashore, hoping for means to cross to Thasos. They were driven back to their houses and shut in; and then scientific plundering commenced, under the supervision of Bulgarian officers at the head of their men. First all public and military establishments were systematically emptied and the contents sent to Sophia; then the big shops were looted; lastly the private houses, many of which were sacked till nothing was left but the bare walls. At Drama, though many prominent men were imprisoned, the Greek local authorities were left and the people had some slight protection; at Kavalla they were removed, imprisoned and replaced by Turks. But in one way, Kavalla was better off; for months, we are told life was safe, except for nocturnal murders though the threat of massacre was held over Greek heads. Some fortunate individuals, abandoning their property, escaped to Thasos, a safe refuge on account of the Allied fleets; but "a very great number" from all parts of Eastern Macedonia, were deported into the interior of Bulgaria in the guise of registered workmen, to replenish the depleted labor force—a trick the Bulgarians copied from their German masters in Belgium. Their condition, says M. Naoum, is truly lamentable.

The natural consequence of the total disorganization of the country was famine on a large scale. In the spring of 1917, 1800 people died of hunger at Kavalla in 40 days; at Drama deaths were averaging 40 a day. From the Bulgarian occupation to 28th of April, 1917, the official returns gave 6,000 deaths of Greeks, at Kavalla from starvation alone; Drama and Serres were as bad. From the villages no information would be ref-

Tells How Britain Got War Workers

Fixed Factory Profits and Wages on Patriotic Basis, Says Munitions Commissioner

UNIONS SUSPENDED RULES

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—How Great Britain reached maximum efficiency in munition production without disturbing the economic and commercial life of England, and also without reducing her fighting strength, was described to American employers yesterday by Sir Stephenson Kent, head of the British Munitions Commission in this country. Commissioner Kent talked to producers in a number of trades that have to do with war materials. His session with them was executive, but later the Merchants' Association gave out a statement which carried the gist of the Commissioners remarks.

Sir Stephenson explained that the Munitions act, which really solved the difficulty, was adopted as a result of a trade agreement settling all these questions for the period of the war. When it first became evident that Great Britain had blundered in sending so many skilled labourers to the front, said Commissioner Kent, the Employers' Associations and the leaders of the various trade unions were called together in conference and were kept together until a working agreement was reached.

In the first place, the unions agreed to abandon all restrictive measures such as make for the closed shop and for a man in a particular trade working only at that trade, while the war lasted. Thus employers may use any branch of labour for any kind of work A bricklayer, for example, if he is capable, may work in a foundry, with no loss of standing in his union.

Unskilled men and even women can be employed and are drafted to take the place of skilled workmen where the technique of the task can be taught readily and the work can be done by the piece. The wages are fixed definitely, based on the rate in effect in various districts at the outbreak of hostilities.

Men Agree to Shifting.

The men have agreed to abide by these rulings. They have also agreed to something else, which is even more vital to the economic peace and solidarity of England. They have agreed that in shifting from one line of work to another they will accept the pay fixed in the district in which they are working. It has been made illegal under the act to strike or demand an increase of pay during the war. The Minister of Munitions settles all labour disputes.

On their part, the employers have promised to abstain from trying to entice men away from one plant to work in another by promising higher pay. This practice is unlawful. Hence no interference or unsettling of labour conditions can be brought about. The profits of the employers were definitely fixed at one-fifth over their pre-war earnings. It was determined that in such a crisis the State could not afford to waste any kind of labour.

One of the most interesting phases of the British manipulation of labour to get results has been the way in which skilled labour is distributed. Since there are several millions of men under arms, and many of them the best and most skilful workers of the kingdom, it behooved the Government to mobilize the workers at home at they mobilize troops for an attack. That is, the skilled men left are sent where they are most needed, and are concentrated at that point.

If guns are needed, then the skilled worker goes to the gun factory. If ships are to be built, he goes to the shipyards If shells are in urgent demand, he goes to the factory where shells are made.

But the British Government, according to Commissioner Kent, has not considered it wise to conscript labour. To attempt to compel labour to go anywhere was held to be unwise, and no Ministry has attempted to put through any such measure. The Government relied on public opinion to force the Munitions act through, and when that was adopted it was felt that both labour and capital would live up to the spirit and letter of the law.

But, while they did not coerce labour, for that would antagonize the worker and weaken the most important link in the chain which was sending cannon, shells, clothes, and food to the front, they did fix wages. Also after the first error which took skilled men for the army had been discovered, the Government kept many experienced workmen from the front and retained their services in the factories and shipyards.

The skilled men, said Commissioner Kent, to the number of more than 200,000, have been grouped as "Volunteers of Munitions," which they will continue to be for the time of the war. They willingly go wherever the government sends them, and who do as important a work as the soldier in the firing line. Too much emphasis, the American employers were told, could not be laid on this willingness of the British worker to serve his country.

In addition to these 200,000 men, there are about a million women who are engaged in munition work. In as much as the non-essential industries in which they worked before war have practically ceased, they have been forced into other lines to earn their living. To these is added the number of women who have husbands, fathers and sons at the front, and who want to work during the war, so that munition work is claiming a large proportion of the working women of England.

In answer to a question as to what would become of these women after peace came, Commissioner Kent said a great many of them would go back to their homes. Their male relatives would come back from the front and take up their old places, he said, and the women would naturally revert to their normal status. This fact is expected to solve the problem in a great measure.

In regard to the high cost of living, the Commissioner said that a Commissioner of Productions had been formed to handle that matter. Its function, he said, is investigation. There times a year the commission inquires into the cost of the necessities of life throughout the whole kingdom. When it is found that a big increase has come a fixed sum is awarded by the Government to the labouring men.

Award, Not Rise in Wages.

Commissioner Kent was careful to impress upon his hearers that this sum was not in the nature of an increase in wages. It was an award, pure and simple, he declared, to compensate them for the rise in prices.

The Special Mission held its conference in the rooms of the Merchants' Association, in the Woolworth Building, and the Commissioners, Garrod, Asquith, Baillie, and Kent, met representatives of the following industries: Food, clothing, textiles, oil, leather, and rubber.

The conferences have been made executive at the request of President Wilson. The results will be made known to the President before the departure of the commission from the United States. In the meantime the commission is going to try and give every manufacturer in the United States, through these conferences, the benefit of suggestions based upon experience gained by Great Britain.

A luncheon was given to the Commissioners by Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the board of the Irving National Bank, after which another conference was held.

Last night Commissioners Garrod and Asquith attended a meeting is the Labour Temple held under the auspices of the Central Federated Union. There the workingmen were told of the way the United Kingdom had avoided labour disputes. It was impressed upon the men last night, as it was upon the employers yesterday morning, that the army of a nation abroad is no stronger in these days of modern war than the strength of the endeavour and patriotism displayed by the makers at home.

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Bible Is Cited By Slacker To Win Exemption

New York.—Slackers have offered many novel pleas in their efforts to evade military service, but the first case in the New York district in which the Bible was cited as offering an excuse for not serving rather surprised the board The man had married soon after his number appeared in the draft list and questioning revealed he had known his finance only six weeks.

Although in fine physical condition the army dodger tried all the subterfuges in the way of alleged handicaps that have become old stories. When it appeared that he was making no impression on the hardened officials, he brought forth his trump card, the Bible passage.

"Where does it say in the Bible that a man is not in duty bound to help defend his country against a foreign foe?" asked an examiner. As far as I know the Bible especially directs all persons to protect home and country."

The slacker was ready; he had prepared for just such a question. Drawing a Bible from his pocket and opening it at a place that had been previously marked, he read the 5th verse of the 24th chapter of Deuteronomy, which is—

"When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war; neither shall he be charged with any business; but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken."

An examiner asked about the second injunction in the verse, and inquired if the unwilling candidate in case he was freed from war service, would close his tailor shop and compel his wife to give up her work as a trouser maker. The replies showed that there were no likelihood of either move being made. Of course the objector failed to get exemption.

One member of the board remarked that in civil war days many advocates of secession sought to prove that slavery was right by quoting passages from the Bible. He added that Brigham Young's followers in the Mormon Church used the same means to defend their stand on polygamy.

The military salute, which some of our soldiers and sailors are occasion- origin, if tradition is to be believed, says the London Chronicle. It is said that it originated in the days of the tournament, at which a queen of beauty was chosen to preside. The knights and their esquires and all who took part in the tourney, on presenting themselves before the queen lifted each one hand level with the brows as though dazzled by the light of her presence. A nicely thought out compliment this, and though its significance is now forgotten, the natural dignity of the gesture has preserved it as an everyday mark of recognition of a superior in rank.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sensitive Lover

By SARAH BAXTER

Barnard was walking the floor. When a man walks the floor with a knit brow it is evident there is something on his mind. And there was something on Barnard's mind—a good deal, in fact. He was a worshiper of Miss Brayton, and Miss Brayton was very ill. Barnard had heard that the doctors were desirous of making the experiment of a transfusion of blood, but had not thus far found any hearty person who was willing to give up his or her blood for the purpose.

Barnard had offered himself to Miss Brayton, and she had refused him. He was now ready to give her his blood or his life, if necessary, but would not this be placing her under an obligation which might cause her to reconsider her refusal? It seemed to him like taking an unfair advantage of her; that it would be an obtrusion, an ungracious act, rendering him liable to a charge of trying to win her by unfair means. Besides, Barnard had always said that unless the girl he wanted wanted him, and that very badly, he didn't want her.

How would it do for him to give her his blood without her knowing from whom the gift came? Barnard stopped short in his walk and tugged at his mustache. Then he took up his hat, crammed it down on his head and hurried away to Miss Brayton's physician.

After an interview it was settled that the invalid should receive Barnard's blood without knowing it. This could be done by performing the operation in a room dimly lighted, with Barnard's face covered. No one but the doctor and the couple operated on need be present, and the identity of the blood given need not be divulged.

The operation was performed, and Miss Brayton regained her health and strength. Barnard had the satisfaction of having saved her life, but saw no more evidence of a predisposition for him than before. Indeed, it was not long after the operation that he heard she was engaged to a man whom he had feared as a rival. This threw Barnard into despondency.

One evening at a young persons' gathering, at which Barnard, Miss Brayton and her fiance, Mortlake, were present, Barnard heard a young lady near him say that there was a very pretty romance between Miss Brayton and Mr. Mortlake. Barnard pricked up his ears, but failed to learn what the romance was. But a week later he met a friend who asked him why he had not got in ahead of Mortlake when Miss Brayton was ill and offer her his blood. Thus it came out that Mortlake had saved his fiancee's life.

This was a romance with a vengeance. Mortlake had undoubtedly won the lady by claiming to have saved her life at the risk of his own.

That evening Barnard was walking the floor in a more disgruntled state of mind than before. His rival had beaten him by a lie, and he was not in a position to set the matter right. True, he had only to refer the matter to the surgeon who performed the operation, but this would be interfering between a girl and her lover—a dog in the manger business that was far beneath a man of Barnard's sensitive honor. On the other hand, what right had he to permit the girl he loved to marry a man who had lied to get her?

Barnard, being in a quandary, remained in a quandary. These sensitive fellows who keep themselves in the background are usually overlooked by girls who, did they know the facts, would most assuredly prefer them. Barnard was too refined in feeling to save either himself or the girl he loved.

But one morning Miss Brayton, being indisposed, sent for her physician. During his visit she told him that there was a certain secret which she knew he was pledged to keep, but she knew it all the same. Then she announced to him her engagement.

"I congratulate him," said the doctor. "He took considerable risk for you and deserves you."

"How he must have loved me!"

"I fancied he was doing it for love."

"It would have been ungracious for me to refuse him after the sacrifice he made for me."

"You have got a fine fellow. I took a fancy to Barnard the moment I laid eyes on him."

"Barnard!"

"Yes, Barnard. You're engaged to Barnard, aren't you?"

Miss Brayton's eyes grew as big as butter plates.

"Was it Mr. Barnard who saved me?"

"Why—yes—I thought you knew."

The cat was out of the bag.

Soon after this revelation Mortlake received a note from his fiancee stating that she must break her engagement with him, since she had discovered that she could not love him.

Barnard heard that the girl he loved was free, but since she had pledged the doctor to keep mum he had no idea of the cause of the breaking of her engagement. One day he received a note asking him to call. He did so, and Miss Brayton frankly told him that in refusing him she had mistaken her feelings. Barnard was not slow in giving her an opportunity to correct the mistake. They were married, and it was not till the day after the wedding that his wife told him the secret.

"Why didn't you tell me that before?" he asked in an injured tone.

"Because I didn't propose that you should indulge in any more nonsense."

THEY GAVE HER VINOL AFTER SICKNESS

It Completely Restored Her Strength

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"Pneumonia left me weak and tired, with pains under my shoulder blades, a bad cough and no appetite. Five bottles of Vinol restored my strength and health. I gained in weight and my cough disappeared."—Mrs. B. Richter, 132 Menhan St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

This is because Vinol is a constitutional, cod liver and iron remedy which creates an appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood and in this natural manner restores health and strength. Formula on every bottle. Show it to your doctor. He knows.

What a Library Is.

A leaflet, having for its caption the words, "I am the public library," is sent out by the public library of Davenport, Ia., which announces itself as follows:

I am the storehouse of knowledge in this city.

I am opportunity.

I am the continuation school for all.

I am a house of wisdom and an institution of happiness.

I am supported by the people for the people.

I offer you the opportunity to know all there is to know about your work.

I am for those who would enjoy fiction, poetry, philosophy, biography, or learn more about business, trade and science.

I have books for all tastes and needs and creeds.

I am free to the public to profit from and enjoy.

Wonderland of Australasia.

The hot spot district of New Zealand is called "wonderland of Australasia." It is said to be to Maoriland what the Yellowstone park and Hot Springs of Arkansas are to the United States. Maori women have no need to light a fire to cook meals. An old can or pail sunk in hot mud or set on a steam jet answers admirably for a boiling pot or oven.

Then She Smiled.

"Dear me," she wailed, "I'm getting a double chin!"

Hubby, tried to console her. "Your chin is so pretty," said he, "that you shouldn't kick because gratified Mother Nature is giving you another one."—Kansas City Journal.

Great Britain's Great Seal.

Measuring six inches in diameter and made of silver, the great seal of Great Britain is kept in the custody of the lord high chancellor, and a new one is prepared for each reign.

Quick Time.

Ada—Men are slow! It took him nearly two hours to propose to me last night. Floss—And how long did it take you to accept him, dear? Ada—Just two seconds.

If thou shouldst lay up even a little upon a little and shouldst do this often, soon would even this become great.—Hesiod.

PUBLIC OPINION

YOUR CHOICE.

(Boston News Bureau.)

Buy Liberty bonds or bye-bye Liberty!

A BOOM IN BOYS.

(London Daily Express.)

The increase in numbers of male births during great wars has for a long time been put down to the kindly intervention of nature trying to rectify the innumerable losses. The "Medical Monitor" has crushed this theory. It declares that women who are fatigued by arduous labor such as munition and other work usually performed by men, can only become the mothers of male children. Gynecologists appear to be in agreement that history has given evidence in support of this explanation.

OPPORTUNITY.

An unparalleled opportunity to show the stuff that is in them is being provided by the war for a large number of men who ordinarily have no way of winning recognition for accomplishment, except in intimate circles of their own organizations. With corporation executives giving their entire efforts to work for the government, burden of running organizations they headed has fallen upon the vice-presidents and other minor officials, in some cases even on secretaries. Not long ago the president of a large company who is established at Washington, in reply to an inquiry regarding the affairs of the company, said: "See my secretary, Jones; he is the boss now." And that was practically the exact truth. At the doors of such men opportunity is knocking loudly, and if the war continues long, it is probable that a number of new names will be added to the calendar of those who have done big things.

IN PREPARATION.

(New York Sun.)

It was one of those second hand book stores where for years there has been a table outside the door filled with books at ten cents apiece or three for a quarter. To the price card the loyal bookseller had added the legend—

"Free to Soldiers."

No small sacrifice either, with an armory only a block away.

A soldier saw the sign and stopped. He picked up Harold Frederic's "Damnation of Thereon Ware," but put it back. He sampled Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome," and returned it to its notch. Then he lifted, "French for Beginners." That seemed to be his choice until his glance making a final sweep of the old volumes, he saw a red book that caused him to drop the language primer. He took the red book and went away without further sign of doubt. It was Baedeker's "Berlin."

THE UNWAVERING TOMMY.

(London Canadian Gazette.)

Lt.-Colonel J. A. Macdonnell, D.S.O., reached Vancouver recently, returning home on sick leave after practically two years' service with the Canadian Pioneers in England, and Belgium and France. "Big Jim," as he is familiarly known in the Pacific Northwest, held what is probably the "long distance record" for continuous residence in Ypres since the war began, as he was there four and a half months, surrounded on three sides by the enemy. In an interview, he said that his men were among the best but he thought that the "British Tommy" would face practically certain death more cheerfully than any other soldier in the world.

Conscripts.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Conscripts in the ordinary sense covered themselves with glory in all the battles of the last half of the war. Conscripts in the ordinary sense hurled back the Germans at the Marne, saved Verdun, fought the battle of the Somme. Let us drop the foolish opprobrium that clings to the word conscript. Especially let us drop any indifference we may affect toward winners in the selective draft. No American thinks of those splendid lads without feeling within him the impulse to cheer or at least spring to his feet and propose a toast.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertisement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MUNITION WORKERS SECRETE MATCHES

RENFREW, Nov. 10. — Finding matches is generally left to the children who creep around the house but in Renfrew able-bodied men are paid good wages to locate matches. These men are engaged at munition plants and daily they take from employees matches hid in the clothing, hair and feet.

Those who disobey orders by carrying matches into the plants are invariably summoned to court and are fined from $1 to $5. Notwithstanding numerous convictions, some employees keep matches on their persons and for a while outwit the official searchers.

Employees cannot, or will not, realize that a match might prove disastrous to life, limb and property. There are certain departments where a spark igniting a match would cause the loss of thousands of dollars, to say nothing of lives.

Many are the schemes devised by cigarette fiends to smoke during lunch hours. Trouser rolls, coat lapels, where pins hold a cigarette and matches, cap lining, and coat lining, were some of the "caches."

These are no longer hiding places, but the other day the inspectors came across a new one.

One employee was ordered to remove his shoes, and under the toes of each foot part of a match was found. This same fellow had secreted forbidden articles in his underclothing some days previous to the "toe find," and he is now always searched most carefully.

It would be commercial suicide to discharge the offenders, as labour is scarce and experienced men are at a premium. Employers endeavour to curtail the evil of bringing matches to work by diligent searchings and summonses to the police magistrate.

The small fines don't seem to be very effective. Employees do not miss the money — they are making small fortunes—and the rules will be disobeyed until the end of the war, perhaps.

She—I thought you told me your friend had very little to say.

He—So I did.

She—Why, he hasn't stopped talking since he came here an hour ago.

He—That may be, but he hasn't said anything.

He Lives in Constant Fear Who Has Neurasthenia

Fear of Self—Fear of Others—Fear of the Future

SUCH ideas often dominate the mind of the sufferer from nervous exhaustion or neurasthenia.

He may be strong and active physically, but he finds himself unable to concentrate the mind, fearful to depend on himself, and shrinking at the thought of any responsibility.

Some fear to be in a crowd, while others dread to be left alone. Some dislike meeting people, while others live in constant, morbid dread of the future, fearing insanity or accident or disease.

Fear brings worry and an irritation of the nerves, so that sleep is interrupted and digestion fails. In this way is formed the vicious circle of neurasthenia, and the nervous system becomes weaker and weaker, until it collapses, and the result is some form of paralysis.

The Food Cure

Mr. Laurence E. Dorsey, 39 Stanley Street, London, Ont., writes:—"About three years ago I got my foot smashed in an elevator in Detroit, which completely wrecked my nerves. I doctored with the doctors there, but they did not seem to be able to help me. My nerves were in such a state that I could not go down town alone, or go any place where there was a crowd. Sometimes my mother would have to sit and watch over me at night, and sometimes I could not get any sleep at all. But one day last winter I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had completely used the first box I could see a difference in my condition. As I continued using these pills for some time. The result was splendid. I feel so much better, can sleep well at night, can go out on the street and attend gatherings like the rest of people. I am so pleased to be able to tell you what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for me, and to recommend it to other people."

New vigor and energy and vitality must be instilled into the depleted nerve cells if cure is to be effected, and this is most certainly accomplished by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Since the digestive system is incapacitated it is most essential to get into the blood stream the very elements which are found in this great food cure.

The blood is made rich and red, the starved nerve cells are restored and revitalized, and with returning vigor and strength and confidence the harmful notions of a diseased brain soon disappear.

Nervous diseases take different forms with different people, but to effect cure in any case the depleted nerve cells must be nourished back to health and vigor by such reconstructive treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

CUTICURA HEALS SKIN TROUBLE

On Face that Itched & Burned. The Soap and Ointment Acted Like Magic.

"My skin had always been clear until last January when a pimple appeared on my chin. It burned and itched and of course I foolishly scratched it. Then a scab formed that looked like a cold sore and my face became nearly covered.

"It was growing worse so fast that I sent for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed my face with Cuticura Soap and applied the Ointment and they acted like magic. I have not been troubled since." (Signed) Otto C. Brock, Glen Sutton, Que.

Cuticura Soap is ideal for the skin and complexion.

Starvation was a useful political adjunct to deportation, and they fed the Slavs. Many representations were made to the German government but without effect. They were begged to take over the administration themselves; naturally they were not going to interfere with their useful Allies. Be it remembered that all this happened while Constantine was still king, and while Germany was professing unlimited friendship for, and sympathy with Greece. On the 26th of December, 1916, M. Zalokostas told the German government plainly that the cause of all the misery—and it was still far from its height—was their breach of their two guarantees, that Drama, Serres and Kavalla should not be occupied, and that the freedom and property of the inhabitants should be respected. And Zalokostas was a member of the pro-German Lambros Government.

This is the story of a German guarantee. H. S. Chamberlain once regretted that the German tribes when they invaded the Roman empire had not exterminated the peoples they had found there; and Reimer wrote in 1905 that when Germany had conquered Europe she would reduce the other peoples to the status of negroes. We cannot prove as present that Germany deliberately planned the destruction of the Macedonian Greeks, as we can prove that she planned that of the Greeks of Turkey. But the Chamberlains and Reimers must have a little patience. Germany is really doing her best.—(Communicated.)

A MARSHAL'S BATON IN HIS HAVERSACK.

(Wall Street Journal.)

A brigadier-general, a colonel, six majors and 100 captains are to-day commanding John Goings, late of the 3rd Kansas, the lone private of the Depot Brigade at Camp Doniphan, Fort Sill, Okla. Until men from national army cantonments at Camp Funston arrive Goings will be the sole enlisted force of the brigade. He has five bands to play for him, but his pleasures are spoiled by the all too frequent necessity of saluting 108 superior officers.

Don't Worry.

(Higham's Magazine.)

So far as is known, no bird tried to build more nests than its neighbour, no fox ever fretted because he had only one hole in which to hide; no squirrel ever died of anxiety lest he should not lay by enough nuts for two winters instead of for one; and no dog ever lost any sleep over the fact that he did not have enough bones laid by for his declining years.

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

THE GATE OF ADVENTURE

Second Lieut. Lloyd Writes an "Unconventional" Story of Life in the Trenches

The infant was sitting in the crazy dugout, that served as A Company headquarters, writing a letter, and sucking alternately at a cigarette and the business end of an indelible pencil. His "tin hat" was set rakishly on the back of his head, thus allowing, as he put it, a greater scratching surface when ideas failed him. Literary composition was not helped by the attendant circumstances: Heavy fumes from a coke brazier, a wobbly table, and the uncertain light given by a tallow candle. Occasionally he looked at his wrist watch, with the air of one who has an important appointment to keep in the near future.

The enthusiasm with which he wrote showed that he had been out long enough to appreciate the meaning of what he saw, but not long enough to be tired of it all.

"Dear Mater," he wrote, "Perhaps there does not seem much romance here to men who have been out since the Flood, and know every sandbag and every bully beef tin in the place, but to me who have been out only a few weeks it does seem wonderful. It is the strangest frontier that ever was.

"There are so many traditions, too. The place must be full of the ghosts of men who have eaten and slept and watched here before us. The men have gone, but the names they gave to their old homes still remain. There are places called after the great schools, after colleges, after streets in London. I shall never be able to go down Regent Street without remembering one particular namesake out here in France, a dirty, narrow snake of a trench, winding in and out through the ruins of a French village. The mud in that trench has no bottom—at least, it has never been fathomed. There is no beastlier mud in all France. And, halfway down the trench, you pass round a corner into heaven, over a little bridge that spans a stream, as clear as crystal, running over pebbles, between low grassy banks. It is called 'Fairy Glen.'

"Not far from the dugout in which I am writing this letter, there is a narrow and very dirty tunnel leading out under the parapet to a place in No Man's Land. Above the mouth of the tunnel, nailed to a stake wedged between the sandbags is a bit of wood. On it is the name given to the tunnel, and beneath there is scrawled, 'This Way to the War.' It is not a good passage for the man who has put on flesh!"

"I know it sounds rather futile, but I have come to think of that tunnel as the Gate of Adventure. It leads to No Man's Land, I mean, and the unknown and all sorts of possibilities. As a matter of fact, I am going through it to-night! Quite a small show and not a bit dangerous. I hope we shall make a success of it.

"I am writing such a long letter, I expect, because I'm new to things out here. Later on, perhaps, when they begin to pall on me, all you will get is my 'love' and initials, scrawled on a page out of my message book. ——"

The rest of his letter concerned no one but himself.

The road to the sap-head was by way of a tunnel through the front wall of the trench. The entrance was guarded by a stolid sentry, whose stolidity made him seem almost a part of the grey mass of sandbags behind him. The night was very still. An occasional bullet zipped viciously from nowhere, and passed sighing on its way to the back of beyond. From the direction of an old willow tree came the sound of a gentle, insistent tapping—tap, tap, once in every twenty seconds—monotonous as the ticking of a clock. The woodpecker was a persevering gentleman in the German second line trenches with a fixed rifle and a certain number of rounds to get rid of each night.

The sentry, apparently, noticed none of these things. Now and again he bent to peer into the remote blackness of the tunnel, or, with an effort, pulled out one of his gum boots which had become too deeply embedded in the mud. Beside him were little piles of barbed wire, "concertinas" and "gooseberries," which were employed to block the tunnel when for any reason it was not in use. It was not an inviting thoroughfare at any time. Even when there was no barbed wire there, the passage of it was extremely uncomfortable and no one adventured it unnecessarily. It was the monopoly of the night patrols, the men of the listening post, and he officer whose duty it was periodically to visit that post. Otherwise it was left to its own muddy self. It was duck-boarded, but the rain had made of it merely a tributary to the main stream of the trench, and the duckboards were now nearly a foot beneath the surface. The third duckboard from the trench end of the sap had an evil reputation—the trestle which supported one end of it had gradually sunk deeper and deeper into the yielding slime, allowing the inexpericeed wayfarer to slide helplessly into the depths. Working parties, night after night, had waded thigh deep up the sap to "make a job" of the third duck-board, but it defied all their efforts, and remained a trap for the unwary and a concrete proof of the malice that lies in inanimate things.

When once the rubicon of the third duck-board had been crossed, the way became simpler. The sap was now merely a shallow trench, flanked by low walls of earth and sandbags, wriggling tentatively through the barbed wire out into No Man's Land. The listening post at the end of it consisted of a large shell crater. It contained the accumulated litter and debris of ages. A couple of duck-boards formed a precarious floor. A wooden box, resting on a shelf, scooped out of the wall, held some Verey lights and a few bombs. A low semi-circular fence of barbed wire provided some protection from the inquisitiveness of the enemy. This was hung with tatters of cloth, mementoes of previous visitors. What was left of one of these visitors was lying unpicturesquely a few yards on the other side of the wire. Beyond and around it were desolation and darkness.

The Infant pushed his way beneath the waterproof sheet which did double duty as door and curtain to his dugout, and stood blinking for a moment in the gloom outside, before he felt his way uncertainly along the trench to the place where his men were waiting for him at the entrance to the sap. When a patrol is just about to leave the trenches for No Man's Land the talk is often as trivial and inane as when people see their friends off at a railway station. It is often a relief when the train starts. So thought the Infant, and was glad when at last the order came to come and he crawled slowly after his men through the tunnel to whatever might await him in the darkness on the other side.

To the men who remained in the trench, the minutes passed like hours. At every flare hissing up from the German lines opposite, the company commander sprang up on the fire-step, and gazed anxiously into the gloom ahead of him. But he could see nothing except immediately in front the tangle of barbed wire on its twisted stakes, and beyond, the network of craters and ditches which was No Man's Land. He could see no living thing there—at least, no living thing that moved. Those who do their business in No Man's Land do it unostentatiously.

A few throbbing flashes in the darkness, a series of dull explosions, muffled by the mist, a swift gust of bullets thudding into the sandbags—then silence. The woodpecker, surprised for a moment into missing a beat, continued his tap, tap, tap.

But the watchers in the trench had not long to wait. They heard the sound of feet splashing along the sap, and muttered curses of some unfortunate who had found the third duck-board. A string of sweating, muddy, but happy men struggled one by one from the mouth of the tunnel. The Infant, just as muddy and just as happy, was the last to emerge. "Will somebody lend me a hand?" he said. "They got me in the leg, just as I was coming in."

Ten minutes later the Infant, a little pale, but entirely triumphant, was telling his story between the puffs of a cigarette to a sympathetic regimenal doctor.

"It was a great show," he said. "But it was rather a shame getting put out at the end of it like that. By the way, doc., you might ask my O.C. company to burn a letter which I left in the dugout. It looks as if I'm going myself instead."

German Attack In Flanders Completely Checked By British

Field Marshal Haig Announces Assault by Enemy in Region of Passchendaele Was a Failure--Kerensky is Reported to Be in Control in Russia ---French Make Successful Raids.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 14.—The Germans met with complete defeat at the hands of the British yesterday in Flanders, the War Office reports. An attempt to recapture the ground recently won by the British near Passchendaele was repulsed.

The communication follows: Following upon the increased activity of their artillery already noted, the Germans yesterday afternoon attacked the positions held by our troops on the high ground north of Passchendaele. The attack was repulsed completely.

This is the sector captured and presumably held by the Canadians.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 14. — The Finnish Telegram Bureau says the whole of Russia except a small part of Petrograd is now in the hands of the Provisional Government.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 14. — Premier Kerensky is now in Petrograd, and has taken virtually the entire city, says the Helsingfors despatch.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), November 14.—The French made successful raids in the vicinity of St. Quentin, Sapigneul and Chaume Wood. Artillery is active on the Meuse. Elsewhere all is calm.

STOCKHOLM, November 14. — Advices from correspondents on the Russian border say Kerensky has entered Petrograd and again assumed control of the Government there.

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, November 14.—The proposals of Allied Governments for the formation of a unity of command for all fronts will not be carried out in practice. Indications already point to a radical change being made in the first form of the idea which was to give supreme authority to an inter-allied staff, somewhat similar to the power of the German General Staff.

Marshal Von Hindenburg and General Von Ludendorff possess their vast strength not solely because they have supreme military command, but also because the political leaders of Germany and Austria-Hungary are subordinate to them. The continuation of this method of government is the principal obstacle to peace, and was the reason why the United States entered the war. To make the world safe for democracy it is impossible for the Allies to give to their own military leaders the political power of the German militarists. A change of this nature not only reacts unfavourably against the Allies' politically, but also might cause a military disaster by overwhelming the Allies' generals with political problems no democratic soldier is competent to handle.

The united military control of the Central Powers has had terrible disasters that must not be forgotten. If the Allies were to accept the principle of Von Hindenburg dictatorship which allied country would volunteer to be deserted as Von Hindenburg has been compelled to desert Turkey. It was the German dictatorship that preceded Von Hindenburg's which shattered itself to pieces against Verdun. While still earlier dictatorships lost the battle of the Marne, and could not break through the weaker Anglo-French lines in the great series of battles for Calais. The present is a time for doing everything possible to strengthen the Allies' military position, because of Italian and Russian breakdowns, but the adoption of German methods of centralized control by the Allies is impossible. It is precisely because of this method that Germany is going to be beaten in the end.

One Candidate In Winnipeg May Withdraw

WINNIPEG, Nov. 14.—Negotiations for the purpose of oiling the troubled waters of Centre Winnipeg Unionists are on, and an agreement will be reached to-day, whereby one of the two Unionist candidates will withdraw from the field. This will eliminate the fight between Dr. Bland and Major Andrews, both supporters of Union government.

A despatch from Toronto to-day states that J. G. O'Donoghue, prominent advocate of organized labour, had pronounced himself in favour of Union government. R. A. Rigg, the Labour candidate in North Winnipeg, when interviewed upon this topic, stated that O'Donoghue's views were totally unrepresentative of those of organized Labour. He said that O'Donoghue was formerly retained as legal representative of the Trades Congress of Canada, but was no longer occupying that position.

Possibility Of An Invasion Is Considered

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 14.—"The War Cabinet is considering all possibilities of an invasion," declared Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law, in the House of Commons to-day. His statement was in answer to a special query apparently induced by several recent reports as to German plans. More or less circumstantial rumours afloat during recent weeks have carried the story that the Germans were boring a tunnel under the channel to attack England, and had been at the work ever since they reached the Belgian coast. Other rumours of the projected invasion of England by German troops was revived recently in British front stories revealing that the German General Staff had issued English-German conversation books to many of its soldiers.

JAPAN SEES A MENACE IN THE RUSSIAN COLLAPSE

Mobilization and Possible Utilization of Japanese Army is Being Seriously Considered—Russia Considered Minus Quantity

THE PRESS COMMENT

(By Ralph S. Turner.)

TOKIO, Nov. 14.—The mobilization and possible utilization of Japan's army is being increasingly considered as a result of Russia's collapse. The Tokio press to-day maintained that the situation of the allies was dark, agreeing that Russia from now on must be considered a minus quantity in military value, although unanimous in believing a separate peace would never be agreed to.

"Japanese mobilization will likely be demanded," declared the newspaper Hochi. "We advise a special mission to Russia. Should the German influence extend eastward to the Ural mountains, Asia's future would be endangered and Japan threatened. There is increasing necessity for mobilization. The nation should prepared for such an issue."

The newspaper Nichi Nichi deplored recent German gains and declared the Entente must arouse itself to greater efforts. "The Japanese people," the editorial asserted, "must be ready for any emergency. The government must prepare for any eventuality."

SITUATION MUDDLED

Local Political Matters To-day Are About as Involved as the Conflict Between the Bolsheviki and Kerensky

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING

Things in Russia may be considerably involved, but they have very little on the political situation in West Peterborough. To-night Sir George E. Foster is announced as the principal speaker at a mass meeting in the Armouries. The advertisements state that the Minister is to speak "on behalf of the Borden Union Administration and Capt. Burnham's candidature."

Capt. Burnham takes the position that because the Liberal Convention last Saturday refused a proposal to enter into the question of a Union Convention that there is no possibility of any one but himself being the Union candidate.

That his views are not shared by many prominent Conservatives and Liberals is evidenced by the fact that a Union Convention has been called for Friday night of this week in Victoria Hall for the purpose of choosing a Union candidate. The committee who have called the meeting are relying on Premier Borden's promise that if a candidate is decided upon at a Union Convention, that candidate will be recognised as the Government candidate.

Just now the question is, What will Sir George Foster say about the local situation to-night? Will he endorse Capt. Burnham, or side-step local matters and talk on the general situation?

BIG PROGRAMME FOR THE VICTORY LOAN MEETING ON THURSDAY NIGHT

Public is Invited to Attend at the Grand Opera House—Addresses By Two Prominent Toronto Men —C. G. E. Employees Interested in Loan.

A HAVELOCK MEETING

With 56,950 subscribed yesterday the city's contribution to the Victory Loan totalled $160,650 at the close of the second day. This is not the complete sum for a few of the results had not been received.

This morning a committee of five workers "raided" the Canadian General Electric Works and were warmly received. It was apparently a surprise to many of the employees that they could buy their bonds on the partial payment plan. Mr. R. L. Warren, the county organizer, Ward, Patterson, Ed. Walton, G. O. Cameron, and D. W. Lewis, conducted the drive and every convenience was offered to them, and the workmen for discussing the details of the Loan. The reception was one of the bright features of the opening of the campaign. No investors have shown deeper interest than the men at the benches to whom 5½ per cent. looks as good as to the man with the big bank account. Thirty applications were received at the C.G.E. in a short time this morning.

Public Meeting To-morrow Night.

The public is reminded of the public meeting at the Grand Opera House Thursday night, to be addressed by Mr. W. L. McKinnon and Mr. N. F. Davidson, of Toronto. An entertaining programme of music has been arranged, and will be published to-morrow.

Don't forget this meeting. Everybody up to make it a success.

Friday night Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. Vincent Eastwood will address a meeting in Havelock.

TORONTO, Nov. 14. — Ontario is coining sympathies into a golden stream of subscriptions for the Victory Loan. The revised totals of subscriptions from all centres of this province reported up till noon being $22,536,550, with many points to hear from. It is announced here to-day that plans are being perfected whereby the small wage earner will be able to buy a fifty or a hundred dollar bond and pay for it on a $1 or $2 a week plan. Another new feature to be brought out shortly is a post card contract form to take the place for small buyers of the present bank contract, which seems to be scaring many small buyers by its legal verbiage. Sudbury has exceeded its allotment by $28,000. It is announced that the whole of Northern Ontario is subscribing very well particularly the miners, who include many aliens.

Sergt. Archie McBride Wounded After Nearly Three Years At Front

Peterboro' Man Who Won the Military Medal Some Time Ago is Officially Reported Wounded--Pte. W. J. Gadona Formerly of the 93rd, Also Hit--To-day's Military News

WOUNDED.

Sergt. Archie McBride, M.M., 4th Battery, C.F.A., Simcoe street.

Pte. W. J. Gadoua, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Park street south.

Pte. J. W. Girvin, Infantry, Peterborough.

SERGT. ARCHIE McBRIDE.

Mrs. Laura McBride, 183 Simcoe street, has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Sergt. Archie McBride, M.M., Canadian Field Artillery, is officially reported admitted to the 1st Field Ambulance Depot on Nov. 5th, suffering from a gunshot wound in the right thigh. Sergt. McBride left here with the 24th Field Battery's quota to the 1st contingent in August, 1914, and has been at the front with the 4th Battery for nearly three years, going through the second battle of Ypres, Festubert, Givenchy, Zillebeke, the Somme, Vimy Ridge and Lens. He was awarded the Military Medal some time ago for conspicuous bravery at the front.

PTE. WM. JOSEPH GADOUA.

Mrs. Joseph Gadoua, Park street south, has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. William Joseph Gadoua, of the Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to No. 24 General Hospital, Etaples, on Oct. 31st, suffering from a gun shot wound in the side. Pte. Gadoua and his brother, Pte. Roy Gadoua, enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion and after going overseas with that unit, were transferred to the 5th C.M.R. in France.

PTE. J. W. GIRVIN.

Pte. J. W. Girvin, of Peterborough, is officially reported wounded to-day, his name appearing in the official list announced from Ottawa. Pte. Girvin enlisted out side of this district.

PTE. VINCENT LEAHY.

Pte. Vincent Leahy, of Douro, who is officially reported, died of wounds at the Forty-seventh Casualty Clearing Station, 28th October — gunshot wound in abdomen.

Pte. Leahy enlisted in Toronto with the 257th Canadian Railway Transport, and went overseas last February. He has been in France eight months. His parents are dead, and he is survived by several brothers and sisters residing in Douro.

Mrs. David Hartley has received an interesting letter from her son, Sapper S. C. Hartley of the 2nd Canadian Railway Troops, formerly of the 93rd Battalion. In part Pte. Hartley says:

"We are having a lot of wet weather lately, so you may know we have plenty of mud. I saw six boys out of the 93rd yesterday and they told me how some of my chums were getting on, and sorry to say how some of them were killed lately. I hope to get ten days' leave at Kingston either to Paris or England. It will soon be eleven months since I left England for France. It seems a long time, but I guess if all goes well next summer I'll be back with you. Had a pretty close call last night. Old Fritz came over and dropped bombs beside our camp. Killed a lot of horses, but just missed us."

Pte. Hartley encloses a letter of thanks to Mrs. Baker, in which he expresses his thanks for sending him the Examiner and some socks. "I am sure you have no idea how we boys appreciate reading the news from our own home," he writes. "I have three chums who come from Peterborough and they like to read the Peterborough papers also, so I pass them on.

SAYS ENEMY ATTEMPTS HAVE BEEN CHECKED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.

ROME, Nov. 14.—Enemy attempts to cross the Piave river, Donna Di Piavo, and Intestadura, were suppressed with serious enemy losses. This afternoon's War Office statement declared: "Between the Branta river and the Piave the enemy occupied the front from Tozze to Lamon to Fonsano to Feltre." "Enemy troops filtered through Mainsby in the region of Cricolera to between the Piave and Vecchia, where they were held," the War Office stated.

Grisolera is about four miles from the sea on the Piave river, just below Donna Di Piavo, where the Berlin official statement last night said German troops have crossed the Piave.

FRANK JENNE Says:
Not everybody knows that I keep the best stock of working pants in the city. Styles that are good enough for frock coat wear, though the materials are hard-wear cloth, close-woven. All sizes, in $2.50 and $3.00 lines. "Come to me."

Mr. Hall Kept At Ottawa By A Big Case

Standing By His Engagement to Client, Although He Realizes His Own Interests May Suffer

A message has been received from Mr. R. R. Hall that he is still engaged in a very important case in the Supreme Court of Canada at Ottawa. On Saturday he endeavoured to get the case postponed until the next sittings of the Court, but was unable to do so. He offered to throw up his retainer, realizing the importance of his presence in Peterborough and the valuable time that he was losing in organization work for the pending election. His clients refused permission, and refused to engage other counsel, and insisted upon him acting as chief counsel in the conduct of their case. In addition to the several thousands of dollars that are involved in the case, the rights of the parties to trade in Canada are involved. The importance of the case can be realized when it is considered that trade involved amounts to over $200,000 a year.

Mr. Hall, however, at great sacrifice to himself, is standing by his engagement. This is characteristic of the man. The same self-denial and the same strict attention to his representative duties characterized him during the four years that he was member for this riding. The electors of West Peterborough can be safely assured that the same fidelity to the interests of West Peterborough would characterize him if he were again returned as a member to represent this riding.

Mass Meeting of Electors
WEST PETERBOROUGH

Pursuant to instructions of a meeting held under the joint auspices of Liberal and Conservative electors supporting the Union Government, I am directed to call a Mass Meeting of the electors of West Peterborough on Friday, the sixteenth day of November, A.D., 1917, at 8 o'clock p.m., at Victoria Hall (formerly known as Bradburn's Opera House), 332 George Street, Peterborough, for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest the election of a member to represent West Peterborough in the Dominion House of Commons. Sir Robert Borden has pledged himself that the candidate selected at such meeting will be recognized as the Government Candidate. Prominent speakers are expected to address the meeting. No party politics. Veterans and ladies are particularly requested to be present.

THE GREAT WANT.

We need men for the army; we need money, but the supreme need—the need that presses with the strongest claim to being met—is the need for food for the allies.

The Entente allies and countries of the allies are short 300 million bushels of wheat, and without its supply the fighting men, and the cause they are fighting for, will be imperilled.

They may have numerous, brave and well equipped armies; but unless they are properly fed and the people behind them in the allied countries are fed and kept able and contented, the armies do not count to the fullest.

This war has expanded in the scope of its relations and reactions. It is no longer a sectional fight. Every allied battle front depends upon the energy and cooperation of the other.

We are not giving the best all round aid by concentrating attention on the western front. Lloyd George, speaking at the formation of an allied council of war, to secure intenser allied cooperation, said that without unity of action disaster to the Entente Alliance was threatened. He said with "brutal frankness" that—

"The war had been prolonged by isolated action among the entente allies. It will be shortened by solidarity."

So Canada's help, to be the best war-winning help, must come in the form that will be most acceptable to the needs of the allies as a whole.

And the supreme need is food. There is plentiful supply and promise of continued supply of munitions, but the promise of food supply is not so encouraging.

In this supply Canada can do a part with proper and adequate government direction and leading.

Mr. Hall has an appreciation of the absolutely first importance of the food supply—the production—problem in Canada, and makes it the first article in his political creed at the present time; and will advocate and urge and help the campaign of greater food production as the absolute essential of Canada doing her full share in helping win the war.

The food question was a big factor in demoralizing and disintegrating Russia and putting her out of the fight.

The food factor was not wanting in contributing to the present crisis in Italy's war affairs, and not only in Italy's war affairs, but in the interests of the whole entente alliance.

To bring allied success there must be effective cooperation. That cooperation cannot come without adequate food supplies—the very vitals of military efficiency.

Canada must do her share in a much larger way to help fill the demand for three hundred million bushels of wheat.

If the country were as thoroughly mobilized and earnest in the production of wheat and other foods as she is in the production of less pressing needs—men and money—her share in the help to victory would be more adequately fulfilled.

President Wilson, speaking to Labour, said: "We must stand together night and day until this job is finished."

DUTY OF EATING FISH.

In order that we may save exportable food, we are asked to eat less beef, bread and bacon. We can easily come to this in the matter of bacon, for a high financier has hung it too high for the average reach. We can help save the foods by concentrating our mastication upon other food articles. Fish, for instance, is an article of diet whose use will help save bacon and beef—our water products can be made to save our land products. Meatless days will lose much of their famine aspect by serving fish, which are comparatively cheap, and the scientists tell us, are rich in digestible nutrients, chiefly in the form of protein, fat, starch and sugar. Fish is not only a wholesome food, but a brain strengthener, something that is needed if we are to find ourselves in the present complicated political crisis. The rule of the Church which requires abstinence from meat on Fridays and the substitution of fish, is founded, like the Mosaic dietary regulations, upon common sense. A change of diet is good for the health. Patriotic obligations, which are essentially religious obligations, appeal to us to eat more fish. Great Britain, a pretty good model to follow, eats 56 pounds of fish per head per year, while Canada's fish consumption per head is only 29 pounds.

We can therefore take patriotically to a fish diet in order to save exportable food. It is our duty to save this food. We are subscribing, and we hope over-subscribing, the Victory Loan of 150 millions. The great need of this money is to finance British and allied food purchases in Canada. If we don't provide—save the food—in part by eating fish as a patriotic duty and as a wholesome change of diet we shall have no food to sell. If you cannot subscribe to the Victory Loan you can help its object by eating fish.

In buying fresh fish, as signs that they are fresh, see that the eyes are bright and prominent, the flesh firm, and the gills red.

IS IT GENUINE?

The present political situation has a resemblance to that of 1911. Then anyone who said he believed that better trade relations with the United States was desirable, was branded as a traitor. Now everyone that does not bow down to the Union Government, and swallow the party candidates of the old regime, is also a traitor, and worse than that, a pro-German.

Is the Union Government true to name? Does it combine, in honest form and proportion, the best elements of the two great parties. It is Union in name, but is there not reason to quote—"the voice is the voice of Jacob; but the hands are the hands of Esau"?

We have reason to think, and more than that, to fear, that the influence and spirit of the old Borden Government is paramount and dominant.

Sir Robert Borden, the leader of the Union Government, was the leader of the old government, whose administration and weaknesses brought the criticism of his own friends. He is the same man, and the remnant of the discarded government are the same men in the Union government, that they were in the old government, whose inefficiency, wastefulness, and lack of go, was so strongly impressed upon themselves that it was found necessary to take refuge from the impending storm of popular indignation under the protecting guise of a Union Government.

With the same leader, and a majority of the same men that composed the former government, is it probable that they could change all at once into an efficient and honest administration; that in a night in regard to their characters, there should be "a sea-change into something rich and strange"?

Considering the record of the Borden government, considering that it made such a mess of war administration, that it had to be ostensibly replaced by a Union Government to have any standing in the country, there seems to be some reason for the feeling held by many that the Union Government is the Borden Government in another form, with ulterior design of holding office by virtue of the nine points of the law—possession.

That this feeling is not altogether unwarranted, is evidenced by the attitude of the former parliamentary supporters of the Borden Government, who, all over the country, claim the rights of possession, claim priority as candidates, on the ground of their having been supporters of the Borden government. Even in this riding the nominal Conservative candidate—officially—in his address to the electors—persists in calling the Union Government, the "Borden Union Government"—the party connection must be kept up.

The head of the Union Government, to keep up appearances of non-partizanship, declares that the Union Government will recognize nobody as its candidate unless he has the nomination of a convention held under the joint auspices of Liberal and Conservative Unionists.

Yet, Mr. Burnham persists in regarding himself as the Union candidate, and Sir Robert Borden, more in partizan than Union spirit, permits disregard of the conditions, publicly and formally laid down, and endorses a candidate who has no Union endorsation, and would not be even chosen the candidate of a party if the nomination were to be made to-day. Mr. Burnham conspicuously announces in The Examiner that Sir George Foster is to address a meeting in Peterborough in the interests of a party candidate. The same thing is done in East Peterborough, where Mr. Sexsmith, the Conservative candidate, is being endorsed, without any formality of joint selection, by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, a member of the Union Government.

When the Union Government arranges to hand-pick its candidates, it betrays its latent partizanship, by accepting without the selective draft, pronounced partizan candidates.

The Mail and Empire, the organ-in-chief of the Conservative party, endorses the action, and argues that only candidates with a record of unbroken support of the Borden government's war measures—including, of course, the win-the-election franchise act, are ipso facto Unionists. It hints that Liberal converts to Unionism cannot be trusted—to stand by the Borden government masquerading as a Unionist Government.

Lance-Corporal Waddell, a Toronto returned soldier, is still fighting. Though he lost both legs at the front, he was carried pick-a-back to the office to buy a Victory Bond.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,— It is to be hoped that the organ recital at Murray street church on Friday night will be attended by all lovers of good music in the city. Miss Ida Sanderson is one of the most popular organists of the city and this is the first occasion that she was granted to the general public an opportunity to form an opinion of her talent. I am informed that her programme is varied and the numbers very select.

Miss Sanderson will be assisted by Miss Winnifred Parker, whose ability as an elocutionist has delighted every audience here which has heard her and Mr. Asa Huycke, A.T.C.M., the well known local baritone. Mr. Huycke is achieving fame throughout Amerien as a composer of unusual talent and Peterborough is to be congratulated on such a rising star. But Mr. Huycke is also a baritone of a very high order and this summer took a special course of vocal study in Chicago, where the Boston English Opera Company tried to secure his services for the coming winter. I understand that he will sing several new compositions which are specially suitable to his voice.

The proceeds of the recital are to be turned over to the Red Cross Society, which gives an added reason why a big crowd should turn out.

Yours truly,
MUSIC LOVER.

Mr. Feedwell came home well pleased with his achievement at the employment agency.

"I engaged two cooks to-day," he said.

"Why two?" said his wife. "We need only one."

"I know," said Mr. Feedwell, "but one comes to-morrow and the other a week from to-morrow." — Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

DIRECTION WILLIAM FOX

In "THE HONOR SYSTEM"—Presents Truthful Story.

Lovers of thrills will realize that the greatest thriller in life is Truth when they view the monster photoplay, "The Honor System," which Williama Fox will soon present here. It tells the story of an inventor of genius who battles against terrific odds in achieving a new and stupendous feat of wireless communication between the United States and a foreign land. Many of the details as well as the broad outline of the story are founded on fact. In this great drama of the screen Mr. Fox has vindicated the motion picture beyond all dispute.

This wonderful human interest photoplay comes to "The Grand" for two days commencing Friday, November 16.

There will be two performances given daily, matinee at 2:30, evening 8:15

DRUGS KILLING A DEFECTIVE

Dr. Haiselden Defends Slow Death of Child from Opiates.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13. — Painless death by means of drugs is being applied to Paul Modzima of 718 May street, a child with a microscephalous head, by Dr. Harry J. Haiselden of the German-American Hospital, according to the physician's admission.

"The boy's head is malformed and he suffers from a stricture of the trachea, which causes laboured breathing. He would always remain a helpless idiot," said Dr. Haiselden.

Opiates being administered for the primary purpose of relieving pain will cause the death of the child in several months, it is admitted. Without any treatment he might live several years in agony.

Regardless of the fact that the treatment can have no other result than the child's death, it was defended by the physician, who also disclaimed the right to administer a lethal dose that would cause immediate death.

"The use of the drugs in assisting deformed and helpless organisms out of constant pain is a more refined method than the ancients employed," said Dr. Haiselden. "Desertion of some infants was practiced in Africa and among the Creek Indians the hatchet was used. Mental and physical defectives' lives should not be prolonged."

Several cases were cited in support of the theory of painless death, one being the case of a 10-year-old girl who is only a living organism and can utter only two words.

"Where such lives are shortened," the physician concluded, "the parents' lives are prolonged."

Cholly—Did you notice that Miss Bute permitted me to have the first dance with her last night?

Jack—Yes. She told me she always believed in having disagreeable things over with as soon as possible.

Too many touches will harden the easy mark.

Leader of Russian Maximalists Lived in Saskatoon—Spread Propaganda Among the Doukhobors.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 13.— Word from Saskatoon, Sask., states: Leon Trotsky, leader of the Maximalists in Russia, for two years lived here, making it his headquarters for a social-democrat propaganda among the Russians in Western Canada. He was later arrested in Montreal by the Immigration authorities, but was released on the intercession of Kerensky. He was very active in the Doukhobor settlements and caused much unrest there and worry to Government officials.

WORK OF KITCHENER LEAGUE APPRECIATED

The following letters have been received by a member of the Canadian Kitchener League from Peterborough soldiers overseas:

Mrs. W. Gere,
273 John street.

Dear Madam,—I received the parcel of socks from you quite safe, which I distributed among a number of boys and of course, among as many Peterborough boys as was possible. We are united in our thanks and appreciation of the kindness of yourself and the ladies associated with you. The League, I can assure, donations of the kind are always very welcome to the boys, especially at this time of the year, because we are just beginning to get the dirty weather now. But the boys are in good spirits despite the weather. We are beginning to see good results of a hard summer's work. I hope the work will soon be accomplished and the time will soon be here when we shall all be in Peterborough again and be able to thank the good people of the different leagues for all the kindness they have shown to the Peterborough boys in France.

Thanking you all again for the parcel received, I remain,

Yours faithfully,
CORP. E. ABRAHAM.

France, Oct. 26.

Dear Mrs. Gere,— Having received the bundle of socks from the Kitchener League with your note enclosed, mailed on Sept. 25th, this evening, I thought I would write to thank you for them while I have the opportunity. The socks are most acceptable, especially this time of the year and we are all very thankful for your kind thoughtfulness.

The Kitchener League is certainly doing a good work in supplying comforts for the boys from Peterborough, and you would oblige me greatly as well as the rest of the fellows if you would kindly convey to every member of the League our thankfulness for their kindness.

Yours sincerely,

Signed on behalf of the Peterborough boys in the 20th Battalion.
KENNETH J. BROWN.

Troops and Supplies Reaching France

In Increasing Numbers, Pershing Reports

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 14. — General Pershing said to the correspondents: "Troops and supplies are arriving in increasing numbers."

Thanks to the French, British, and American navies, he continued, the submarine to date had not claimed the life of a single American soldier on the troop ships bound for France. The French officers, he said, were enthusiastic over the character, intelligence, and eagerness of the young officers who are arriving in France to continue their instruction, and the American Army is proud of them.

Conditions in the American sector continue to be normal, with intermittent artillery firing on both sides. At one place the Germans observed that the grass had been trodden down in the rear, and they threw in a hundred shells, with no result other than to churn up the mud.

The weather continues to be cold and rainy. The American infantrymen have had two diversions. The first incident occurred near daylight. The enemy, apparently thinking that a raid was imminent, opened up with machine guns at the point where the lines are closest. A stream of bullets whistled over the American first line. About the same time French troops on the American flank observed four Germans who were cutting the barbed wire defenses. A French patrol succeeded in heading off the Germans, capturing all of them.

Mrs. Chas. Peden Gains 27 Pounds

Twice Examined and Each Time Told Operation Was Only Hope

"I have just finished my third bottle of Tanlac and have gained twenty-seven pounds," was the truly remarkable statement made by Mrs. Chas. Peden, residing at 550 Mill Street, Huntsville, Ala. Mrs. Peden is one of the best known and highly respected women of that thriving little city, where she has made her home for a number of years.

"When I commenced taking the medicine," she continued, "I only weighed ninety-eight pounds; now I weigh 125 pounds, and never felt better in my life. For years I have suffered with a bad form of stomach trouble, constipation, and pains in my side and back. At times the pains took the form of torture, and I was twice examined, and each time I was told that I had appendicitis, and that an operation would be my only hope. I had fallen off until I only weighed ninety-eight pounds, and was so weak I could hardly get around.

"I had no appetite at all scarcely, and what little I did eat would cause gas to form in my stomach, which gave me palpitation of the heart, sick headaches, and a dizzy feeling about the head. When the spells came on I would get awfully nervous. I worried about myself until I could rest and sleep but little.

"I had fallen off until I was almost skin and bones, and my strength and energy were slowly leaving me. I had a dread of the future and could see nothing but the operating table and the knife. I had a perfect horror of an operation, but I had made up my mind that it was either life or death, and prepared to submit to it. I had made all preparations for the operation, and called on my sister to tell her good-bye, as I did not know whether I would live to see her again or not. My sister begged and pleaded with me not to allow them to cut on me, and told me to wait and try a good tonic for a while. The next day, as I returned from the consultation room I thought of what she said, and as I had heard so much about Tanlac I decided to try it as a last resort, and stopped at Gilbert's drug store and bought a bottle. Of course, I had lost heart and had no faith in the medicine, but to please my sister I made up my mind to take it, and oh, what a happy day that was for me!

"I never returned for the operation, but just kept taking the Tanlac. Right from the start I began to feel better. The medicine seemed to take hold right at once. It had a soothing effect, and in a few days I felt no pain at all. I was so happy over the wonderful improvement in my condition that I sent for my neighbours to tell them how much better I felt. I sent and got another bottle of Tanlac, and have just finished taking my third bottle, and feel like I have been made all over again into a new woman.

"As I have said before, I now weigh 125 pounds, and my improvement has been so rapid that none of my clothes are big enough for me. I will have to make them all over again. I now have a ravenous appetite, and my husband says I am simply eating him out of house and home. I have even gone back to my coffee, which I was told not to touch. Those terrible pains in my back and head have all disappeared, and I sleep like a child. I am no longer nervous, and when I get up mornings I feel refreshed cheerful and bright. I am now able to attend to my household duties, and I feel as if I had started life all over again. My husband is highly delighted, and my recovery is the talk of the neighborhood. I do nothing but rejoice all day long over the recovery of my health and praise Tanlac to everybody.

"I feel so grateful for my escape from the operating table and the knife that you may publish what I have said; you may, if you will, tell other women suffering as I was, to come and see me, and I will be glad to tell them all about my case."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

FIRST ARREST UNDER MILITARY SERVICE ACT

KINGSTON, Nov. 13. — The first arrest under the Military Service Act was made to-day when local officials took into custody a young farmer who had failed to register, apply for exemption, or report for service. He claims that he was married at Syracuse on July 6th, and his story is being investigated.

PTE. WM. JARVIS, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported wounded for the second time.

UNIONS IN GERMANY GROW.

Male Membership in Free Trade Organisations Now 780,180.

In the first three months of the current year the number of men belonging to the Free Trade Unions of Germany increased 30,791, bringing the total male membership up to 780,180, according to data found in the Korrespondenz Blatt, the organ of the General Commission of German Trade Unions headed by Karl Legien, a pro-Kaiser Deputy to the Reichstag.

The number of women unionists rose from 179,022 to 226,105, making the total number of organised workers 1,006,285 on 1st April. When the war began there were about 2,500,000 workers organised in the free trade unions, of whom some 1,350,000 have joined the colours.

"On what ground does your wife want a divorce? Incompatibility?" "You may call it that. My income isn't compatible with her ideas of comfort."

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Gardens At The Children's Shelter Have Produced Many Supplies For Winter Use

The Children's Aid Society balance on 1st November was $1,607.32, according to the statement presented at the regular meeting yesterday afternoon. All the reports were exceptionally satisfactory, and not the least creditable was that presented by Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, showing the results of the ladies' gardening efforts at the Shelter. It was a long list of vegetables and fruits stored away for the winter's use, in addition to the quantities consumed since the summer. Nine bags of potatoes are in the cellar and nine others have been eaten since July. Three pecks of tomatoes have been made into sauces, there are twenty pounds of beans, quantities of turnips, parsnips, beets, carrots, and the perishable radishes, lettuce, and other varieties that were consumed as they ripened. There are onions, strawberries, fifty pounds of raspberries preserved, and cherries, black currants, and other fruits for winter delicacies. Grapes, red and white currants, and other fruits and vegetables, even to endives, sage, and all the harvest of an extensive market garden.

"And the expenses were just $6.95, and another $4 for potatoes," added Mrs. Gibbs, who was no less delighted with the crop than the other members of the Board.

The Agent's Report.

Mr. Powell reported the following activities: Applications for children, 11; children involved, 20; complaints 5; complaints investigated, 4; visits to Keene, Hastings, Warsaw, Norwood, Toronto, and Centre Dummer; one address to the Teachers' Institute; attendance at Police Court, 3; wards placed, 1; returned to the Shelter, 2; six wards were visited.

Where Nature Provides.

At one home in Dummer, Mr. Powell found among the supplies for the winter, two bags of butter nuts, salt fish, and other goods, also the skins of animals that had been trapped. The walls of the dwelling were open in many places, and there was an evident need of more scrupulous cleanliness on the part of the mother, who promised to follow the instructions of the agent.

Another home presented a more serious problem. The house had been burned down, and the Dummer Council had rebuilt, and by regular allowances practically maintains the family.

"The father came out like a wildman," said Mr. Powell, "and the mother didn't seem to understand what I said. It was said that the three children get meat no oftener than once in six weeks, although the father said they had it more frequently. They are from a bad family all through, but the children seemed bright, especially a little three-year-old girl. Dr. Munro had recommended that the chidren be taken from the parents, particularly because the mother is a mental weakling. He said the children would have a better chance if moved to new and proper surroundings."

Adjt. McElhiney moved, seconded by Chief Thompson, that the children be made wards of the Society.---Carried.

The children are three, six and ten years old respectively.

Finance Report.

The Finance Committee's report, presented by Mrs. Gibbs, recommended the payment of the following accounts:

Turnbull's	$ 4 50
R. Hicks Co.	130 00
Mrs. Brumwell	5 00
R. Hall	4 80

Thanks to Doctors.

The thanks of the society have been extended to Doctors Scott, Morgan, and Buchanan for their services in treating wards. Dr. King, who suggested that the appreciation of the society be conveyed to them, was informed that it had already been done.

Mr. Powell reported that he had not received his first two months' salary from the Government amounting to $80. There was no doubt of its being forwarded, as the agent's expenses money for the same time had been paid.

On Chief Thompson's motion, the society advanced the money to Mr. Powell, who will refund it when it is received from the Department.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting will be held next month, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the friends of the society.

LLOYD GEORGE ASKED FOR A STATEMENT

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Premier Lloyd George was asked in the Commons today by former Premier Asquith for a statement in regard to his Paris speech in which he spoke of the new Inter-Allied committee, and blunders which he said had been made by the Allies. The Premier is expected to defer a full statement until later, when an opportunity will be given to the House to discuss it.

SIFT YOUR ASHES AND SAVE THE FUEL

We are urged to strict food economy. To use foods with caution and as sparingly as possible, and of selected kinds. This to conserve the supply. Very good.

But, side by side with this propaganda, is one other equally important and, in fact, more vital. To use with discretion and to save in all manner of ways. For the pinch is coming sure as gun is iron. But domestic economy in this regard will do what it can to make up for shortage.

Householders are urged to make a practice of sifting the ashes from the furnace or range. This is done by many in a sort of desultory way, more as a matter of conscience than in an effort to save fuel. In past seasons the matter was not one of vital importance, for coal was not at the present day prices, but now waste of coal is little short of criminal.

So the ashes must be sifted. Ask the man who removes the ashes from front and rear of houses if ashes are sifted. He will tell you that sifting is poorly done. What the cans and boxes of ashes contain much coal. Coal that he says is a shame to throw away.

The stores along George street are the worst sinners in this respect. Where the fire in the stove or furnace is in charge of the boy or the young clerk the coal pile suffers. Firing is a disagreeable duty, at an rate. The fire is dumped, the contents of the ash pan shovelled out, and dumped in the box outside. Coal and all. The boss pays the bill. The boy is not paid for saving coal, any way.

Indeed one citizen was so impressed by what he said and saw that he wanted some public action taken to minimize the fault. For here is the trend of the practice. The man who wastes coal will presently be back shouting for more, and back about two weeks before he should.

In answer to the plea to have ashes sifted, the mechanic or professional man replies that he can make more money by going on with his work or duties than he can by taking care of the ash pan. Possibly he can. But in his neglect he is doing something to use up the fuel that should be conserved and will need to be conserved before this winter is over.

Many contrivances have been devised to sift ashes. All are more or less inefficient, and will be so until one is devised that will see and think and separate the clinkers and lumps of slate from the coal. You can get rid of the ashes, but not of the combined mixture. This if placed on the fire just uses that much heat to get the mass red hot. Robbing the useful coal of that much service.

A good-sized, plain, general-purpose, old-fashioned sifter is best. With the ashes dampened a trifle the job is not so disagreeable, and may be done in any cellar. Pick out the unburnable debris and use the balance. It will help to extend the life of the coal in the bin. Sift ashes and do it now.

MISS CELETE SCUDDER—As "Luana," in "The Bird of Paradise."

Local playgoers will find much more than passing interest in Richard Walton Tully's charming play, "The Bird of Paradise," which comes to "The Grand" next Wednesday, November 21, for two performances.

The play touches a virgin field, so far as the stage world is concerned, and it is probably the one worthy attempt to date to preserve in dramatic form the vanishing customs, beliefs and legends of the Hawaiians. Mr. Tully had a rich field to draw his material, selecting wisely and discriminately, his play possessing merit, aside from its unsual intrinsic value as a drama. Manager Morosco has provided a well-balanced cast for the interpretation of the various roles. Miss Celete Scudder, nineteen-year-old leading woman of charm and magnetism, is to be seen as Luana, the little Hawaiian princess.

PACKERS' PROFITS TO BE CONTROLLED BY GOVERNMENT

Plan is Officially Announced at Ottawa—"Looks to Me Like a Fair Proposition" Said Mr. Matthews

OTTAWA, Nov. 14. — Official announcement has been made of the Government's plan to establish effective control over all packing houses in Canada, a step which Sir Robert Borden announced would be taken shortly after the organization of the present Union Administration. The action taken provides for a control of the profits of the packers, and provides also for the appropriation by the Government of all profits in excess of 15 per cent. One-half of all profits in excess of 7 per cent. and up to 15 per cent. will be taken by the Government. The official announcement is as follows:

"In carrying out the policy of the Union Government as announced by the Prime Minister shortly after its formation, it has been decided to establish effective control over all packing houses in Canada.

"The control of profits shall be as follows:

"1. No packer shall be entitled to a profit of more than 2 per cent. of his total annual utrnover, that is, his total sales during any one year.

"2. If the 2 per cent. on annual turnover exceeds 7 per cent. on the actual capital invested in the business, the profits shall be further restricted as follows:

"(a) Up to 7 per cent. on capital the packer may retain the profits.

"(b) If the profits exceed 7 per cent. and do not exceed 15 per cent., one-half of the profits in excess of 7 per cent. shall belong to the packer and one-half to the Government.

"(c) All profits in excess of 15 per cent. shall belong to the Government.

"Suitable regulations shall be made to insure the carrying out of this policy."

The above is he fulfilmen of a plan which has been in course of preparation for some time, and announced at Winnipeg on the 22nd of October.

Fair Proposition.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, of the Matthews-Blackwell Company, Limited, when interviewed to-day regarding the foregoing announcement, said that he was not in a position to discuss the proposal until he had sufficient time to consider the plan, together with all its details. "It looks to me like a fair proposition," said Mr. Matthews.

CHICKEN, HUNTER'S STYLE.

Take a young roasting chicken weighing about three or three and a half pounds or two broilers and cut them up as for a fricasee. Put one tablespoon of olive oil and one rounding tablespoon of buter into a pan, and add one small onion sliced, one green pepper cut in stripes and two well-ripened tomatoes. Cover and cook slowly for ten or fifteen minutes. Then uncover and add one table spoon of chopped parsley and pepper, and salt to season. Cook about ten minutes without the cover and serve piping hot.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

PARCELS TO OFFICER PRISONERS MUST BEAR RED CROSS COUPON

New Arrangement Instituted by the British Government is Announced by the Post Office Department—Regulations in Regard to Other Prisoners Unchanged.

The Post Office Department, Ottawa, announces the following:

In co-ordination with the new scheme instituted by the British Government, all parcels from Canada to officer prisoners of war interned in Germany or Austria-Hungary containing foodstuffs, on and after 1st January, 1918, can only be accepted for onward transmission by the postal service if they bear a "coupon" issued by the Prisoners of War Department, Canadian Red Cross Society, London, England.

Under the new arrangement the amount of foodstuffs which may be sent to an officer prisoner of war during four weeks must not exceed one hundred pounds. Of this total the Prisoners of War Department of the Canadian Red Cross will send to each interned Canadian officer, including those attached to other than Canadian units not less than six 10-lb. parcels each four weeks. The remaining forty pounds of foodstuffs per four weeks may be sent personally by relatives in Canada, but each parcel must bear a coupon which can be obtained on application from the Prisoners of War Department, Canadian Red Cross Society, London, England.

The right to send food parcels to an officer prisoner of war rests with the next of kin, but may be transferred by the latter or by the prisoner of war himself to any person. It is advisable that application should be made to the Prisoners of War Department, Canadian Red Cross Society, London, England, for the necessary coupons for parcels packed personally at the earliest possible moment.

These coupons are to be used on food parcels only, and no coupons can be issued for amounts under ten pounds. If, therefore, it is desired to despatch a parcel weighing less than ten pounds, an ordinary coupon must be used, and the parcel counts as one of the four permissible in four weeks.

Articles may not be sent to any society for enclosure in any parcel despatched under the Red Cross label. The importance of guarding against any misuse of the label cannot be too strongly emphasised. Such action would not only harm the prisoner to whom the parcel was addressed, but would react on other prisoners and might endanger the whole system of despatching the food supplies to officers and men who have fallen into the hands of the enemy.

Parcels for officers interned in Bulgaria and Turkey come under the new scheme. Owing, however, to the difficulties of postal communication, it is not advisable to send many parcels to officers in Turkish camps. Supplies can be purchased in Asia Minor, and it is better to remit money to the prisoners than send many parcels.

This new scheme relates only to parcels containing foodstuffs for officer prisoners of war interned in enemy countries, and does not affect in any way the present regulations governing the transmission of parcels to prisoners of war other than officers, which regulations remain unchanged.

The needs of officer prisoners of war holding commissions in the Imperial Army are looked after by the Central Prisoners of War Committee, 4 Thurloe Place, London, S.W., England. This committee will supply the necessary coupons to the next-of-kin of these officers for parcels addressed to them which are packed personally.

SUNDAY WORK APPROVED ON THE QUAKER OATS PLANT

Facts Were Laid Before the Ministerial Association—Feeding the Armies

The matter of Sunday work on the new Quaker Oats building has attracted the attention of the local branch of the Lord's Day Alliance, as well as the Ministerial Association. Complaints from friends of the Lord's Day have been frequently made to these two bodies. It was urged that some action should be taken to stop the work. The matter received careful attention, not only from the local branch, but also from the head office in Toronto. The plea advanced by the company was military necessity. It was pointed out that it was not the policy of the Leonard Construction Company, Limited, who are doing the work, nor the Quaker Oats Company, to do anything on Sunday that is not absolutely necessary. The British government have placed orders with the Quaker Oats Company for immense quantities of supples, and it is urging the delivery of every pound of their products that can be made. The government at Washington and the government at Ottawa are classing machinery and metals of every kind for the purpose of reconstructing the Peterboro plant the same as machinery imported for the manufacture of munitions, stating clearly that food for the army is quite as necessary as munitions. They are endeavoring to get the mill building under cover before the winter makes it impossible to continue, and the few Sundays on which they will work in the completion of this building will save them many weeks later.

These facts were recently laid before the Ministerial Association and after consideration it was felt by all that in view of the difficulty of feeding our armies at the front, and the absolute necessity that they should be adequately supplied, the Association did not feel that they were warranted in pressing the case through the Lord's Day Alliance for the stopping of the work. It was agreed further that this statement explaining the situation should be given to the press.

A Christmas Box One Mother Didn't Send To Her Soldier Son

Leaving her home on Braidwood Avenue with a Christmas parcel for her soldier son, in France, Mrs. Thomas Nelson took from the rural mail delivery box, in front of her residence, five letters. Four of them bore the familiar affix of a military serial and the distinguishing marks of the overseas postal service. The ominous yellow of the other envelope flashed its alarming message even as she glanced at it. Almost afraid to open it, an uncertain of its portent, Mrs. Nelson passed down the street to the car line and boarded an uptown car.

The parcel, carefully wrapped and tied for its long journey to the firing front in France, was heavy on her lap, with its cigarettes, candies, cookies, cakes and other delicacies and comforts that are treasured by the soldiers. The bulkiest article was the Christmas cake, on which she had spent three days mixing its fruit, peels and nuts with the maternal love that had been intensified by a long and anxious separation. And tucked tenderly among their presents was a Santa Claus's letter from the young children, in which they wished their brother a happy Christmas, and hoped that he would soon return to them. The box and its delectable contents were but one of the countless missives of love from Canadian homes to their sons and fathers whose names have again been decimated in pushing forward the Ypres salient beyond the ridges that command the plains of Flanders.

Summoning her courage to open the telegram she had prayed never to receive, Mrs. Nelson took out the narrow sheet. Uncomprehending, she read the bare, pitiless official announcement that her son, Ray, had died of wounds. Lest repetition mar all the conviction that here's [illegible] unhealing wounds are deflected to the hearts of mothers, experiences of the kind present the saddest testimony of the reality of their sacrifice.

Dazed by the blow that had dulled her senses, Mrs. Nelson managed to signal a stop before the car had gone many blocks, and wandered homeward a pathetic figure with the Christmas box that had suddenly become a dead unmeaning weight.

Private Ray Nelson was formerly an Otonabee boy. He enlisted with the 93rd Battalion, in September, 1915, and in France was transferred to the Mounted Rifles with the first draft. He had been a year at the front, and as a stretcher-bearer, had been through many dangerous engagements. Not long ago he had written home from a hospital in Belgium that he was recovering from tonsilitis, and expected a ten days leave in Paris. Last Thursday's letters contained fancy postcards, sent to his parents and the younger members of the family.

Since last Thursday, when the telegram announcing her son's death arrived, Mrs. Nelson forwarded the Christmas box with its fruit cake decorated with flags and thick icing to an officer who knew her boy, another Otonabee soldier who had attained a Captaincy, telling him that if he did not care to use it to give it to some of the men who wouldn't know the circumstances of its preparation and delivery.

HIS LAST LETTER.

Private Nelson's last letter, written in September 4th, was as follows:

Dear Mother,—I have just come back from having a swim in the sea. There is a bunch of us on a rest at the seaside, and we are having a fine time. The water is great and puts new life in a fellow. There are a lot of khaki girls and nurses here. We are having fine weather here now and hope you are having the same over there.

Well, the 93rd boys are getting it pretty hard. There are only a few of us left now in our battalion. In the last trip to the trenches there were three wounded very badly, two died of wounds before they reached the dressing station. There one hundred and fifty came to the battalion and I guess there aren't more than ten in it now. Old Fritz seems to have a pick on us. I am pretty busy writing letters. I write to a French girl, and to one in England, besides the ones in Canada.

I have been in the army now two years. I only wish the war would soon end so I could get back with you again. At times I feel very lonesome. Two years away from home is a long time for a young fellow like me. I live in hope of seeing you all soon. I think the war will soon be over, it can't last much longer. One side or the other must give in. When you write to me put on the same address for by the time you get this letter I'll be back with my battalion.

Your loving son,
RAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have received from Ottawa the sympathy of the Prime Minister and the Government of Canada.

Mrs. Nelson has a brother on active service in France and two cousins are prisoners of war in Germany.

$30,090 WAS TOTAL OF RED CROSS EFFORT

Increased Objective Was Successfully Reached and Passed—More Socks Are Needed at Once, Society Announces.

MANY CASES SHIPPED

The regular executive meeting of the local Red Cross Society, which was held on Monday afternoon, was one of marked interest and importance, for it was then that the results of the Red Cross Campaign, recently instituted and so successfully carried through by the Advisory Board, were definitely announced and formally handed over to the Red Cross executive. That the primary objective of $20,000 was the second day raised to $30,000, and that ultimately $30,000 was realized, testified not only to the generosity of the public and their real interest in Red Cross work, but also to the excellent organisation and untiring zeal of the members of the Advisory Board, to whose efforts the splendid success of the campaign was almost entirely due. The sincere appreciation of the executive for the indefatigable enthusiasm evinced by every member of the Advisory Board in the work of the recent campaign was testified to by the hearty endorsement of the vote of thanks, moved by Mrs. Allan and seconded by Mrs. Wood.

The executive wish also to gratefully acknowledge the generous donation of $50 from the "Girls of the Overall Club," the proceeds from the unique tea held last Saturday at Mrs. Cressman's.

Those of us who heard Captain Julia Henshaw's vivid story of Red Cross work among the men in France could not but be impressed by the imperative demand for socks, socks, and still more socks. Let us keep this need constantly in mind, and ply our needles still more vigorously when we realize that the efficient work of the Canadian War Contingent Association, which reaches the boys in the trenches, is dependent on the sum total of individual efforts. Every pair of socks means added comfort for a soldier lad. Should any of us require any further incentive?

Every Wednesday afternoon, Miss Burnett, the convener of the Knitting Committee, will be in the Red Cross work room in the Public Library, and will gladly supply wool to anyone that letters were received this week Front.

In connection with the report of the Packing Committee, it is both interesting and gratifying to know that etters were received his week from Col. Hodgetts, London, England, assuring the local society of the safe arrival in London of all parcels shipped during the summer months up to 10th October.

The report of the Packing Committee for October is as follows:

Madam President and Members of the Peterborough Red Cross Society:

Your Packing Committee report 24 cases shipped for October, containing the following:

Eight dressing gowns, 6 bed jackets, 45 day shirts, 162 pairs pyjamas, 9 hospital night shirts, 558 pairs socks (162 pairs for the C.W.C.D.), 438 sheets, 1,458 towels.

The following societies and auxiliaries have sent in supplies: St. Andrew's Church Berean Bible Class, All Saints' Church, 57th Chapter I.O.D.E., George Street Methodist Church, St. John's C.W.A., Murray Street Baptist Church, St. Paul's Church Auxiliary, Trinity Church, St. Peter's Patriotic Club, Thursday Club.

Flora H. Davidson, Convener.

Don't say "Breakfast Food"—say "Shredded Wheat"—for while you no doubt mean Shredded Wheat, you may get one of those mushy porridges that are a poor substitute for the crisp, delicious shreds of baked whole wheat—that supply all the nutriment for a half day's work. Two Biscuits with milk or cream make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents.

The Jockey of Death

yet. It was shown in Loew's Theatre one whole week, when hundreds could not gain admission. The prices at Loew's were 25c, 50c, and 75c, but this world masterpiece can be seen at the Royal Theatre, Friday and Saturday next, at the same old prices: Afternoons 10c, Evenings 15c. All who can should attend the matinees as the theatre's seating capacity will be taxed to the limit at night.

FRENCH TOBACCO NO MORE.

Home Manufactured Product Not to be Had in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Paris to-day is entirely out of French-made cigarettes and tobacco. The tobacco dealers put up signs in both French and English, reading:

"No French Cigarettes or Tobacco."

Certain brands of French cigarettes have been scarce for some time, but this is the first occasion on which all French varieties and also French tobacco have been unobtainable.

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

Question.—J.T.S.: Will you please tell me how I should fix my walls so that wallpaper will stick to them? It is a new house, and I put some paper on, but it won't stick. It loosens and makes a cracking noise. I am told I should size my walls first. What kind of size should I use?

Answer.—There are several ways to prepare walls. You do not say what your walls are like, but I presume, as it is a new house, that your walls are properly plastered with a smooth finish. If so, it will be necessary to remove all the old paper first. Then dissolve white fish glue in water in the proportions of five of water to one of glue, heating over a slow fire, to which add about two ounces of powdered allum. Go over all your walls with this solution, when it is thoroughly dry you may go ahead and stick your paper on in the usual way.

Question.—Mrs. E.L.B.: Dear sir, —I would appreciate very much if through your Arts and Crafts column you would suggest some way to brighten my little den? I use it a had the woodwork enamelled white, th woodwork enamelled white, and the walls are papered with a very soft, self tone plain grey, with a little white enamel art moulding at the top, and although there is perfect harmony in colours, the room always feels cold and uninviting to me. Thanking you in anticipation.

Answer.—I can easily understand what is required to make your den inviting. I would suggest using a fairly bright navajoe rug on your floor (providing, of course, your floor is a polished one). Use one that has lots of life, intermingled with grey. On your table, which also should be bright, such as cherry or mahogany, keep some strong, bright-coloured books, fancy basket or Indian work basket. Here and there on the wall place a placque that has good, bright lively colours on it. Let your pictures also be bright. A little art calendar suspended by a bright-coloured ribbon will also help.

Question.—"Inquirer": I have a polished dining-room table, upon which a warm plate was placed, with the result that a mark resembling the bloom on a plum has marred it. What can I do?

Answer.—Try rubbing over the spot with some warm camphorated oil, allowing it to stand a little while, then polishing off.

Question.—"Perplexed": Will you kindly tell me, through the Arts and Crafts column, what will take kalsomine off a polished bookcase?

Answer.—As most kalsomines dissolve readily in water, try soaking the spots with a little cold water, then with a soft rag or sponge wash off with a little clean water.

Lady—I'm afraid you don't like work, my good man.

Tramp—How kin I, lady, seein' it killed me pore wife?

WAR COUNCIL IS DISCUSSED

Lloyd George Explains Agreement Creating the Organization

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 14. — The fight against Premier Lloyd George's support of an inter-allied war council came to a head in the House of Commons this afternoon, when the Premier himself took the floor to explain the agreement creating the organization. He emphasized that the inter-allied war council had "no executive power." "The final decision as to strategy and as to the movement of troops will rest with the governments," he declared. "The allies' object in the plan was to have a representative central body which should watch the whole operations of the war and co-ordinate plans, and if necessary propose new ones."

Lloyd George suggested that the House of Commons devote next Monday to a detailed debate on the whole war council plan. He then read in full the agreement between the three governments of England, France and Italy creating the war council.

DOG HAD THE RABIES

Child Bitten By a Collie Last Week —Officer to Take Charge of Situation

That the rabies danger is by no means over, is shown by a telegram received by Dr. G. Fortune, V.S., today from the Acting Veterinary General at Ottawa, informing him that the head of a dog sent to Ottawa, contained positive evidence of rabies. The dog had bitten a child named Cameron residing on the Chemong Road, and Dr. Fortune had the canine killed and shipped the head to Ottawa with the result outlined above. He has ordered all the dogs which have come in contact with the diseased animal to be locked up and is strongly of the opinion that every one of these dogs should be killed. "Tying them up is not a solution of the problem," remarked Dr. Fortune to-day. There will be an officer from Toronto here this evening to take charge of the situation.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 14. — Charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Dr. D. G. McRobbie, a well-known Hamilton physician, on August 19th, Harry Smith, J. J. McAuliffe, Walter Scott and Herbert Asseltine, all well-known citizens, were placed on trial at the Assizes here to-day. All pleaded not guilty. The principal witness this morning was William Bell, an employee of the Crescent Oil Co., on whose premises McRobbie was found in a dying condition. He repeated the evidence given at the inquest and preliminary proceedings. In the court room to-day the police had prepared a replica of the room which McRobbie met death. The case is causing great interest.

The accompanying map shows the dangerous nature of the enemy's new drive. It is vital that Cadorna shall gain time by making at least a brief stand along the Piave. All Italy would be depressed by the loss of Venice.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

THE MACHINE GUNNER

By Patrick MacGill

LONDON—(Special Correspondence).—He said that his name was Brown and nobody believed him. But his mates never said to his face that he was not telling the truth. In fact the men of the machine gun team were afraid of him. He was a queer customer. In appearance he was an old man, bald and wrinkled, one of those who could go up to a recruiting office and say, "My age is not 41. Having no certificate of my birth, you must take my word for it. I may look old, but one's years can never be judged by wrinkles. Some people never grow old and I am one of them." But as Brown was a very modest man he of course never spoke like that.

He was born in London; the only time he ever left there was when he came to France. So he said, but again none believed this. He knew quite a smattering of languages; he spoke German and French, also Spanish. The latter he spoke as it is spoken in South America. So Brown's officer said; and this officer had travelled about in most places of the world. On one occasion the battalion to which the man was attached relieved a Canadian regiment and some of the English soldiers entered into conversation with the men who were going out. Brown was heard speaking to one of them and asking questions about a lumber camp situated somewhere near the foot of the Rockies.

"You know that place then?" an officer said to Brown afterward. "Yes, sir," Brown replied. "I read about it in the papers."

He rolled cigarettes with a cunning hand and he chewed tobacco as if to the manner born. He was a splendid soldier, highly intelligent, and in a tiff corner one of the best mates a man could have. In fact, he was greatly respected, although he made few comrades. He feared neither God nor man and was never so happy as when under fire. In the midst of the most violent cannonade he was calm and unperturbed.

Nothing was too arduous for him; there was nothing that he would not attempt. The unknown and hazardous always fascinated him, and when fighting his face always gave his mates the impression that he had become a soldier merely for the fixed purpose of killing. He was in the machine gun team and loved his weapon, probably because the machine gun is one of the most effective death dealing instruments of war.

A few days ago, in the ebb and flow of the fighting around Guemappe, his party found themselves in an isolated post and all but surrounded by the enemy. One man fell and then another, and finally nobody was left save Brown and his officer.

"We've got to stick to it," said the officer. "It's damned stiff, but all the same . . ."

Brown shrugged his shoulders and let the machine gun rip. He had no cover and seemed to be quite indifferent to danger. He was in his proper element and found the situation quite to his liking. Suddenly the officer gave a strangled cry and dropped to earth.

"Clear out of it, Brown," he gasped. "Its no good!"

Brown fixed a fresh cartridge belt to his weapon and turned his gun right on the Germans who were attempting an encircling movement. One of Brown's mates was lying on the ground, wounded and conscious.

"The officer told you to retire," he said, looking up at the old man. "Did you not hear that?"

"I didn't hear it," Brown replied, his voice rising above the clatter of the gun.

When the Scotch charged across the machine gun emplacement ten minutes later they found Brown still at his work, a wound in this right shoulder and his left foot badly shattered. When the stretcher bearers came up they carried him back to the dressing station. There he spoke to his officer, who had also been carried in.

"You were still at your post when the Scotch came along, I hear," said the officer with a smile. "But what about the order I gave you to retire?"

"I didn't hear it, sir," said Brown. "There are times when I get very deaf. It's a failing of mine."

"What's the reason for this failing?" asked the officer.

"Buenos Aires, South America," said Brown. His voice came in short gasps and he was in great pain. "At the docks. . . The German sailors go about in gnags. . . If you fall foul with them it's . . . Knife you in the dark. Once they. . . me."

When the M. O. came round he found Brown unconscious. On the man's back there were a number of old scars which looked as if they had been made by a sharp instrument.

"By a knife probably," said the M. O.

Berlin Claims The Capture Of Two Towns

Canadian Press Despatch:

BERLIN, (Via London), Nov. 14.—The capture by Austro German forces of towns of Primolano, in Sugana Valley, and Feltre, west of the upper Piave river, is claimed to-day by Army Headquarters. Only artillery fighting is reported along the Piave river.

Religious Canvass Of City Considered By Ministerial Assoc

At the meeting of the Ministerial Association on Monday a committee was formed to discuss a proposal to take a religious canvass of Peterborough. It is practically necessary to secure the assistance of an officer of the Sunday School Association of Ontario to facilitate and organize the work if it is undertaken in this city. A meeting of the local committee was held this afternoon to discuss the matter, the operation of which was elucidated by Mr. Durham at the recent Sunday School Convention. Mr. Meserve on Monday suggested that a forward movement for men be undertaken, but action was deferred until a decision was reached on the religious canvass proposal.

Adjutant McElhiney addressed the Association on the subject of "The Relation of the Salvation Army to the Other Churches."

Youngster Had A Narrow Escape

Little Son of Cornelius Orford, Prisoner in Germany, Knocked Over by Train

Georgie Orford, the little three-year-old son of Mrs. Cornelius Orford, 634 Union Street, had an extremely narrow escape from death to-day.

The child was evidently standing too close to the 12.40 Lakefield train at Edinburgh Street at noon and was knocked over. When the mother was called to the train by a small boy, who told her her son had been run over, she found him lying under a couch between the rails.

Dr. Harvey was called, and although the exact extent of his injuries could not be ascertained, he has sustained painful bruises about his head and stomach.

The child's father, Pte. Cornelius Orford, is at present a prisoner of war in Germany.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

William John Richardson, an A2 man, claimed to be the sole support of a widowed mother, also a sister. In addition he had financial obligations which the applicant asserted put him in the same class as a married man.

"I'm about as bad as a married man," said the applicant.

"About as good you mean," corrected Judge Huycke.

The applicant was exempted for six months.

"It looks now as though you will have to go before you are six months older," said Judge Huycke.

Condition Exemption.

Fred Hooper, a "C" man, was granted conditional exemption until his class is called.

Garfield Anderson, a "B" man, was also exempted until his class is called.

Exemption Disallowed.

John W. Lynch, an A2 man, who resides on Wescott street, said that his physical condition would not enable him to be any place where it was cold or damp. The fact that Lynch was working with the Metal Products Company and that he was contemplating going to Montreal with the firm, did not strengthen his claim to exemption on the grounds that he was the main support of his aged father and mother. It developed that the father in question is an employee of the Allin Ice Company and a sister is a stenographer, while a second sister is training for a nurse.

"Who do you think is going to fight this war if you don't go?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"If I had a brother who could look after things at home I would not hesitate to go," replied the applicant.

"Part of your pay could be diverted to the home," said Mr. Dumble. The exemption was disallowed.

An "E" Man.

Hyman Klien, who appeared before the Board earlier in the day claiming exemption on the grounds of domestic position, turned up the second time, armed with a medical sheet placing the applicant in E class. Klien was exempted until his class was called.

Was Disallowed.

The exemption of James Ford Rogers was disallowed. Financial obligations and domestic position was the grounds on which Rogers based his claim. The Board was strongly of the opinion that the applicant's twenty year old brother should assume the domestic responsibilities of his brother.

"Do you think it fair that other boys should be expected to defend your parents?" inquired Judge Huycke.

The claim was disallowed.

Arthur Stanfield, an "E" man, was exempted until his class is called.

Conditional Exemption.

Mr. F. Adams, City Treasurer, appeared before the Board on behalf of his son. A son of Mr. Adams died in the service of spinal meningitis, and a second son is now in the army. Mr. Adams claimed total exemption for a third son, who is taking a dental course in Toronto. Exemption was granted for one year

Exemption Refused.

Robert G. Langford, an employee of the Peterborough Hardware Company, who appeared before the Board yesterday with a claim for exemption on the grounds of ill health, despite the fact that he had an "A"1 medical sheet, was sent up for further examination. Langford came back this morning with the Medical Board's finding unchanged and the tribunal disallowed the exemption claim. The Board will recommend that the applicant be taken into the transport service or be given a clerical position, which the Board considered would be more suited to his health. Langford has a brother at the front.

Shell Inspector.

Walter Shorey Weese, 477 McDonnel street, a shell inspector of Campbellford, put up a strong argument for exemption. The applicant said that his work was of national importance and that his assistance was required at home.

"I have no more sympathy with a man in a shell factory than in any other line of employment," said Judge Huycke.

The applicant put up the claim that he had two and a half years' experience as a shell inspector.

Lieut.-Col. Clegg thought that one of the two brothers should represent the family at the front.

Weese said he had no claim on his brother, who is single and resides in the west.

The exemption claim was disallowed.

The applicant announced his intention of appealing the case.

Exemption Granted.

Edward Fitzgerald, another "A"2 man, claimed to be the sole support of a widowed mother, and an employee of the Canadian Northern Railway Co. A representative of the company was present to claim exemption for Fitzgerald, claiming that the applicants services were essential to the company. Fitzgerald is the only surveyor left on the eastern end of the road and is needed for some very important work.

One Must Go.

Allan Templeton Brown, an "A"2 man, is one of two boys on a 100-acre farm, claimed that his services were essential on the farm. The other brother claimed exemption on similar grounds. The Court advised Brown to appear with his brother to-morrow, and the Board will decide which of the two boys will have to go.

Further Examination.

William J. Clancy, an "A"2 man, claimed exemption on the grounds of ill health.

"You don't expect two old fellows like us to disregard three doctors?" said Judge Huycke.

"They didn't ask me any questions, and I didn't tell them anything," replied Clancy.

"Why didn't you tell them about your case?"

"I never expected they would have any use for me," said Clancy.

Clancy was sent back for further examination with instructions to tell the doctors about his case.

Arthur Stansfield, an "E" man, was granted exemption until his class is called.

TRIBUNAL No. 276

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS

W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members
Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

Frank B. Jackson, 135 Aylmer Street, was given until 1st February, 1918, to arrange his business affairs.

Sole Support of Mother.

Albert L. Lightheart, 221 Rink Street, another A2 man, said he was the sole support of his mother and nephew. His brother went overseas, but is now at Kingston. Decision reserved.

Born in Germany.

Fred Saltzman, 219 Reid Street, was born in Germany. His father is a native of Mulhausen, in the province of Lorraine, before the Germans took it in 1870.

Mr. Moore: Have you been questioned about your nationality since coming to Peterborough?

Mr. Saltzman: No.

The applicant has not been naturalised as a Canadian, and was born in the French province, although during the German occupation. He is a toolmaker, employed at the C.G.E. plant. Although an A2 man, the fact that he is not a naturalised citizen of Canada deprives this country of his service.

Joseph Francis Lynch, 445 Park Street, took over his father's grocery store, but Mr. Moore suggested that he had picked a poor business for a young man. He was allowed until 1st February to dispose of his business and report for service.

Stout Plea for Thresher.

Sidney Todd, R. R. No. 5, North Monaghan, a thresher, laid emphasis upon the importance of the occupation he follows. From 12th August he has been working overtime among the farmers, and expects that Christmas will find him as busy as ever. He presented a letter from George F. Clarke, of Cavan, and Mr. George Moncrief was present to urge that Todd's exemption be granted.

"He's one of our best threshers," Mr. Moncrief said. "We've seen in the papers that the country needs more production, and Mr. Todd is doing more than his share. He bought a threshing machine worth about $4,000, and is a great help to our neighbourhood."

Mr. Moncrief also stated that Mr. Todd was subject to rheumatism. "I've heard his knees creak four yards away some mornings, he was so stiff when he got up."

Mr. Aylmer: The country needs 100,000 men in the worst way. Don't you think the unmarried men should go first? Couldn't you take his threshing machine next year

Mr. Moncrief: I could not. A man has to have papers for running an engine.

Mr. Todd interposed the statement that he knew one thresher who had burned five barns, another had burned one.

Mr. Moncrief: In our community, I don't know of a man who could turn the wheel of that engine. I believe you're reasonable men, but if you take this man you won't have any difficulty getting men—you'll take the whole state.

Mr. Aylmer: We've got to get 100,000 men. If a man reaches 34 years and is unmarried, he is only half doing his duty. We want to avoid sending fathers with little children in their homes.

Todd has lived with Mr. Moncrief for years. Decision reserved.

Put in Second Class.

James Frederick Knapp has a brother overseas and is the sole support of his mother at home. He was transferred to the second class with the married men.

Is a Shell Inspector.

John Joseph Ryan claimed exemption on the ground that he is a shell inspector with the Imperial Munitions Board, working at the Henry Hope factory. Decision reserved.

West Ends Win From Frontenacs

Last night the West-Ends won three straights from the Frontenacs in a five-pin League match at the Water Street Alleys. The total pinnage was: West-Ends, 2,114; Frontenacs, 1,984. Routley for the West-Ends was high man with 485 for a three-game total; while Ross topped the Frontenacs with a 508 total. The scores were:

Wes-Ends.

CHURCH GIVES HOOVER AID.

East Orange Congregation Reports 2,547 Meatless Days.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—In compliance with the request of Food Administrator Hoover that the churches of the country ask their members for reports on the number of wheatless and meatless days they have observed, the members of the First Presbyterian Church of East Orange, N. J., yesterday made their report. In the 1,100 members of the church are represented 391 families.

Of these, 191 made reports which showed that they had had 1,502 wheatless meals and 2,547 meatless meals. This means that in the church the co-operation with Mr. Hoover was equivalent to 4,506 persons doing without wheat for meal, and 7,641 persons doing without meat for a meal.

Arthur Pollen, the British naval expert, who is an attendant at the church, estimated that if the people of the whole country would do as well as the members of the First Presbyterian Church of East Orange in the matter of wheatless days, it would mean a saving of 130,000,000 bushels of wheat.

"There is honour among thieves," quoted the parlour philosopher. "Nonsense!" retorted the mere man. "Thieves are just as bad as other people."

John C. Hendricks, manager of the Indianapolis Club, who is to become the manager of the St. Louis club of the National League.

To the Electors of West Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,
Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM,

FISH DELAYED.

The Wednesday consignment of fish to Messrs. Douros & Gettas, fruiterers and fishmongers, failed to arrive this morning, and proved not only a disappointment but a serious loss to the firm, who handle large quantities daily. Their customers, of course, were put to considerable delay and inconvenience.

The fish controller is making a poor reputation for himself, so far as Peterborough is concerned. If the Government wants us to eat more fish, they should be more prompt with their shipments.

INFORMATION WANTED OF MISSING MAN

Information leading to the discovery of the whereabouts of James Crouter, who has been missing from his home since Wednesday, 7th November, will be gladly received by the Police Station.

When last seen, he wore a grey striped coat, dark blue trousers with small white stripe, and black boots. He is a man of 45, height 5 feet 5 inches, dark hair turning grey, clean shaven, fresh complexion, short-sighted and wears heavy glasses, and had a peculiar shuffling gait when walking.

WEDDING BELLS

MOHER—BALLARD.

At 6 o'clock this morning in St. Peter's Cathedral, Rev. Father Phelan officiating, the wedding was solemnized of Almacy Ballard and William J. Moher. They were attended by Miss Teresa Rainey and Mr. R. J. Moher, Detroit.

The bride wore her travelling suit of navy blue with hat to match and the bridesmaid was likewise attired in navy blue.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mrs. Rainey, Bethune street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Moher left to spend a short honeymoon in Toronto and Hamilton. They will reside in Toronto.

OBITUARY

FRANCIS JAMES GOSELIN.

An old and highly respected resident of Peterborough passed away this morning at his home, 45 Crescent street, at the age of fifty-one years. The deceased had been ill for many months. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goselin, 139 George street, three brothers, Isadore, Thomas and Joseph, residing in Peterborough, and four sisters, Mrs. Heath, Mrs. Rishea, of Peterborough; Mrs. Corby, of Toronto, and Mrs. Kidd, of McLean, Sask. Four daughters, Annie, Amelda, Agnes and Marie, and four sons, James, Peter, Isadore and Joseph, are also left to mourn the loss of their father.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

The Funeral Of Mr. John Breckenridge

The funeral of the late John Breckenridge, J.P., Westwood, took place on Monday, and was very largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. MacEacheren, Keene, and Rev. Mr. Thompson, Hastings, who was a life-long friend of the deceased. The pall-bearers were the six sons of Squire Breckenridge. A large number of friends from the city motored to Westwood for the funeral. These included Messrs. John Reid, Ed. Elliott, David Conroy, E. Conroy, F. D. Kerr, Robert Fair, C. N. Pennyfather. Dr. McNaughton, a life-long friend of Squire Brekenridge's family, also attended. The remains were laid to rest in the Presbyterian Cemetery at Westwood.

Neglected To Report Ordered To Chief

The City Hall Exemption Tribunal handled the first case of a man who had neither reported for service nor claimed exemption, during this afternoon's session. Boyd Wilkinson had his left arm taken off four years ago. He pleaded ignorance of the regulations, and stated that as soon as he learned last night that he had to report he hastened to the Tribunal. Mr. Aylmer and Mr. Moore discussed he case for a few minues, and finally decided that the young man should report to Chief Thompson.

Germany's Aspirations Of Empire Domination Must Be Crushed At Once

This is Opinion Held by President of Well Known United States College Who Has Just Returned From a Lengthy Sojourn in Europe—America Must Hurry to the Aid of the Allies, He Declares.

President Powell, of Hobent College, who has just returned to the United States, after a lengthy sojourn in Europe, declares that America must hurry to the aid of the Allies owing to the fact that unless she is crushed at once, she will, even though ultimately forced to give up her spoils, dominate a great Empire from Hamburg to Constantinople.

Dr. Powell says in part:

All this and more Germany understands. These months past I have talked with officials and private citizens, educators, and soldiers, Red Cross men and Red Cross nurses, Y. M. C. A. workers, and those highly sensitized personalities to be found at such a crisis at the centre of affairs at London, Paris, Belgium, Rome, Constantinople, Bagdad, Smyrna, and Maka; all tell the same story. They all agree, as was pointed out to my amazement awhile before I went abroad by one, who had just returned from six months' stay in Germany, that Germany, though beaten, will have powers of recuperation which on this side of the water we must take into account.

Again Germany is playing the game with the cards of the Allies on her table and her own cards mostly underneath. Her system of espionage is perfect. She knows everything she wants to know. Scarcely a conversation—one is inclined to think after a few weeks in Paris—takes place anywhere that Germany does not know, provided she desires. The pages of the most romantic novelist pale before the fecund imagining and fertile contriving of Teutonic forethought.

In public places and on shipboard one is warned against talking, lest information be given to the enemy. I recall one afternoon in a French city speaking frankly to a Frenchman of our preparations to lend aid, when I became aware that a brilliant woman who was present showed more than the conventional interest in my words. She wanted figures and she wanted facts. Without violating the conventions of hospitality I swiftly shifted the current of conversation to glittering generalities. That night at a dinner party when I spoke of my experience, with the thought of getting a reaction from the loyal Frenchman present, I was at once informed that the woman was believed to be a German spy, but such was her social standing and so guarded were her words that nothing tangible could be brought against her.

We are going to win this war. Germany knows it. She is getting ready for it. She is preparing to reap quickly the results of peace while the Allies are busy distributing their fighting men among their many homes. The German revolution will come at the psychological moment. That military front has not been broken. The Germans have simply been beaten back. German territory has not been occupied. Nobody knows—probably not even the Kaiser—the exact economic strain to which the German people are now subject, but anybody who is in the fighting zone may find out for himself that the economic strain has not reached the breaking point, and will not reach it till the western front is flooded with reinforcements from our shore.

We must make sure the northern fleet and western line suffer no harm. Germany will try every plan to cripple both. She will use every agency to achieve her end. Every airplane and hydroplane improvement she will make to reach across the sea, as well as nearer home. She will if she can—which is impossible, stir up sedition, make the weak-hearted lately brought to patriotic solidarity repent them of their courage, induce the condition of mind among many which in 1864 brought the formation of a peace that came near Lincoln's undoing, and rehabilitate that highly treasonable, intangible pacific and pro-German sentiment that would divide the country, make even the well meaning cry for peace at any price, and give Germany the chance she now desires to end the war to her own satisfaction and to the salvation of the Hohenzollern face.

I am betraying no confidence. I stand as one of a hundred million people loyal to the government. I am proud of the preparations we are making to settle this war on a sound and enduring foundation. I ask nobody to take my word because it is my word, but I venture to assert that no man who has been at the front under such auspices as were mine will question the essential validity of my position, or doubt that every American should help in every way he can to end with all dispatch this war. Buy Liberty-bonds. Help the Red Cross. Stand by the Y.M.C.A. Brand every slacker with the sign of slackerism. Create in your community such a sentiment as will enable the Government to get men properly prepared and adequate provisions over to the front as soon as possible. America holds the future in her hands.

Said to me in Europe, the author of one of the best books on the Renaissance: "This crime, and not the time of which I wrote, is the greatest of all times in history. Every man's influence for the right in these days is multiplied a thousand-fold. The supreme right for every American to-day is to assist the Government in the creation of that public opinion which will enable us to anticipate the malevolence of German inventiveness and German design upon the great white fleet and the western front."

We have entered this war—as a distinguished Frenchman said to me—with an unquestionable motive, and after such an exhibition of patience as leaves the enemy no possible excuse for facing us. We mean to help our kin across the seas, but let us not deceive ourselves. There is another reason why we must win out, and that as soon as possible. We have no Hymn of Hate to sing against the Germans. Without malice, and yet with utter ruthlessness, we mean to save ourselves, as well as all the world, from German domination. We know that if we do not reinforce our allies soon across the seas and if that western line is broken that great white fleet is smashed, New York and Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and all the little towns and villages between may have to drink deep of that cup which Belgium has been forced to drain, and of which France has had too deep a draught. We fight to save democracy for the whole world. But we fight at last to save ourselves, our mothers, wives and children from the fate I saw with my own eyes had overtaken village after village in the devastated region of La Belle, France, and in memory of which Belgium that grand old man, citizen of the world, hero of the ages, Cardinal Mercier, walk the floor of his study—its ceiling broken through by a German bomb—and mourns like Rachel weeping for her children, and will not be comforted till right is set again upon the throne and the madness of the Hohenzollerns is eradicated from the human mind.

SIDELIGHTS ON LIFE OF PRINCE EITEL FRIEDRICH

Andre Chevalier, special correspondent of the Intransigeant at the French front, gives a few side lights on the life of Prince Eitel Friedrich.

During his sojourn at Avricourt in the Oise, the Kaiser's son resided at the chateau of Comte Baloy d'Avricourt. In the moments when he was not hiding his ponderous form in a shellproof dugout communicating with the grounds of the chateau by a subterreanean passage this "fat, red-faced man with a huge paunch consumed quantities of cabbage."

"He lived a quiet life," adds Mr. Chevalier, "and was troubled once only by a visit from his blusterer father.

"In his solitary walks across the country the Prince's only companions were melancholy and a dog.

"Sometimes he would take a spade and stolidly turn the ground over, as in the hope of finding buried treasures to add to the wagonload of furniture he already had sent far from the dangers of bombardment.

"It was an atavism, no doubt or mayhap a precautionary measure for some months after, when the princely furniture mover left the chateau, it blew up, as if by mere chance, with what was allowed to remain there.

"This was the Prince's grateful method of paying his bill. Mr. Dubois, the proprietor of a chateau in the neighbourhood of Compiegne, which was methodically pillaged by the Kaiser's son, has laid a formal charge of theft with the French authorities against Prince Eitel."

FARMERS GIVE REASON WHY CHEESE SHOULD BRING A HIGHER PRICE.

DANVILLE, Nov. 13.—Danville cheese board met on Saturday for the last time this season, and 1,078 boxes were offered, which weighed 87,911 lbs. All sold at 21 cents. The board passed the following resolution:

"That Danville Butter and Cheese Association are taking steps to bring before the authorities at Ottawa the advisability of increasing the price of cheese in order that the farmers may be in a position to purchase feed with a view of increasing production. With feed at present prices and the price of cheese being less than what was paid a year ago at this time, the farmers contend they are losing money, and that the production will decrease unless some action is taken along these lines.

Another reason why the price of cheese should be increased is that owing to the scarcity of labour and difficulty in getting help the farmers will be inclined to resort to the raising of sheep and young cattle, which will pay equally as well as cheese at present prices, and would not require so much help."

The newspaper also declared it was rumoured in Russia that General Kaledine Hetman, of the Don Cossacks, has issued a proclamation naming himself as dictator of Russia. He was reported at Karkoff.

ESSAY WRITING CONTEST IN THE LOCAL SCHOOLS

An educational feature that interests two departments of the schools, is the essay writing contest now being put on by the J. M. Greene Music Co., for the pupils of the Junior and Senior fourth forms of the city and district schools. They offer twenty dollars in cash prizes, half of it for each form, divided into four prizes of $4.00, $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00. The subject of the essay is to be the life and favourite invention of Thos. A. Edison. The subject will be a test of the amount of newspaper reading the young people do, and the amount, of their reading that is retained, but the information available for the pupils is not confined to what they have gathered in this way, as the Greene Co. will supply short treatises on Edison's life and other literature that will be of assistance in preparing the papers. It is hoped parents will encourage their children to take part in the contest, as the teachers are also glad to have an incentive provided that will encourage their scholars in an educational feature of such real value as this promises to be.

Full particulars of the contest are given in the display advertisement of the Green Music Co. on another page.

Twisted Trail Of "Sergt. McDonald" In Eastern States

Sounds Like Sequel to Similar Search For Deserters Recently in Kingston District

PASSED CHEQUES TOO

The following story from New York so closely parallels the reported escapade of a bogus military policeman in Eastern Ontario a few weeks go that the chief actor in both adventures is probably one and the same person:

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—A man describing himself as Sergeant McDonald, of the Canadian Military Police, and accompanied by a private of the Canadian Army and a sergeant of the American Army, left a prisoner in a cell at Paterson Police Headquarters last Tuesday, directing that he be detained for them for deportation to Canada as a deserter. Since then the actions of the two sergeants and the private and the protests of the prisoner have been such that Chief of Police Perry decided to investigate. The result was that last night he listened to as remarkable a story as he ever had heard, one which he is thinking of embodying in a home-made musical comedy.

After a Patterson bank had notified the Chief that a Sergeant McDonald, accompanied by a Sergeant McCurley of the American Army, had tried to have a cheque cashed there, Chief Perry sent around to the United States Hotel and found there Private Matthew J. Wall, of the Canadian Army, who unfolded the story in an entirely innocent manner.

"Last Friday morning I was doing duty outside the Guy Street Barracks in Montreal," said Wall, "when a big automobile drove up. It was driven by a chauffeur and in the rear seat was a man wearing the uniform of a sergeant of the Military Police.

"'Jump in here, my man,' he says to me, 'and we'll get that deserter in the automobile ahead of us.'

"I never saw him before, but he, being a sergeant and me only a private, I had to obey my superior officer; so I jumped in with my rifle and we pursued that other car all day, out across the river and across the American border. We lost track of it in the dark and I said I ought to go back and report, but he said no, that he was my superior officer; so I obeyed orders and stuck with him. He had a box of cigars and other things, and said we'd probably overtake the deserter by daylight.

"We went through many towns that night and the next day, and on Saturday afternoon we reached the town of Enfield, Mass. We drove about town, and that night he left me at the hotel and he went out alone, saying he was going to get a deserter. He came back late that night with a man named Curtain, who, he said, was a deserter. Curtain insisted he was not, that he was an American citizen, but he was pretty well frightened and didn't make much of a fuss.

"The next day we had a quarrel with the hotel man about his bill, and Sergeant McDonald—he said that was his name—gave the hotel man a cheque and we left with our prisoner, the Chief of Police there riding to th edge of the town with us.

"The next day we reached Plattsburg, N.Y., and Sergeant McDonald called on the United States Army officers there, and told them who we were. He said he wanted to borrow a good live army man to aid him in getting a lot of deserters near there. The officers had us to dinner and treated us fine. They assigned Sergeant McCurley to accompany us, and on Monday night we started South.

"But, at Plattsburg we got another automobile with a driver, telling the other driver to return to Montreal and collect his bill from the Military Police.

"Well, we kept on coming south until Tuesday morning, when we reached New York City. Sergeant McDonald was for stopping at the Waldorf, but Sergeant McCurley said he knew a lot of deserters and spies river, and suggested that we come over here, Sergeant McDonald said around Paterson, and so we came the machine in the garage. Now, I've here.

Couldn't Find Spies.

"Sergeant McCurley went to his home and Sergeant McDonald and I, after locking up our prisoner here, went to the United States Hotel. The chauffeur went with us and put he machine in the garage. Now, I've been hunting spies ever since, but couldn't get any. Several days ago Sergeant McDonald says that our uniforms and my rifle are giving us away; that deserters recognise us and get away. So we changed to civilian dress, the sergeant getting the clothes somewhere. That also enabled us to get all we wanted to drink.

"Sergeant McDonald and Sergeant McCurley told me this morning to stay at the hotel, that they were going up in the mountains to get some spies and would be back."

That was about all Private Wall knew of the matter, except it was useless for him to repeat how on Thursday he had marched Sergeant McDonald to police headquarters at Paterson with the "Sergeant's" pistol and wanted him locked up for intoxication. Chief Perry moothed out their troubles on that occasion and they left the station with their arms about each other.

Nor did he know that yesterday afternoon Sergeant McDonald had called Chief Perry by telephone saying he and Sergeant McCurley were in Tuxedo, had caught two spies, and soon would be back. Chief Perry quickly telephoned to Chief Bush at Tuxedo to arrest McDonald and was informed that McDonald and an American sergeant, after sending a telegram to the Military Police at Montreal to me them with a carload of spies at the border, had abandoned an automobile they had brought from Paterson and had taken another to Sloatsburg. Chief Bush last night was in "hot pursuit," he reported. From Sloatsburg he telephoned that the two men had borrowed the hotel owner's automobile and had driven northward at high speed.

Chief Perry asked the Montreal police to investigate. The prisoner in Paterson, who says his name is William Curtain, a machinist, asserts he was working in a Holyoke machine shop when McDonald arrested him as a Canadian deserter, despite the fact that he never had been out of Holyoke and Enfield in his life. He wonders what his wife and children think of his absence and if he is to be shot at sunrise.

COAL MINER'S RECORD PAY.

Earned $347.92 Last Month, and May Do Even Better.

SOMERSET, Penn., Nov. 13.—Lawrence B. Finzel, aged 45, of Hooversville, near here, is believed to have earned the highest wage during the last month of any coal miner in the history of the industry in Pennsylvania. Finzel, it was announced here to-day, received $347.92 last month. With a 100 per cent. car supply, it is said, he could have earned even more.

If Finzel could maintain this monthly wage for an entire year his annual pay would amount to $4,175.04, and with the increase allowed in the Central Pennsylvania field, effective 1st November, it is believed he would earn at least $5,000.

Submarine Losses Much Lower This Week—Canadians Still Hold Paschendaele Ridge

RUSSIAN SITUATION

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Only one British merchant vessel over sixteen hundred tons was sunk by submarines last week. This is the lowest since the beginning of Germany's submarine campaign.

AGAIN IN CONTROL.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Finnish Telegraph Bureau asserts that Kerensky is again in control of Petrograd.

FORTRESS CAPTURED.

BERLIN, Nov. 15. —A despatch says Korniloff has captured the Kremlin fortress at Moscow, and the same despatch says Siberia has declared its independence and proclaimed the former Emperor Nicholas as Emperor.

LOAN A SUCCESS.

TORONTO, Nov. 15—Reports from all over the Dominion indicate that the Victory Loan is a big success.

ATTACK FAILED.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 15.—The German attack at Passchendaele Ridge, yesterday, which was intended to sweep the Canadians off the ridge, was a complete failure.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 15.—During several battle around Passchendaele the Canadians have captured 1,114 prisoners. The Canadian troops moved steadily to its objectives, taking each one on scheduled time.

SITUATION CRITICAL.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Major General Maurice, Chief Director of military operations at the War Office, says it will be several days before the Anglo-French force could operate on the Italian front. The Italian situation will be critical for several days. If the Italians fail to hold the Paive line it is almost certain that Venice will fall.

BRITISH VICTORY.

LONDON, Nov. 15—A full report of the battle with the Turks is not available, but it is known that the British took eleven hundred prisoners, two guns and fourteen machine guns. The War Office announces that the British forces in Palestine attacked the new Turkish positions, and drove the enemy back seven miles.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Some short time ago there was a piece in the Examiner, signed "Victor," about so little being said about the Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit in our day. It has led me to look afresh to the Word on this question. To me the most vital of all questions is, if we are Christians at all it is the Holy Spirit's presence in us that makes us Christians. Every man's heart is a battlefield. If self has possession, Jesus is lovingly striving to get possession. If possession has been yielded to Jesus there is a constant besieging by the forces of self. Now while this battle is going on we are left free to choose. This is made plain in Matt. 16, 24, and it is shown in real life when St. Paul presented the truth before Agrippa. The truth came out, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. Acts 26, 28. Or while the truth has been presented, we may, like Felix in Acts 24, 25, have been caused to tremble, but we have been left free to accept or reject. The convenient time, so far as we know, never came to Felix. There is a time, we know not when.

A point, we know not where,
That marks the destiny of man
For glory or despair.
There is a line, by us unseen,
Which crosses every path—
The hidden boundary between
God's patience and His wrath.
To cross that limit is to die,
To die as if by stealth;
It does not quench the beaming eye
Or pale the glow of health.
The conscience may be still at ease,
The spirits light and gay;
That which is pleasing still may please,
And care be thrust away.
Oh, where is this mysterious bourne
By which our path is crossed,
Beyond which God Himself has said
That he who goes is lost?
An answer from the sky is sent:
Ye that from God depart,
While it is called to-day, repent
And give Him now your heart.

Romans 8, 13: For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye, through the spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. Now Matthew tells us in chapter 12, verse 34, that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Oh, why is this great lack so prominent in our day? Surely things are serious enough. Jesus died on the cross to make freedom from sin possible. The Holy Spirit dwells within me to make freedom from sin actual. The Holy Spirit does in me what Jesus did for me. The Lord Jesus makes a deposit in the bank on my account. The Spirit checks the money out and puts it into my hands. Jesus does in me now by His spirit what He did for me centuries ago on the cross in His person. There is a measure of the spirit given to every man to profit withal. Read the 8th chapter of Romans. See how often the Spirit is mentioned there. Look particularly at verses 16 and 17, and let us try to understand their meaning. What is it to be a joint heir here in any matter? There is a story told about a dying judge, the day before he passed away, saying to his pastor, do you know enough about law to understand what is meant by joint tenancy? No, was the reply. I know a little about grace, and that satisfies me. Well, said the judge, if you and I were joint tenants on a farm, I could not say to you that is your hill of corn and this is mine, that is your blade of grass and this is mine, but we would share and share alike. But what must it be to be a joint heir with Christ. Read Titus 3, 5 and 6.—Yours, J. H. Taylor.

HUGE SUPPLY OF HIDDEN FOOD IS FOUND IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK., Nov. 12—More than $38,000,000 worth of foodstuffs, found hidden in New York, is under guard of Federal officials to-day.

In their hunt for hoarded foods, Government agents also discovered hidden cotton, jute, oil, chemicals and other valuable commodities — estimated worth $35,449,000.

Twelve million pounds of sugar, for which the city is actually suffering, was found. Other concealed foods were cocoa, beans, butter oil, eggs, butter, condensed milk, flour, fish, rice, poultry, grain, flour, and cotton seed meal. Three quarters of these goods are held as collateral for loans made by banks. It is understood the Deutsches bank of Berlin made heavy loans on some of the hoarded articles.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

The annual election of officers of the L.O.L. No. 326, Havelock, will be held in the lodge rooms on Monday, Nov. 12.

Mr. Wm. Marsh the new proprietor of the old Dineen House, expects to open the building for business on Monday, Nov. 12. Mr. Marsh will run a first-class hotel and lunch counter. The place has been renovated, and decorated, and many conveniences installed throughout the house.

The recent anniversary services in the Methodist Church here, at which Rev. G. W. McCall, of Smith's Falls, officiated, were decidedly interesting. Mr. McCall was one of the first pastors of the Methodist Church in Havelock, and large congregations gathered to hear him once again. The Trustee Board asked for a thankoffering of $350.00, and instead received $443.00, which was indeed very encouraging.

Mrs. Asselstyne of Toronto spent the week end in town the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Covert.

Mr. W. J. Bryans of Toronto spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bryans.

Mrs. A. O. Sawyer spent the week end in Peterborough with her daughter, Mrs. Ronald McKee.

Messrs. Bryans, Covert, Roche and Bryans motored to Peterborough Sunday, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Quinn, George street.

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

VINOL CREATES STRENGTH

Positive—Convincing Proof

It is all very well to make claims, but can they be proven? We publish the formula of Vinol to prove the statements we make about it.

Cod Liver and Beef Peptonates, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascara.

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol as published above, combine the very elements needed to make strength.

All weak, run-down, overworked nervous men and women may prove this at our expense.

There is nothing like Vinol to restore strength and vitality to feeble old people, delicate children and all persons who need more strength.

Try it. If you are not entirely satisfied, we will return your money without question; that proves our fairness and your protection.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

BANNING RICE SHOWERS.

Old Boots and Shoes Good Enough for Newlyweds, Editor Thinks.

After a great amount of hard work, the expenditure of time, some money, and more pains than would ordinarily be devoted to such research, The Cordova (Alaska) Times has announced the statistcal fact that 1,000,000 lbs. of rice are wasted each year in showering brides. It urgently recommends, therefore, that this "reprehensible waste of good rice on newly married couples should cease and determine in these days of food conservation."

And, come right down to it, there is economic sense back of the idea and appropriately enough, the suggestion for the abandonment of an extravagant and altogether senseless custom that is as old almost as history, comes out of the rigorous, extreme Northwest, where rice is rice, and food in any form is a commodity not to be wasted.

The million pounds of rice thrown annually on the heads and shoulders of American newly-weds—utterly wasted, except perhaps for the small portion of it that might be picked up by hungry birds, The Times statistician concludes, contains 1,630,000,000 calories, which all must admit, is quite a sizeable number of perfectly good calories to be let run wild and to no purpose like an unharnessed cataract, and a million pounds of rice at from 8 3-4 to 10 or 11 cents a pound represents too much good money to literally throw away.

The Alaska newspaper is keenly alive to the deplorableness of this wastage, and would correct it by law, prohibiting the use of rice "for showering purposes," in the belief that old shoes and boots would answer the purpose fully as well.—Atlanta Constitution.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A WISE JUDGE

By OSCAR COX

When the war between the states ended and the colored man was endowed with citizenship a grave responsibility was placed upon him for which he wasn't prepared. In one of those regions where the negroes were very numerous and white men very few one of the former found himself in possession of a justice's court.

The makeup of this dispensary of justice was somewhat crude. A judge was found who had done the cleaning of the courthouse, a prosecuting attorney in one who had belonged to a lawyer, but for counsel no one could be obtained except a few darkies who had been tried for various offenses and had by observing lawyers' methods picked up here and there bits of court routine.

Moses Doggett, late the property of Colonel Redfield Doggett, was the judge before whom a negro with no other name, so far as was known, than Pete was brought on a charge of having ill treated his wife, Susan. She as the principal witness was called to the stand.

"Tell the cou't wha' Pete gone done to you," said the judge.

"Pete he de mos' good fo' nuttin nigger in de state of Alabama. Now he got free he t'ink he hain't got nottin' to do but sit out in de sun an' sleep. I says to Pete, 'Git up an' go to wo'k. How yo' spec' dese chil'n gwine to git anyt'ing to eat ef yo' don't earn nottin'?' Pete he say: 'I hain't got no wo'k. Yo' go on wid de washin', an' I tak' it to do owner an' bring back de pay.' I jist pick up a rollin' pin, an' I split it on he skull."

"Yo' honah," said the defendant's counsel, "I thought it was Pete mistreated Susan, not Susan mistreated Pete."

"Yo', Pete," said the judge, "yo' take de stan' an' tell de co't yo' side ob de question."

Pete obeyed the order and stood rolling his eyes about till admonished to speak in his defense of the charge made by his wife.

"Hain't got no wife," he said.

"Hain't got no wife? How dat?"

"Ma wife, Chloe, wha' I married fus' down in Louisiana, air de only wife I got. When I was sold an' separated from her an' de chil'n ma heart was broke. De nex' year I married one ob de nigger women belongin' to ma new marster."

"Yo' didn't get no divo'ce from yo' fus' wife?" asked the defendant's counsel.

"I didn't get no divo'ce. I jest married ag'in. Two years arter dat ma marster lose a cotton crop an' we was all sold out, me an' ma wife bein' sold to different marsters. Den I married anudder wife."

"An' yo' didn't get no divo'ce from de second wife?" asked Pete's counsel.

"No, sah. I didn't get no divo'ce from de second wife. I didn't keer fo' no divo'ce from none ob 'em. Ma heart was true to ma fus' wife, Chloe."

"How many wives have you got?" asked the prosecuting attorney, with a view to condensing this diffuse statement.

"I don't know. I had de bad luck to change marsters mighty often, an' every time I was sold I married a new wife."

"Is Susan de las'?"

"Sue, she de las'."

"Yo' honah," said defendant's counsel, "I ask fo' de discha'ge ob de prisoner on de groun' dat he couldn't mistreat he wife when he hain't married to de wife he mistreated."

"How many husbands have you had, Susan?" asked the judge.

"I got one in Mobile, anudder in New Orleans an' anudder somewha' in Sout' Carolina."

"How do you know they are in those places?"

"I don't. I married 'em dar."

The judge looked up at the boards which constituted the ceiling in mute deliberation. He was a grave looking old darky and in his heart aimed to be just. But the problem was how to be just legally. The two in this case seemed incompatible.

"De persecutin' attorney will sum up an' de counsel fo' de prisoner will sum up, den de cou't will gib her decision."

"I hain't got nuthin' to say," said the prosecutor, "'cept dat Pete won't wo'k, an' his wife an' chil'n am starvin'. De cou't oughter make him wo'k or go to jail."

"An' I ain't got nuthin' to say," said the prisoner's lawyer, "'cept dat in de fus' place Sue an' Pete hain't married. Pete bein' true to Chloe, somewha' in de souf. In de secon' place, it wa'n't Pete dat mistreated Sue, but Sue mistreated Pete when she split de rollin' pin on his head."

The judge again looked at the boards above, rolled his eyes and finally gave his decision.

"De new law of marriage among us niggers since he 'mancipation proclamation am different from de ole law. Under de new law Sue am Pete's wife, an' he boun' to tak' keer ob her an' de chillun. De cou't derefo' decides dat Pete got to go to wo'k or go to jail."

"I 'peal de case," cried Pete's counsel.

"Yo' kin jist go on 'pealin' de case till kingdom come," said the judge. "Pete, yo' go to wo'k. Sue, ef he don' go to wo'k you split anudder rollin' pin on his head."

"I hain't got no mo' rollin' pins, but I got some flatirons."

"De cou't decides dat flatirons am as legitimate as rollin' pins. Call de nex' case."

BARS KREISLER CONCERTS.

Pittsburgh Police Will Not Allow the Violinist to Appear There.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—Charles S. Hubbard, Director of Public Safety, ordered the Police Department to-day to refuse a concert license to Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, who was advertised to appear in Carnegie Music Hall to-morrow evening. The Director stipulated, however, that Kreisler's manager be allowed to cancel the engagement before the order was enforced. It was also announced that another concert at which Kreisler was to appear as accompanist on Saturday had been cancelled by the local management.

Director Hubbard received protests from a number of patriotic organisations and from many individuals against the Kreisler concerts. They took the ground that since Kreisler was an officer in the Austrian army, and Austria was the ally of America's enemy, it would be unpatriotic to permit him to appear at a public entertainment.

Lydia Liliuohalani, the last of a long line of monarchs that once ruled the Hawaiian Islands, who has just died at her home in Honolulu.

General Sir Douglas Haig was, it appears, inspecting a cavalry troop, and was particularly struck with the neat way in which repairs had been made in some of the saddles.

"Very good work," he remarked to the troop Sergeant-Major. "Who did it?"

"Two of my troopers, sir," was the reply.

"You're fortunate to have two such expert saddlers in your troop," said Haig.

"As a matter of fact, sir," was the reply, "they're not saddlers, in civil life being lawyers.

"Well," ejaculated Sir Douglas, "how men who can do work like that could have wasted their lives over law I can't imagine!"—Minneapolis Tribune.

An army officer who served in the Spanish War tells of a New York regiment, many of whose members were recruited on the East Side. They were spoiling for a fight and it became necessary to post guards to preserve order. A big husky Bowery recruit of pugilistic proportions, was put on duty outside and given special orders to see that quiet was preserved, and above all things if trouble came his way not to lose possession of his rifle. Soon a general row began, growing in proportions as the minutes passed. The soldier walked his post nervously, without interrupting until the corporal of the guard appeared on the scene with reinforcements. "Why didn't you stop this row?" demanded the corporal. The sentry, balancing his rifle on his shoulder, raised his arms to the correct boxing position and replied: "Shure, phwat could I do wid dis gun in me hands!"

Mother and Children Had Awful Coughs

WERE CURED BY

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Mrs. Arthur Appleyard, Novar, Ont., writes: "This past winter my children and I had awful colds and coughs which we got by being in drafts. I tried a number of different remedies for us, but got no relief. I thought I would try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I found it a most excellent and sure cure. It gave relief to the tickling in the throat, and stopped the cough, and with a few bottles we were all cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a remedy that has been on the market for over twenty-five years, and we can recommend it as being without doubt, the best cure for coughs and colds that you can possibly procure.

There are a lot of imitations on the market, so when you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get it. Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A TIMELY WARNING

THE CAUSE of most ailments is due to Defective Kidneys. The sooner this is impressed upon the People, the better for the community. The function of the Kidneys is to extract and expel all inert and useless decayed matter from the system. If they are healthy they will do this, if they are not---poisonous gases will be absorbed into the system and undermine your health and lay the foundation of serious ailments such as:

Brights Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy & Rheumatic Ailments

It will sometimes help to drink plenty of pure water, as this will assist in expelling the Uric Acid which is often the cause of Rheumatism. Do this, and take one or two of DR. BANTA'S KIDNEY AND RHEUMATISM PILLS after each meal and you will prove for yourself the truth of this statement.

Canada Must Change that Record

FEWER CANADIANS in proportion to the population have lent their money to the nation than have either the British or American people.

This in spite of the fact that the individual wealth of the Canadian people to-day is greater than it has ever been and is one of the largest of any country in the world.

Canada wants you to help change that record now.

You owe it to Canada, to yourself, to your children, to see that it is changed.

If you never bought a war bond before do it now. Be ready when the canvasser calls.

Remember this—That to win this war every man and woman in Canada must do his or her share, and to-day the most important, vitally necessary thing is to buy Victory Bonds.

Help to Change Canada's Record to 1 in 20 Buyers of Victory Bonds

Mr. Roland Johnston spent a few days last week in Toronto.

A most enjoyable evening was spent on Wednesday last when the congregation of the Baptist church held a reception in the church in honour of their new pastor, Rev. B. Davis and Mrs. Davis.. After a musical programme refreshments were served by the ladies.

A Big Fish.

Mr. Sandy Hill was successful in landing a twenty-seven pound lunge last week when out trolling. This is the largest fish caught in this section for a number of years and was a fine specimen.

The A.Y.P.A. held their annual Christmas shower for the soldiers on Tuesday last and the Society was able to send away thirty-four nice boxes. Besides tobacco, chocolates, candles and other miscellaneous articles, a pair of socks donated by the Soldiers' Comfort Club, and two pairs of socks and a trench cap knitted by the girls of the Society during the summer, were put in each box.

The Rev. C. Spencer is away this week on a deer hunt.

PUBLIC OPINION

PROTECTING THE POCKET.

(Boston News Bureau.)

The difference between lending money at four per cent. and paying it out under a tax levy, does not seem clear to some people. But these are the two horns on the war bull which is trying to smash the china in the shops of civilisation. If the one is not decorated with bond purchases the other will dig out and carry off enough of the earnings of the nation to offset the failure in subscriptions to the Liberty Loan.

Looked at as only a financial alternative the purchase of a Liberty bond is too good an opportunity to neglect. The surety of the bond is unquestionable—the succession of day and night is hardly more certain.

We are in the war to stay until the end; the date of that end will be brought nearer if we go deep into our pockets now.

When the readjustment comes with its varying disturbances, what resource can be more helpful or safer than $1,000, $5,000 or $100,000 in stable than Liberty Loan bonds, paying on the day due the liberal four per cent interest, instantly salable, and acceptable without question as a security to borrow on?

It is the best protection for the pocket that was ever offered to mankind, womankind and children.

Watches.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

The best equipped army that ever took the field, as the British Army has often been styled, is remarkably well equipped in one respect, and that is in the matter of watches. The wrist watch, which at first only with great difficulty established itself as a possibility for men, has long since swept all before it, and with or without a luminous face, is nowdays regarded as almost an essential part of the soldier's outfit. Such a widespread use has, of course, been rendered possible only by the extraordinary progress which has been made in watchmaking in comparatively recent years. Thirty or forty years ago, the watch was still a prized possession, and its possession almost amounted to a class distinction. And yet the world had known of and used watches for many centuries. They were antedated, it is true, by clocks, but the moment that Pope Sylvester, in A. D. 996, constructed "the first clock," as he is credited with having done, watches became inevitable.

MARSE HENRY TO KAISER BILL.

Had Wilhelm lived some centuries ago, and pillaged and murdered Saracens with the cross upon his banner, he might have been mistaken by the mob for a religious man. Nowadays pretence of piety cannot mask the motives of a scoundrel, nor can a crown and the purple of royalty make a Hohenzollern seem other than the self-seeking criminal and ruffian he happens to be.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Best Home Treatment For All Hairy Growths

(The Modern Beauty)

Every woman should have a small package of delatone handy, for its timely use will keep the skin free from beauty-marring hairy growths. To remove hair or fuzz, make a thick paste with some of the powdered delatone and water. Apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be sure you get real delatone.

GREAT BATTLE DEVELOPING WHICH MAY DECIDE THE FATE OF NORTNERN ITALY

German and Austrian Troops Are Testing the Strength of the Piavo River Line at Six Different Points---Menace of a Turning Movement is the Gravest Danger---Calais is Bombed By German Aviators.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Webb Miller.)

(Special to The Toronto Sta. and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, November 15.—Over a total front of fifty miles the great battle which may decide the fate of Northern Italy was developing to-day. German and Austrian troops are testing the strength of the Piave River line at six different points, according to Rome despatches. They are pouring a tremendous and concentrated artillery fire against the Italian defenders. At four places the enemy apparently had obtained a foothold. Austrians from the Trentino region now at Asisgo, are literally slipping forward over the Alps by inches suffering terrible casualties from the stubborn Italian defense. It is this menace of a turning movement on the northern end of the great lines that was regarded here to-day as of the utmost gravity in the Italian situation. Every inch the Austrians drive forward here increases the danger to the rear of the Piave River line. On the right wing of the fifty-mile line the Germans to-day were within fifteen miles of Venice. Fighting was in progress in the Vecchia marshes. At Gallio the Austrians with 6,000 troops were reported trying to slip behind the main body of the defenders. The strength of the Italian resistance in this fateful battle, was evidenced in scores of details reported to-day. Of forty-four armoured cars sent out to harrass the enemy, only twenty-two returned.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 15.—According to press reports from Stockholm travellers who arrived yesterday evening in Haparanda, Sweden, from Finland, say rumours are current there that Petrograd is in flames.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), November 15.—German aviators violently bombarded Calais Thursday causing many casualties among the civilians. French aeroplanes attacked them and brought down four enemy machines, also disabling four others. French raiding parties near Ailette brought back many prisoners from the German trenches.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 15.—Two hostile aeroplanes were brought down and four others driven out of control in the course of air fighting Tuesday between British and German air fleets over Belgian territory.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 15.—The Belgian War Office statement reports increased activity near Dixmude. German aviators dropped bombs on undefended villages in France and Belgium causing many deaths to civilians.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, November 15.—Associated Press cables predict that the storm of criticism levelled at Lloyd George as a result of his Paris speech, and the plans then outlined, will not result in any changes in government. Debate will likely be continued when he makes another statement later, but nobody appears to have anything better to offer than the inter-allied war council plans which the Premier has proposed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 15. — German troops on the mountain front in Northern Italy are advancing to the south from Fonsaso and Feltre, says to-day's official communication. No change is reported along the lower Piave River.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Wednesday, (delayed) — Great enthusiasm and patriotic feeling marked this afternoon's sitting of the Italian Chamber of Deputies. Prof. Vittoria Artando, in his first speech as Premier, struck the keynote of his policy, namely that the situation called for acts rather than for words. The Premier spoke feelingly of the assistance being rendered by the Entente Allies to Italy, and a passage in which he expresesd the cordial gratitude of Italy to the "great American Republic for her willing and powerful aid," roused tremendous cheering.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Nov. 15. — The Italians have defeated the renewed efforts of the Germans to cross the Piave River. Those of the enemy who forced a crossing at two points on previous days, are being held in check, the War Office announced to-day.

LIEUT. GORDON HALL.

Mrs. Gordon Hall, 116 1-2 Hunter street, has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Lieut. Gordon Hall is officially reported wounded on Nov. 10th. Lieut. Hall went overseas as a captain and the officer commanding B company of the 93rd Battalion. After serving for some time in England with a reserve battalion, he reverted to the rank of lieutenant and went to the 21st Battalion in France. Before joining the 93rd Battalion Lieut. Hall commanded C company in the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers. He is the second company commander of the 93rd Battalion to appear on the casualty list.

PTE. FRANK E. TRAYNOR.

Pte. Frank E. Traynor, who went overseas as a sergeant with the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded. Pte. Traynor, whose home is in Toronto, enlisted with the 93rd Peterborough battalion during the Industrial Exhibition here in September, 1915. He was here with one of the midway attractions and decided to don the khaki. He proved a capable soldier and before the battalion left for overseas was wearing his sergeant's stripes.

VICTORY OVER TURKS

Junction Point of the Beersheba-Damascus Railway is Now in Possession of the British as Result of Another Advance

1500 PRISONERS TAKEN

LONDON, Nov. ..—The junction point of the Beersheba Damascus railway, with a line to Jerusalem, is now in possession of the British army, it was officially announced to-day. The railway line to the vicinity of Naansh and Elmansursh, came into British possession as a result of the continued advance of General Allenby's infantry and mounted troops. The Turks lost fifteen hundred men in prisoners on Tuesday, besides four guns and a score of machine guns.

PETROGRAD IN FLAMES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 15.— Petrograd was reported to be in flames in a report wihch reached here to-day. No details of the fire were given. It was assumed here, however, that with the forces of the Bolsheviki and Provisional government still reported clashing in the capital's street, the flames had been started by intent or by shells. At the last word from Petrograd, the Provisional government was reported practically in control of the city.

Huns May Change Zone of Operations

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.—England's satisfaction with the official report showing the low mark reached in Germany's submarine warfare was tempered to-day by the question of whether a contributing cause might not be a plan in Berlin to change the zone of U boat operations. One suggestion was that not only were the allies improving the work of their anti-submarine campaign, but that Germany had recalled her U boats possibly to make a change in the submarine programme.

OFFICIAL ENDORSATION OF CAPT. BURNHAM FAILED TO MAKE ITS APPEARANCE

Mass Meeting of Electors
WEST PETERBOROUGH

Pursuant to instructions of a meeting held under the joint auspices of Liberal and Conservative electors supporting the Union Government, I am directed to call a Mass Meeting of the electors of West Peterborough on Friday, the sixteenth day of November, A.D., 1917, at 8 o'clock p.m., at Victoria Hall (formerly known as Bradburn's Opera House), 332 George Street, Peterborough, for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest the election of a member to represent West Peterborough in the Dominion House of Commons. Sir Robert Borden has pledged himself that the candidate selected at such meeting will be recognized as the Government Candidate. Prominent speakers are expected to address the meeting. No party politics. Veterans and ladies are particularly requested to be present.

3d-113 JOSEPH WEARING.

THE BOLSHEVIKI ADVENTURE IS ALMOST AT END

Russian Salvation Depends Upon a Union of the Minimalists and the Radical Cadet Parties to Form a Cabinet

THE ECONOMIC CRISIS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Bolsheviki adventure in government is all but ended, as London read the meagre Russian news to-day. There was no direct word from Petrograd, but cumulative evidence seemed to point out to the provisional government's gradual return to power in the capital. As Russian observers here saw the situation the nation's salvation now depends on the elements composing the Minimalists, the Radical, the Bourgeoise peasant and Cossack parties, and the co-operative unions. The last named include nearly a third of the total population of Russia. It was believed here that when the provisional forces do regain complete power the Minimalists and the Radical Cadet parties would unite on a cabinet which would adopt a vigorous military and foreign policy. Whatever government emerges, the chief problem for immediate and pressing settlement will be some solution of the present economic crisis.

Means must be adopted to increase the production of food. As Russians here saw it the provisional government must uproot the seeds of anarchy sown by German propagandists and radical fanatics. Then follow up with a re-establishment of war aims. According to indirect word from Petrograd arrangements have been made to convene the constitutional assembly as soon as possible.

On all sides here emphasis was laid on the fact that Russia has nothing to fear from the prominent part the Cossacks are taking in putting down the Bolsheviki revolt. The Cossacks from their earliest history have been communistic in their ideas and intensely democratic.

MOVIES, MUSIC AND ADDRESSES FOR THE VICTORY LOAN TO-NIGHT

Public Invited to Attend Grand Opera House Where the Details of the Loan Will Be Fully Explained

A GOOD PROGRAMME

This is a last reminder of the Victory Loan meeting at the Grand Opera House. If you have bought a bond or one hundred of them, come anyway. It's the spirit that counts, and the first burst of enthusiasm will be all the more effective for every injection of new energy and the spirit of community effort.

If the Huns were calling as an indemnity for ten times $150,000,000, they wouldn't take the pleasant voluntary method of the Government's representatives. It would simply be "Stand and Deliver," as Belgium, Northern France, Poland, Serbia, Roumania, and other desolate sections of Europe have delivered, helplessly, and almost hopelessly, if it were not for just such movements as the Victory Loan.

Splendid Speakers.

To-night's programme is intended to explain all the details of the Loan.

Mayor Duffus will preside, and addresses will be given by Mr. W. L. McKinnon and Capt. Oakes, of Toronto, and by His Honour Judge Huycke.

Mr. Tom Ward will sing, the Grand Orchestra will entertain the audience, and several reels of good films will be shown.

Be there at eight o'clock, and help make to-night's meeting a demonstration for the Loan.

Mr. Hall Delayed In Ottawa; But Returns To-morrow

Mr. R. R. Hall, Liberal candidate, has been detained in Ottawa by pressing legal business.

He will, however, it is expected, return to the city to-morrow to devote his whole attention to the campaign.

Sir George E. Foster Made Eloquent Plea For the Union Government at Last Night's Meeting in the Armouries But Handled the Local Situation Very Gingerly.

DEPUTATION SAW HIM

The posters advertising last night's mass meeting in the Armouries announced that Sir George E. Foster would speak "on behalf of the Borden Union Administration and Capt. Burnham's candidature." Sir George lived up to the first part of the announcement, but failed to come through with the complete endorsation of Capt. Burnham that that gentleman and his supporters had evidently expected when they advertised the meeting.

The fact that a large deputation composed of prominent Liberals and Conservatives anxious to support the Union Government waited upon Sir George Foster at the Empress Hotel prior to the meeting, explained why the public acceptance of Capt. Burnham as the official Union candidate in West Peterborough was not made at the Armouries.

The deputation, which was introduced to the Minister by His Worship Mayor Duffus after the latter had himself been presented to Sir George, included Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, E. L. Goodwill, Robt. Fair, T. E. Bradburn, ex-M.P.P., Lieut.-Col. J. W. Miller, Ald. F. H. Dobbin, W. C. Austin, Jos. Wearing, W. S. Madill, R. B. Rogers, J. A. Aylmer, Reid Munro, B. D. Hall, R. Denne, T. H. Kendry, Wm. Hartley, Hughson Johnstone, and a number of others.

Ald. Dobbin explained the local situation to the Minister, and Messrs. Wearing and Aylmer were other speakers for the deputation. The speakers explained that many prominent Liberals and Conservatives who wished to support the Union Government felt that Capt. Burnham had hardly played the game, and that no opportunity had been given of choosing a candidate who would be acceptable. They pointed out that a Union Convention had been called for Friday night, and requested that the Minister should not endorse Capt. Burnham as the Union candidate at last night's meeting.

Sir George promised the deputation that he would diplomatically deal with the situation, and invited them to hold another conference with him after the meeting.

As will be seen from the outline of his speech, Sir George lived up to his promise and did not go beyond stating that Capt. Burnham was correct in saying that he was so far the only supporter of the Union Government at present in the field.

There was a big audience at the meeting, with a noticeably large representation of the fair sex. Eight representatives of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association occupied seats on the platform.

The meeting was opened by Mr. C. E. Moore, President of the West Peterborough Conservative Association, who introduced Capt. J. H. Burnham, as a supporter of the Union government.

Mr. Burnham on rising to speak,

FOSTER-FATHER SCHEME FAILED.

There was nothing very seismic nor cataclysmal about the Foster meeting in the Armouries last night. Contrary to what was rather flamboyantly announced, the Minister of Trade and Commerce did not speak on "behalf of Mr. Burnham." He adroitly "skated around" the subject of Mr. Burnham's status, neither endorsing nor rejecting him as a Union candidate. It is evident, therefore, that Mr. Burnham remains the partial party candidate of a Government which he himself declares is not a Union Government, and must therefore be a partisan Government.

The Borden Government or the Union Government, as it is at present labelled, is playing safe. It realises that if a certian party candidate is slated as a Union candidate he will be a supporter.

A foster-father to a political orphan, though a half-hearted one, is better, perhaps, than none.

NOT UNION BUT PARTY GOVERNMENT.

Whether frankness or foolishness is the stronger element in Mr. Burnham's assertion at the Veterans' meeting is a question.

If frankness, then Mr. Burnham deserves credit for boldly asserting what a great many have shrewdly suspected, that the present Union Government is "not really a Unionist Government." He said—

"It is not really a Union Government. There has been a lot of nonsense talked about it. The situation is that the Liberals that are in the Union Government do not officially represent Liberalism."

We do not need to depend upon Mr. Burnham's assertion to recognize that the present Union Government is not a bona fide organization in respect of the purposes for which it was ostensibly concocted.

It may be asked, what difference the fact of this not being a real, bona fide Union Government makes.

Much every way. The Union Government was formed either in an honest attempt to unify the people of Canada in the work of war winning, or it was devised as a cover for the sins of the Borden government.

The Borden Government knew and the public knew, that if it appealed to the country upon its record, especially of the past three years, it would be beaten out of its boots; and have to borrow some of the rotten boots it supplied Canadian soldiers in the early stages of the war, through its graft and patronage system.

It was afraid to face the people with the tremendous indictment of inefficiency and partisan favouritism which was hanging over it.

A Union Government was suggested; such a Union Government as the people could regard as genuine, but not a union government to shelter the Borden government—a sheep's clothing to conceal the skeleton of the wolf.

There is ground for more than suspicion that the Union Government is an enterprise masquerading as a Union Government, appealing to the support of all parties and classes of Canadians, but with the basic object of permitting the Borden Government, without being put fairly on trial, and condemned to the penalty of the sins of its regime—with the object of giving the Borden Government another lease of power—to place it in a position to seize power when the Union Government collapses as, constituted as it is like a house of marked cards, it must do before long, if in the real form of its political equivalent, the old Borden government, is endorsed by the too confiding electorate.

It is not true Liberals, it is not true Conservatives, that are responsible for asserting that the Union Government is the Borden government in disguise.

The Union Government not only takes to itself the use of the Borden Government disfranchising franchise act, but it has a parliamentary committee to nominate its own candidates; and this committee is careful to see that "Union" candidates of the "right stripe" are selected, as was done in West York.

The Union Government, in spite of its leader's distinct declaration that no one would be recognized as a Union candidate who was not the nominee of a convention held under joint party auspices, is daily and dishonorably breaking this condition.

In West Peterborough an attempt was made to have Sir George Foster, a representative of the Union Government, stand as sponsor for a party candidate, who declares there is no Union Government—only the Borden Government.

In East Peterborough, Hon. Hugh Guthrie is doing the same godmothering for the straight party candidate.

This sort of thing goes on all over the country. The partizan spirit and the partizan scheming in the interest of the temporarily suspended Borden government, is so plainly in evidence that the Globe has had its rather too confiding credulity as to the non-partizan genuineness of the Union government so much shaken that it says:

Liberal Unionists are reasonable in expecting that Conservatives will not assert their claims to as many seats as they held in the last House. If through local selfishness in one camp or both it is impossible to prevent a division of Union forces in some constituencies, it will be the duty of the government to make a fair division of Union endorsements for the purpose of the soldiers' vote.

How can we expect a government that is not a real union government, but the Borden government warmed over, to make a "fair division of Union endorsements," or give fair, effective, non partizan service in the interest of winning the war.

Can a government of twenty-two members, fourteen Conservatives, and eight Liberals, be considered a union government in the honest, patriotic, and war-winning sense of the term?

The man who in the present mix-up is in doubt what to do with his vote, need not hesitate what to do with his money—buy a Victory Bond.

PATRONAGE HARD TO SHAKE OFF.

A contemporary remarks that "if the Union government will do nothing more than secure the abolition of the patronage system it would justify itself." No doubt the abuse of the patronage system has been responsible for incalculable waste during the progress of the war. It is not denied that under ordinary conditions, the patronage system, as practised by a party in power, is an evil, but its results with more momentous interests involved, simply means waste and corrupt diversion of money from legitimate purposes. But the application of the patronage system in war time, when substantial favours to party parasites, means defective war supplies that not only lessen the fighting efficiency, but imperil the lives of our soldiers, is an aggravated exhibition of the patronage evil, that stands recorded against the government of Sir Robert Borden, for which it must be held responsible, and for which a so-called Union government cannot become a scape-goat. Will the Union government eliminate the patronage evil? At the time Sir Robert Borden was contemplating, or engaged upon, the formation of a Union government, in which the spirit of graft and patronage was theoretically absent, he worked the patronage system and the graft system to the limit. He freely used the power founded on the support of a moribund and outlawed parliament to fill vacancies in the Senate, with a view of strengthening the grip of his party on power, to be utilized when the mask of union slipped off and the Borden government should take as old form—with substantial party advantage in pickle. Before putting on the Union label he filled all the offices worth filling with members of the government and others — judgeships, etc., at salaries that made the patriotic sacrifice of ceding office to promote Unionism, no net financial loss. Nothing more pestilently partisan, no more unfair advantage of opportunity, no more flagrant disregard of honourable conventions, was ever practised than the exercise of offensive and gross patronage in forming a union government from which party was to be eliminated, and high ideals of public service and administration were to be ruling motives. We don't want political platitudes to constitute the merits of the Union government. As long as it is a real Union government, devoted to the public service, with single aim to serving the public interests in this crisis, it may lay claim to the confidence of men of both parties, but it seems difficult all at once to forget the record and spirit of its dominant element.

In the present failure to secure a Union candidate in West Peterborough, the eligibility of Hon. N. W. Rowell, who is not yet placed, might be considered.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The sectional boys' conference under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., the Ontario Sunday School Association and various church denominations, will be held at Port Hope December 6th to 9th. Mr. Harold Copp, of our local Association, will head a delegation from Peterborough and it is hoped that our city will have as large a representation as it had at the boys' conference in Toronto last year. Every organized young men's class in our Sunday schools should elect delegates at once and notify Mr. Copp of their intention to attend this conference. The conference met in Peterborough in 1915 and we are still hearing from boys both in Peterborough and outside who were benefitted by this gathering. The general secretary learned last week from an Ottawa man of the great change that took place in his boy's life as a result of the conference held in Peterborough. This Ottawa gentleman states that this boy was inclined to be rather wayward before he came to our conference in 1915, but is now teaching an organized class in one of the Sunday schools of the capital city and is endeavouring to practice "the Jesus way." It will be a great investment for our churches and homes to have many young men attend the Port Hope conference.

Mothers' Club.

A meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Mothers' Club was held in the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday afternoon and was attended by fifteen ladies who participated in patriotic work on behalf of the soldiers. At the business session of this club the treasurer's report was most gratifying, $41.00 being in the treasury as a result of an entertainment recently given, together with the sale of old papers. $33.00 was voted to the Red Cross for yarn and several ladies indicated a desire to learn to operate the knitting machine presented to the Y.M.C.A. by the late J. W. Bennett, Esq. The ladies were addressed by Rev. Amos. J. Thomas of the George street Methodist church, who impressed upon them the fact that there was a great field of usefulness for women in preaching the Gospel in the homes of foreign residents of our city. Mr. Meserve gave sidelights on the Y.M.C.A. convention recently held at Ottawa.

A Special Programme.

On Wednesday evening, at the invitation of Rev. Mr. Thomas, the general secretary participated in a special programme at the church prayer meeting. Twenty Y.M.C.A. boys who are also members of the George street Sunday school met at the Association building and attended the prayer meeting in a body under the leadership of Charles Armstrong, Harold Copp, Norman Foot and Ralph Meserve. The programme carried out at the meeting was in recognition of the International Week of Prayer now being held under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Among the many interesting features of this Week of Prayer is an excellent address delivered by Mr. C. E. Jamieson of the Collegiate staff before "A" Employed Boys' Group on Monday evening last. Mr. Jamieson gave the boys very excellent advice on the subject of choosing a vocation and impressed upon them the old proverb, 'Know thyself." He stated that a boy must first take an inventory of himself from the standpoints of education and spiritual, moral and physical fitness before entering upon life's work. The boys passed a very hearty resolution of thanks to Mr. Jamieson for his very kind message.

The friends of a former general secretary, Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, will be interested to learn that he is in Egypt in the military work of the Y.M.C.A. His present address is c/o William Jessup, St. Davis's Court, Cairo.

MAKE BIG SAVING IN WHEAT.

Co-operation of Millers, Farmers, Dealers and Consumers Helps the Food Administration.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.— Co-operation of millers, farmers, grain dealers and consumers has made it possible for the Food Administration Grain Corporation to effect a big saving of the country's wheat supply, Julius Barnes, president of the corporation, declared here to-day.

Mr. Barnes said the decrease in flour consumption amounts to twenty per cent, while flour mills have increased their production fifteen per cent above last year. This is in line, he added, with the corporation's policy of encouraging flour milling and exportation of flour rather than wheat. Flour exports will total approximately thirty-five million barrels, as compared with a normal export of fifteen million barrels, he said.

Liner Passed A Huge Mine

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Nov. 15. — An American liner arriving here to-day passed within a hundred feet of a huge floating mine, when a day out from a British port, passengers reported to-day. Gunners shot at the mine, but a heavy sea was running and they failed to score a hit.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

THE METRONOME, AA DRILL INSTRUCTOR.

"When I see a boy or girl practicing with a metronome on the piano it always reminds me of a policeman on duty at a birthday party," a lady was overheard to say to a friend at a house prty the other evening. No one would unduly restrain those in attendance at a birthday party from enjoying themselves. That is what the party is for.

The metronome is more like a drill instructor. Off duty he allows the soldier certain freedom, but on duty exactness is demanded. The click of the pendulum is the command for strict time. The metronome shows no fabouritism. Whether it is keping time for a march, a waltz, a sonata, or the faltering attempt of the young beginner's exercises it is absolutely impartial, though it never scolds nor praises. And that is the secret of its success. Having no prejudices in favoud of or against anyone it always performs its helpful mission fairly and justly. But like other good disciplinarians it is not always a welcome friend. Some folks dislike working under exacting foreman. If the war has taught one thing it is the necessity for disipline and the priniple holds good in musi. So make the acquaintance of the metronome. Get friendly wit hit. Realize that it always mets out justice and your fear will be dispelled. Besides you will be the gained. Its demand for strict time is all for your benefit.

About the only criticism one ever hears directed against the metronome is not against its character, but its physical appearance, viz., that in contrast to the graceful lines of the violin or the harp or the piano the outline of the metronome is stiff. So one musician puts, it, the design is cold and unsympathetic. But at heart the metronome is kind for it serves a helpful and unselfish purpose.

HIS HEAD WAS NOT SWELLED.

Vincent D'Indy is one of the leading French composers of the modern school. His eminence is due wholly to the absence of self-conceit when he was a young man. He had studied music for many years, had won high success in the various courses he had undertaken and had ben praised for certain minor compositions. Then he wrote a string quartette an dtook it to Cesar Franck for an opinion. That genius and scholar examined the work and said that it showed energy, and a few good ideas, but that it was not "made." In short," he said, "You know nothing at all." D'Indy might have contrasted this opinion with the scores of favourable opinions given to him by friends and masters. On the contrary, forgetting the wound to his vanity, he examiner the quartette critically in the light of Franck's suggestions—and reached Franck's opinion. The next day he joined Farnck's organ class at the Conservatoire, and subjected himself to a long and severe course of technical study. He did this at the age of 22, when most lads know more than their teachers, and begin to lament at the backwardness of their parents. If the name of D'Indy is to be remembered in muisc, and undoubtedly it will defy oblivion, the reason will lie in his humility as a young man. Young people in our time are in too great a hurry to accomplish something, not remembering that immature accomplishments are not worth doing.

Music is like other activities. A young man spends three years learning to be a plumber, and even then may be only an indifferent one. But the music staudent expects to master the art of piano playing in half the time. It can't be done. It is a curious thing, but true none the less, that every life pursuit takes a lifetime to learn. For that reason the Jack of all trades has been unpopular enough to get into a proverb. Nevertheless every man should have a profession or business, and at least one hobby. Whether music is to be his business or his hobby let him be assured that it is worthy of his best effort and of all the time that he can give to it. And let him not believe that he is really a musician until he has been inquiring about the art for a dozen years or more.

During luncheon in a city restaurant recently one of the party made a little test by asking the others what piece the orchestra was playing. Four men listened carefully and then with unanimity gave the correct answer. The music was the Prologue from I Prologue. Here is a sample of the a musician of more than average knowledge. The others were business men. Why did they recognize the composition, especially in a city where Grand Opera is only an importation and an infrequent one at that? All three had talking machines and had heard some eminent baritone sing this favoured and attractive Prologue. Here is a somple of the work that the talking machines are doing on this continent. They are spreading abroad a knowledge of good music. They are making people familiar with compositions which they might never have a chance to hear on the stage or on the concert platform. They are spreading the gospel of appreciation for things of foundational goodness and awakening an terest in the Art of the masters.

In this connection it may be said that the general public are inclined to be querulous about the name of Leoncavallo's work. What is the meaning of Pagliacci? It is an Italian plural signifying The Clowns, the singular being Pagliaccio. The particular sort of clown indicated by the name is as traditional a figure as Punch of the Punch and Judy show. But Pagliaccio means "a straw tick, or mattress" and is cognate with the French word Paillasse. The connection between the name of the thing and of the character is interesting.

In the early part of the Sixteenth Century a party of strolling players from Italy appeared in Paris. The Clown usually wore a suit of white with great black buttons, but this was a variation from an earlier costume of the same cut but of different materil. This material was blue-and-white bed ticking usually with a very large check as the pattern. Thedefore the people in France as in Italy called the buffoon wearing such a costume "The bedtick fellow", and later merely "Bedtick." The particular type from which "Canio" is taken may be found in white costume and mask in EARNING THEIR OWN MUSICAL EDUCATION.

What a person will do to accomplish a thing often indicates to what extent he values it. The sacrifices that young people are making to secure a musical education are seldom given publicity and yet they furnish an array of examples of pluck that at once commend such a worthy ambition.

One young man attended to his piano teacher's furnace in return for lessons. Another kept books for three small storekeepers who hadn't the time to look after their own books and yet did not do a large enough business to warrant a regular bookkeeper. In this way he made enough to pay for a good musical education. Still another took a position as pianist at a summer resort earning enough during the summer months to defray a good portion of his year's expenses for lessons and music.

A young woman found employment with an old lady to play for her in the evenings receiving in return a home with congenial people and the opportunity of studying under a well-known teacher. A second acted as saleslady in a store for the afternoons and three evenings a week. A country girl on her father's farm was given the care of the hens, the profits from which paid for her music lessons, music and other incidental expenses. Many other illustrations might be given but it is pretty safe to venture that all these auidens made,he most of every opportunity because they knew the cost of their education.

INTERESTING BRIEFS.

The officers of the British Museum have reserved a section of the building for the preservation of talking machine records of the voices of the great artists of the day as well as the noted statesmen and orators. Vocal records of these artists will be placed side by side with the speeches of Lord Roberts and the archbishops of Westminster and Canterbury.

When recently talking to some of our men at the front, Harry Lauder is reported as having said of his soldier son killed in action: "I was at the graveside of my dear boy, I had only one prayer and desire, and that was that God would allow the grave to open for one minute so that I could kiss him on each cheek and thank him for what he had done for his country."

"The Bird Of Paradise"

"The Bird of Paradise," which comes to "The Grand" next Wednesday, Nov. 21, with special matinee at 2.30, as well as the usual evening performance, is of world-wide interest because of the thrilling tale it presents of the effects of a climate upon one unused to its influence. One's interest is held taut from the moment of the discovery on the sands, of the poor wreck of a fellow who had allowed himself to become a victim of the customs of the people. Then the attention is held in thrall by the gradual succumbing of another victim of these influences, and there is the wildest sort of a desire on the part of the spectator to help the victim to save himself.

Through the unfolding of the strangely fascinating story about Hawaii are presented the manner of living of these people—their customs, religion, superstitions, strange and weird ways of dancing and celebrating gala and serious occasions and their savage ideas about sacrificing their lives in order to serve apprehended dangers from Mount Pele. But those things are only incidentally introduced and give local colour to a story that is tense with the happiness of the American and the Hawaiians.

Mail orders are now being booked in the order received.

GIRLS DENIED HUSBANDS WIN JOBS BY DRAFT

War Reduces Work of Marriage License Bureau.

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Scarcity of acceptable husbands, caused by the draft and the attraction of profitable employment presented by the departure of men for the front, have served to reduce materially the business of the marriage license clerk in Washington county.

When good positions are being offered that pay from $100 to $150 a month, Bartlesville girls declare they are not going to risk the chance of sailing out on the matrimonial sea, with the possibility of much worry over keeping the wolf from the door, and the reduced number of weddings here during the last two months indicates that they mean what they say. The war has opened the way for many young women to obtain good positions, and they are accepting them. Many more are preparing themselves for such positions by taking special courses in business training.

In the offices of many of the big oil and gas companies good positions, made vacant by army enlistments, are now filled by women. One woman who has charge of a business is paid a salary of $2,500 a year; another who looks after an important department of an oil company's business receives $175 a month, and there are a large number of women who receive from $125 to $150 a month. The average stenographer receives as much as $100, and girls just out of school are readily employed at salaries ranging from $65 to $80.

ROUMANIA WILL CUT BIG FIGURE AFTER THE WAR

Says Queen Marie's Envoy now in Montreal—People now in Dire Need.

Montreal, November 9. — Important as Rumania has been, and is, in the war, she will be yet more important when peace comes, according to Lieut. I. C. Ioanidu, special representative in America of Her Majesty, the Queen of Rumania, and entrusted by her with the furtherance of Rumanian interests in this country.

Lieut. Ioanidu is a guest in Montreal of the Rev. George Adam, of Emmanuel Congregational Church, and outlined his plans yesterday to a representative of The Star. Briefly, his mission is to get help in the form of money, clothing and supplies for those of his countrymen who are in need; but in making this clear, he touched upon many interesting points in the history of his country since the war begar.

Rumania is, he says, the key of the situation in the Balkans. Mr. Lloyd George has spoken of this, and Romania's geographical position is such that after the war the Allies will find it advantageous to strengthen Rumania for the general good.

"The help we were promised from Russia has not come," said Lieut. Ioanidu, "and we are fighting Turks, Bulgarians, Germans and Austro-Hungarians, all alone."

HELPED AT VERDUN.

Rumania was of immense assistance to the Allies at the time the Germans were trying to take Verdun, for the forces which the Germans were obliged to send into Rumania were drawn from the Verdun district and so relieved the pressure upon the French armies. The German drive into Rumania was less profitable than has been supposed for the retreating Rumanians dynamited the standing crops and Great Britain sent a special commissioner to destroy the rich oil wells.

The centre of this group of returned men discussing the Victory Bonds, is Sunny "Jock" Waddell—who was one of the first Canadians to see fighting in France. He has lost both legs, has suffered 26 operations, but is as cheerful as a cricket. The photo was taken at the Spadina Hospital, Toronto.

"Imagine the position of my country," said Lieut. Ioanidu in his liquid English—acquired, incidentally, in four months.

"At the beginning of the war, our army was 700,000 strong; and now Rumania has lost of her population about 2,000,000 persons. But the army has been reorganized and is full of enthusiasm, and although perhaps 400,000 soldiers were lost in the German drive, the army is now 400,000 again. Very few prisoners were taken for most of the soldiers killed themselves rather than fall into enemy hands."

HAVE LATEST EQUIPMENT.

At the beginning of the war, the armaments, which had been furnished by Germany were much inferior to the armaments which German soldiers used in their invasion of Rumania; but since then, England and France had set equipment of the latest patterns into Rumania and "our soldiers are fighting day and night."

Less than one-half of the area of the country remains in the hands of the people; and many are pushed from that over crowded territory into Russia. The suffering among the civilians is great; and Lieut. Ioanidu is visiting Canada to ask that aid be given to his countrymen. England has done so much already, he says, that it is felt no further appeal should be made to her. In the United States Lieut. Ioanidu has already been very successful, and he speaks of forming a committee here.

Another point brought up by his visit is that Germany has always seen to it that Rumania had no diplomatic representative in the United States. After the war, Lieut. Ioanidu anticipates, a Rumanian legation will be established at Washington.

THE SAME GAME.

By Walter Trumbull.

The boy who once won football fame,
Now goes without a backward glance
To play a fiercer, wilder game
Upon some bloody field in France;
Where every yard line means a trench;
Where players cannot stall for breath
Or stop the game for bruise or wrench;
Where penalties are wounds and death.

But still those boys will find it so
The play at it to rip and bore;
To fight unto the very end;
That's football—and it's also war.
N. Y. World.

Thee football axioms apply—
To hit the line, and hit it low;
Never to let a foeman by;
To find a weakness and to send

Y. M. C. A. Membership Campaign Is To Be Pushed To The Limit

A meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors was held on Tuesday evening, November 13th, when a number of important matters were considered. Regarding the finances it was noted that there are still outstanding $4281 in subscriptions that must be collected before the first of the year, and also that $1256 was still needed in subscriptions, memberships and lockers to balance all expenses up to the first of the year. It is hoped that every subscriber will make his contribution promptly, as our men are engaged in many patriotic enterprises, and it is with a great deal of difficulty that personal collection calls are made. It seems possible that the amount needed in new money may be realized from the membership canvass now on if members whose fees are due will make prompt payment.

Some forty-five officers of the Boys' Groups and Teams met at a supper held at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night and agreed to push the membership canvass to the limit, so we are looking for very good results from their efforts.

The following motion was passed by the directors: "It is resolved that the Young Men's Christian Association assure the local pastors of our city of our readiness to cooperate in any forward movement of which they may approve, to deepen the spiritual life of the men of our city and country." The Association feels that some special movement should be made about the first of the year to personally interview a large number of the men of our city regarding their spiritual condition, and if possible to get them to unite with our churches. The resolution as passed assures our local churches of the deep desire on the part of the Y.M.C.A. to aid them in every possible way in reaching the men of Peterboro.

Peterboro, Nov. 3, 1917.

C. N. Meserve, Esq.,
General Secretary,
Y.M.C.A., City.

Dear Sir: The G.W.V.A., Peterboro Branch, desire to express their thanks to you for your kindness in extending to them the privileges of the Y. M. C. A.

We have seen the great work that your Association has done on behalf of the soldier and fully appreciate it, and trust every success will always attend your efforts in that direction.

Again thanking you on behalf of the Veterans,

I remain, sir, yours faithfully,
(Signed) Sidney Whatley,
Secretary.

The above letter was received by the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors from the Great War Veterans' Association, in acknowledgment of the Association's offer of free privileges to the members of the Peterboro Branch of the G.W.V.A.

Interesting Address Given

Mrs. H. D. Robertson Spoke on "China"

At St. Paul's church on Tuesday night, Mrs. H. Deeks Robertson gave a most interesting and comprehensive address on "China," before the Fraser Mission Band.

Mrs. Robertson spoke of the strange religious customs of the Chinese. The worship of ancestors and parents, she said, is the very core of the religious and social life of the Chinese. No man can have peace after death unless he leaves a son to perform the ancestral rites for the repose of his spirit in death. All dead are supposed to be affected by the faithful performance of religious rites.

INDUSTRIES OF CHINA.

In speaking of the industries of the Chinese she told of the wonderful knowledge the Chinese had acquired both by experiments and custom.

By experimental knowledge they had discovered centuries ago that many more could live by grains and vegetables than by the pork, beef, etc., that could be produced by using such as fodder. Pork, they found, produced more food than beef, therefore more hogs are raised than other animals. As a rule they are extremely economical. Intensive cultivation is done in all China.

CHINA IN PRESENT WAR.

The fact that the Chinaman can labor more continuously under extremes of heat and cold accounts for his great usefulness in the present conflict in Europe.

In the new countries the churches and schools are the most important buildings. In China the guild hall is the important building. It has been said that Canada might do well to send a man to China to gather the constitutions of Chinese guilds, to make a study of their management, for the larger and better operation of the industrial forces of the west.

The Chinese system of irrigation is marvellously systematic, and has opened up vast fields for cultivation in a manner which would astound the western world.

MACKLEM IS NOW FREE CHARGE IS DISMISSED

Judge Stein, in Making Finding, Criticises Conduct of the Complainant.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 15.—The charges against Col. Omar L. Macklem, on which he has been held here for the past ten days, was dismissed yesterday afternoon.

Money was forthcoming from outside parties to make restitution to Hiram Peck, complainant. The prosecuting attorney stated he had no recommendation to make.

Judge Stein in making his finding for the defence criticised Peck's conduct.

Col. Macklem was apparently ignorant of the fact that money had been put up to satisfy Peck's interest. A. P. Entenza, counsel for defence, took full responsibility for this action.

Acting Prosecuting Attorney Stevens stated that the case was complicated anyway and it would have been difficult to proceed with it much further.

Col. Macklem is now freed of the charge.

The charge arose out of a transaction which took place previous to Macklem's services in the war. Earlier in the proceedings Macklem refused to allow friends to tender restitution, stating that he was entirely innocent.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL REPORT.

The October statement from he Queen Mary Hospital, showed thirteen patients treated during the month, six of whom were patients admitted in September.

RECEIVED BULLET IN THE SHOULDER

FENELON FALLS, Nov. 15—A serious accident befel Mr. Wilfrid Pogue, on Tuesday morning, while on a hunting trip on Galway. It appears that he left home at an early hour with a small party to spend a day in the woods. As he was leaving the auto his rifle slipped and when he caught it and pulled it toward him the trigger caught in his clothing with the result that he received a severe wound in one of his arms, the bullet penetrating as far as the shoulder. Mr. Gordon Graham, one of the party, motored to town with the victim of the accident, where the doctor located the bullet with the X-ray.

It was deemed advisable to have the patient removed to the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay. Dr. Johnstone accompanied him on the trip. The latest report is to the effect that the bullet was extracted in two pieces and that Mr. Pogue was doing as well as possible under the circumstances.

CAMERON WILL SUSTAINED BY COURT OF APPEAL

LINDSAY, Nov. 15.—Mr. L. V. O'Connor was in Toronto in connection with the appeal of Mrs. Margaret Cameron, of Oakwood, against the judgment of His Honour Judge McMillan, Judge of the Surrogate Court Lindsay. Mrs. Cameron and others opposed the granting of probate of the will and the same was tried before His Honour Judge McMillan in July last. At the trial those opposing the will withdrew all charges of fraud and undue influence, but contended that the late Mr. Cameron was incapable of making a will. The trial Judge found in favour of the will, and directed that probate issue. The Court of Appeal has concurred in the trial Judge's findings and dismissed the appeal. The Court, however, directed that the sum of $700.00 be paid out of the estate, towards the costs of the widow and the infants.

Automobile Ran Into the Ditch

LINDSAY, Nov. 15.—Slippery, well-beaten roads were responsible for a motor car accident on the Kingston road Sunday, in which Mr. Milton J. Dedman, of Lindsay, and Mr. J. W. Plowman, Head Organizer for the Woodmen of the World, figured prominently. The latter had been in Lindsay for several days in connection with the local branch of the Society and was returning to Toronto in his runabout when the accident happened. As the car was spinning along at a fairly good speed it suddenly left the beaten path and nosed towards the ditch. Mr. Dedman was fortunate enough to leap out of the car and was unhurt, but his companion was not so lucky. He received several injuries and is at present in one of the Toronto hospitals receiving medical treatment.

The runabout was badly disfigured and also dismantled of a running board, a fender and a wind shield.

"Went down into my cellar on arriving home last evening and I don't know when I saw such a pleasing sight."

"What kind of a sight?".

"Anthracite, my boy."

The Railway Question

An Editorial From the Montreal Gazette, Nov. 8th, 1917

To use the mildest term, the policy of the country towards the railways has been shortsighted. There is a Railway Commission formed to regulate rates, well and good; but it cannot have been the purpose of parliament, when constituting the commission, to impair the efficiency of the great transportation systems, upon which the trade and prosperity of the country depend. Yet that is what is happening. Every factor entering into the cost of equipment and operation of the railways, from the spike to the locomotive, the office boy to the engineer, has during the last three years increased enormously in price, while the one item from which these roads derive revenue, transportation, remains as it was. The case of the Canadian Pacific Railway is in point. It is admittedly one of the best built, best managed, and most efficiently operated roads in the world, yet the cost of operating its lines, on the basis of the September returns, rose from 54 per cent. in 1915 to 70 per cent. in 1917, an increase of upwards of 25 per cent., and the experience of the Canadian Pacific is that of the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Northern. People are prone to regard merely gross earnings and to infer therefrom that the railways are sharing in the general prosperity of the country. In the first ten months of this year the gross receipts from the traffic of the three Canadian systems show a gain of $18,346,000, but so far from profiting from the greater volume of traffic, the railways actually suffer a decline in net earnings, in surplus profit, thereby.

Why should the railways alone be singled out for discriminative action? Why be compelled to bear the burden of greatly increased expenses, without compensation in the form of equitable rates? Regulation of rates is desirable from every standpoint, but it must be fair regulation. The existing rates were made, at least approved, by the Railway Commission in the ante-war times. If they were fair then, as is proper to presume, they are certainly most unfair now. The Chicago Tribune, dealing with this subject, which is equally acute in the United States, says:

"The present condition of the railroads calls not only for immediate measures of relief, but for the non-demagogic, broad minded consideration of a constructive policy. The protection of the shipper from extortionate or excessive rates is only one element of the problem. If we are to have an efficient system of transportation we must protect the credit and other resources of the railroads so that their efficiency may be maintained.

"Under stress of war the government lately has taken upon itself to fix the prices of certain commodities, but for years it has been fixing the price of the railroad's commodity, and of late the pressure from above and below has become so great, the cost of labor and supplies and maintenance, including taxation, has so increased, while the resistance to rate increases has hardly lessened, that the situation has become critical. If the pressure continues our system of transportation will be destroyed."

It should be realized that it is not more the interest of railway stockholders than that of the Canadian people which is involved. Railways supply the arteries of commerce. The more efficient the railway service, the more advantageously will the trade of the country be carried on. We owe the development of our Northwest absolutely to the railways, and at a time when the need of increasing production, of preparing for a great immigration, of so developing resources, that the burden of the war will be more easily sustained, it surely is the very part of prudence to render such justice to the railways as will maintain their efficiency, preserve their credit and enable them to cope with the new conditions which are arising. The people of Canada can infinitely better bear a moderate increase in traffic rates, than have the efficiency of the railways impaired in any degree.

FOR years more people in Great Britain and the United States have guided their movements by Ingersoll watches than by any other kind.

In spite of being the lowest priced, their reliability has gained them the largest patronage in the world. Fifty million Ingersolls have been made and sold.

But only now has the establishment of a factory for assembling and completing in Canada permitted the introduction of the full variety of 16 styles and models, answering all ordinary requirements.

Canadians generally are already acquainted with the Ingersoll Dollar watch (temporary war price $1.50). Now and hereafter the most reliable and enterprising stores in every city, town and hamlet throughout Canada will display and explain the full assortment of Ingersolls. Watch the store windows for exhibits of Ingersolls.

You can now procure the familiar Maple Leaf model and also the splendid 7-jewel Reliance Ingersoll as well as Ingersoll Midget Wrist Radiolite by which the Allied Armies march, and all the other styles.

Every genuine Ingersoll has the name "Ingersoll" on the dial and is guaranteed to run accurately for one year, or will be repaired free at the Canadian factory.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

said he would not attempt to touch upon the greater issues of the day, but would leave that to Sir George E. Foster.

"I was nominated two years ago at a regular party convention," said Mr. Burnham. As the war progressed Sir Robert Borden conceived the possibility of forming a Union government for the purpose of uniting all parties in the successful prosecution of the war. Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused to have anything to do with the proposal. After nomination day the leader of each party will have their candidates so that the soldiers overseas may know who is for them and who is against them. Some time ago a win-the-war party sprang into existence and I for one would never accept a nomination from any organization that totally disregarded the great Liberal party as the Win-the-War League did. The two or three parties that might well come together for the object of doing away with political agitation are the Conservative, the Liberal and the Labour parties. As the regular nominee of the Conservative party I submitted a proposal to have a union convention and if I was not selected well and good. I was prepared to support any man that might be selected at such a convention.

On Saturday last a Liberal convention was held and despite the efforts of a number to have a Union convention, a Laurier candidate was nominated, and I was left in the field as the only representative of the Union government. If I had two or three months in which to conduct an election, I would have waited for further developments. Five weeks is not enough in which to prepare a campaign and I could not afford to endanger the interests of the Union government by delaying plans for a campaign. I stand here to-night as the only man representing the Borden government and that is what I ask Sir George E. Foster to endorse, providing no more acceptable candidate was placed in the field. If the public want a better man, God speed them. I will do all I can to help them.

SIR GEORGE E. FOSTER.

Sir George Foster prefaced his address with an eloquent appeal for an hearty response for the Victory Loan, which he characterized as "an expression of the people's sympathy and loyalty to the war in which we are engaged and the great cause for which it is being fought." "Money makes the mare go," is a sentence I used to write in my copy book many years ago," said the speaker, "and money is necessary to make the war go." Sir George illustrated the great sums of money that were needed by referring to Stewart Lyons' statement that in order to pave the way for a recent Canadian advance over $2,000,000 worth of shells were used. Every part of Canada was being asked to take part in raising this loan and the speaker felt sure that Peterborough would do its part.

"In the name of all we hold dear," remarked Sir George, "put your money into the Victory Loan. There is another side to the matter—the selfish side—but I don't want to touch upon that."

The Local Situation.

"Since I have come to Peterborough," said Sir George, "I have been treated to several stories, several versions of some little friendly family differences that are taking place in Peterborough. I am an outsider and I cannot saturate myself with the local atmosphere to be a wise judge. I however am not the arbitrater.

The speaker pointed out the unusual features of the present situation. "We have never had an election like this before," he said. "We have never had an election act like this before; we have never had to take a soldier vote before."

One of the provisions of the Act was that within five days after nomination day the leader of each party was to designate a candidate in each constituency as his official candidate in order that the overseas voters may know on which side the men are for whom they are asked to vote. The leaders did not arbitrarily appoint these candidates—they merely designated them after they had been nominated by the people. There was no other way of getting around or over the dilemna.

"Mr. Burnham is so far the candidate who has declared for the Union government and conscription," said the speaker. "Mr. Hall has, I understand, been nominated by the Liberal party as a Laurier candidate. There are no others at this time, and Mr. Burnham was correct in saying that he is the only candidate who has so far declared himself for union. When Monday comes it is possible that a different disposition may be made if it happens that other candidates are named."

The Need For Union.

Sir George then left the local situation to deal with the problem of Union government, first discussing the question, "Why is Union government necessary?" Men learned in two ways, by experience and observation, the speaker pointed out, as he went on to answer his own question, by showing that not a single belligerent nation, with the exception of Australia, had had a general election since the war began. Governments had changed, but there had been no elections. The speaker pointed out that in France, Great Britain and Italy, party lines had been dropped and all factions had been united in prosecuting the war. If it had been possible to visualize the war on the 4th of August, 1914, and to see what it would involve, no party would have cared to face the terrible responsibility of the war alone. Was it not true, asked the speaker, that Canada had entered upon the war as if it were a holiday excursion? Gradually, however, the feeling had grown that party politics, that attempts to settle petty issues, that the struggle to gratify personal ambition, were entirel yout of place when men were entirely out of place when men down their lives on the altar of liberty.

The Need For Conscription.

Sir Robert had returned from his visit to the trenches and from hearing the secrets of the war as revealed to the war council, firmly convinced that in order that Canada should do her full share in the war two things were necessary, first the power of selective conscription so that the sources of reinforcements for our men at the front might be kept winning, and secondly a Union government. A complete union would have been brought about if Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as leader of the Liberal party, had agreed to Sir Robert's proposal. The determining factor in that refusal was that Sir Wilfrid was opposed to conscription and that the premier was insistent upon that as the only principle upon which such a government should be formed.

Sir George pointed out that practically all the belligerent nations except Australia had adopted conscription. In Australia, which Sir Wilfrid had used as an example of a country, which did not quit the war because she did not have conscription, the speaker stated that a conscription act was again being voted upon. After the defeat of the first act by a referendum, Australia had endeavoured to raise 7,500 recruits per month by the voluntary system, but after furnishing an average of 4,100 a month for the first six months of the year, the enlistments had dwindled down until in September only 2,300 recruits had been secured.

The United States had profited by the experience of others and placed a selective draft system in operation immediately after entering the war.

A Union Government.

The speaker passed on to discuss the personnel of the Union government. "It is a Union government," he remarked, "don't make any mistake about that." He amplified his statement by a rapid survey of the country, showing the prominent Liberals who had espoused the cause of the Union government, Brewster in British Columbia, Sifton in Alberta, Calder in Saskatchewan, Crerar in Manitoba, Rowell, Guthrie, Pardee and Mewburn in Ontario, Murray, Fielding and McLean in Nova Scotia, Pugsley and Carvell in New Brunswick were cited. "We are well satisfied with this representation," said the speaker. "They are honest in coming to their work because of the principle involved and the necessities of the case. It is a union in fact, not simply a name; a union in reality, not merely on paper."

Sir George, however, reminded his hearers that Union government was not the end, but simply the means to the end.

The War the Only Issue.

They might expect to have all kinds of petty things brought up during the coming campaign. There would be personal prejudices and talk about such things as the price of butter or of bacon, important enough, perhaps, in their way, but above all the war was the only issue. "Can we not for the time being?" asked the speaker, "put our foot on the lesser things and keep our hearts on the main issue?"

There was a real peril for Peterborough, a peril for Canada, a peril for the British Empire, a peril for the civilization of the world. Many people had the idea that the war was about nearly over, but the speaker pointed out in decisive terms the fallacy of such a belief. In eloquent words he painted the suffering of the Armenians, of the people of Poland and of Belgium and sketched the critical war situation, with Russia eliminated and the Italians suddenly driven back far into their own country.

Canada's Duty.

The suggestion was being made and would be made that Canada, instead of sending more men should make more munitions and grow more food. "A splendid sacrifice," said Sir George sarcastically. "Make more munitions and the brave lads won't have to go near the trenches, but can remain in the munitions factories getting their $3, $4 and $5 a day and with a comfortable bed to go when they are through."

Food was necessary, Sir George agreed, but he pointed out that if Canada was to devote all her energies to the task of growing grain it would not be until the autumn of next year that a bushel of that grain could be obtained and it would be several months after before any of it could be gotten overseas, and in the meantime Canada's forces at the front would have practically vanished.

If the war was to end with the Huns holding what he now has, the speaker stated, the war has been fought in vain, and inside of fifteen years the world would have to go through a worse hell than it has gone through.

In conclusion the speaker made another eloquent appeal for the dropping of party prejudices and petty issues.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

Casualties Among The U. S. Soldiers

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By J. W. Pegler.)

AMERICAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 15.—A few more American soldiers were killed and wounded during a hot bit of shelling to which the Germans subjected the front line trenches. One American was killed by a sniper. One single German shell well placed against the front lines wounded several. In the fight the Americans achieved a brilliant bit of patrol ambush work, in which one German was killed and two wounded. A mixed Franco-American patrol was slipping over No Man's Land in the usual reconnoissance work undertaken each night. One alert member of the patrol caught the sound of an approaching enemy detachment. With a few whispered words the Americans and French divided into two sections, flopping down silently in shell holes. There they awaited until the Germans were well into the ambuscade. The Sammies and Poilus let loose, and the Germans, even though they outnumbered their assailants, turned tail and ran, yelling furiously as they bobbed up and down on the pock-marked, irregularity of No Man's Land. They only waited long enough to pick up their dead comrade and drag along their two wounded.

10,000 SOLDIERS IN A BIG SOUTHERN HIKE.

CAMP McCLELLAN, ANNISTON, Ala., Nov. 14.—What was probably the largest movement of uniformed men the South has witessed since Sherman marched from Atlanta to the sea, took place here to-day, when the Fifty-fourth Artillery Brigade and the Twenty-seventh Infantry Brigade took part in a three-hour cross-country hike.

More than ten thousand men marching with full equipment and accompanied by heavy service waggons and caissons hiked over hill and dale.

Honoured Their Member in India

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of Murray Street Baptist Church held its monthly meeting Tuesday night, at the home of Mrs. Joseph Doughty, 681 Aylmer Street. The attendance was large and the meeting of unusual interest. Miss Annie Hardill gave a splendid report of the Missionary Convention, held at St. Catharines, last week, which she attended as the representative of the Murray Street Society. Miss Eva Rose read an admirable paper on "John Davis, Our Martyr Missionary."

By a unanimous resolution, the necessary twenty-five dollars was forwarded to the Foreign Missionary Board to make Mrs. Alex. Haddow a life member of the society. Mrs. Haddow is a member of Murray Street Church, and with her husband, is serving in the missionary field of South America.

Five Local Returned Men Have Applied For Vocational Training Provided By Gov't

Applications from five local returned soldiers for vocational training under the Military Hospital Commission's system were received by Major F. A. Good of Kingston, who was in Peterborough yesterday, accompanied by Capt. Randall.

"I am visiting the returned men who want re-election," he told th Examiner at the Empress. "It is not our intention to re-educate men merely that they may obtain a better living. If they are fit to resume their former occupations they are urged to do so in order that they may use their former knowledge and experience.

If a man is unable to take up that employment we seek to re-educate him for some similar or related work that is possible for him. Thus a man who want re-education," he told the a sign painter, and so on. Our main object is to help the man whose efficiency has been impaired, in order that his economic value to himself and to the state may be raised as high as possible."

Major Good explained that it was desired to assist the men to overcome the handicaps resulting from the disabilities they had suffered in service.

"We want to see all the returned men make good," he continued, "and we expect that the public and employers will give soldiers the preference. But the returned man must do his part. In most cases I believe he is doing it, and is proving himself as good a man in his peaceful occupation as he did in khaki."

Major Good met the Great War Veterans at their club on Tuesday night and while making regular visits throughout the district, will make a special trip whenever he is wanted.

The Military Hospitals Commission is gradually losing its control of the care and treatment of convalescent men, which is passing into the hands of the Army Medical Corps, but retains full charge of the vocational training scheme. This applies to returned men in two general categories —(1) Convalescent; (2) discharged.

ASSISTING CONVALESCENTS.

In all the Canadian Convalescent Homes classes have been established for the men who are resting and undergoing treatment. Instructors are men who have been overseas, if they are available. There is a commercial course embracing shorthand, bookkeeping, stenography, telegraphy, and elementary subjects. Part of this training is for civil service positions. Another course teaches motor mechanics for automobile, more especially chauffeurs, and advanced classes for future repair men.

MAKING ROAD BUILDERS.

At Queen's University three special instructors are provided for the men. One of them teaches draughting which will be a big help to men who have a special aptitude for this study.

Prof. Jemmett, D.S.O., is in charge of electrical engineering with special attention to house-wiring.

Prof. (Lieut.) T. S. Scott, a civil engineer and contractor, has a class in civil engineering. This is a somewhat abridged course, but should prove decidedly attractive to the men. It teaches road-building, concrete work, the use of transit instruments, calculations, and the building of small bridges. The Good Roads system, in its growing extension throughout Canada, with the promise of greater development after the war, is creating a demand for road supervisors, and it is hoped that many of the returned men will be equipped to take the positions that will be offered and are now vacant.

FOR DISCHARGED MEN.

The assisting of discharged men presents a different problem. They must first apply for training and be accepted by the commission. While in training for the work they select, married men are granted $60 a month, and if they have children, may receive as high as $90, according to the number of their dependents. Unmarried men are allowed $46, and whatever wage they may earn. For example, a man who chose the automobile trade may be placed in a garage where he is paid by the employer in addition to the government allowance. But he may be sent to the Mechanical Transport garage at Ottawa, where he will gain a wide experience but will receive only the monthly grant.

One man is attending the Peterborough Business College, and is reported to be making good progress. The time limit of this training is not indefinite, and faithful application is required of the men.

College and High School students, who apply for re-education, are returned to the institutions from which they enlisted and their expenses paid for six months' during each of two school years.

GOOD RESULTS ALREADY.

There are a few disappointments, Major Good said, but the great majority of the men are doing well in their new courses.

One of the men at Kingston is a Russian, who is learning English. He knew scarcely a word when he began his studies. It is all a splendid, comprehensive scheme, the success of which will depend to a large extem upon the efforts of the men themselves.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 15.—Judge Bradford, in the U.S. District Court, yesterday afternoon handed down a decision sustaining the constitutionality of the draft law.

The action was brought by Donald Stephens, of Arden, Del., and the contention raised that the Government had no right to compel citizens to perform military service outside of the country.

Dyspeptics Should Avoid Drugs And Medicines

Try a Little Magnesia Instead.

Some people instinctively shut their eyes to danger, and it may be that instinct, or custom or habit causes dyspeptics to take drugs, patent foods and medicines, artificial digestants, etc.

But closing the eyes does not banish the danger, and it is certain that neither drugs nor medicines possess the power to destroy the harmful excessive acid in the stomach, which is the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia. They may give temporary relief, but ever increasing quantities must be taken, and all the time the acid remains in the stomach as dangerous as ever.

Physicians know this and that is why their advice so often to sufferers from digestive and stomach trouble is "Just get about an ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from your druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water immediately after every meal. This will instantly neutralize all the harmful acid in the stomach and stop all food fermentation, thus enabling you to enjoy hearty meals without experiencing the least pain or unpleasantness afterward.

SERBIA'S TRAGEDY IS GRAPHICALLY PICTURED

Story of the Actual Conditions Told By Miss Helen Losanitch in the Collegiate Hall Last Night.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING

The plight of poor, plundered Serbia and of her destitute refugees were graphically described by Miss Helen Losanitch last night in the Collegiate Hall. The story of the actual conditions told by one who had come fresh from the very scene of war made a touching appeal which will no doubt be responded liberally to by all who attended. Judge Huycke occupied the chair.

Miss Losanitch brought the audience through Serbia, the little patriotic country, scarcely larger than Scotland, with her industrious population, 90 per cent. of whom are farmers, 10 per cent. university people, to the present crisis, when devastated by three hostile countries she is in a pitiable condition, her population practically annihilated, and with all the hostile nations could not take out destroyed.

The Refugees.

The pitiable story of the refugees driven mile by mile back out of their homes into the snow-clad mountains was told by Miss Losanitch. The sufferings of the refugees are almost impossible to believe. Belgian refugees suffered, but how much worse was the plight of the Serb who, instead of reaching hospitable and friendly nations, was driven into the mountains. Here with the weeks of wading through the snow and mud, constant attacks by hostile tribes, and hunger, thousands dropped out. Of 30,000 boys, between the ages of 5 and 15 years, who started from Serbia, 6,000 are alive to-day. So in the mountains the future of Serbia lies buried.

The Hospitals.

The hospital conditions in Serbia are pitiable. In one hospital in which Miss Losanitch nursed, a Russian doctor was the sole medical aid. Here no anaesthetics could be procured, and surgical instruments were at a premium. Long and indescribably painful operations were performed with no anaesthetics. Crude beds, composed of rough boards with scant covering, were the best obtainable. Here with the patient conscious, legs and arms were amputated and shrapnel removed, the patient bearing his suffering without complaint. No funds for Serbian Red Cross can be got from the Serbs, therefore succour can only be looked for from Great Britain.

Serbia To-day.

Miss Losanitch concluded with a description of Serbia as it is to-day. Every property from which the refugees have fled has been confiscated. The King's palace has been looted. All the valuables in the country have been transported into Germany; even the tombstones of the great men have been taken. The forests have been cut and taken to Germany. Food is scarce, bread 50c a loaf, sugar, coffee and tea unobtainable, milk an unheard of luxury for months, therefore children die constantly. Even starvation is not allowed as a merciful release, but a pitiable slow death through unhealthy food is the lot of the Serb. The Serb prisoners of war in Germany are suffering tortures, and exist on acorn bread and horse meat.

Numerous lantern views of Serbian towns and country districts and the natives before and during the retreat, were thrown on the screen, and proved no less interesting than the lecture. The lantern was manipulated by Mr. Cyril Devey.

Miss Losanitch thanked the Canadians, on behalf of the Serbian nation, for the relief they have already sent.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. G. N. Gordon, seconded by Mr. W. H. Dunsford, for the splendid address.

Doctor Gives Evidence In Kingston Case

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 15.—That he reported Sister Mary Basil not as crazy, but only troublesome, was the evidence of Dr. Phelan, at the Assizes this morning, in the trial of the action of the Sister against Archbishop Suratt and others for $29,000 damages for abduction. Father Mea said the Archbishop had forbidden him to communicate with Sister Mary after May 28th, and he obeyed the order. He told how the Archbishop and the Mother General had given the Sister permission to accompany him to the funeral of his brother-in-law in Smith's Falls. That was after the alleged abduction. Counsel read from the examination of Archbishop Spratt and Mother General, to the effect that they had decided to send Sister Mary to a Montreal institution.

Allied Armies 30 Miles From Belgium Goal

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Perhaps in no other war in modern history have a few miles counted for as much in the scales of victory as in the present contest in West Flanders," says a bulletin issued here to-day by the bureau of geographic information of the National Geographic society.

"The distance which separates the allied forces from full control of the Coast of Belgium is only thirty miles. Possession of these thirty miles of coast line would not only wipe out the German submarine bases in Belgium, but it would also give the allies a new front upon which to attack in an effort to drive the enemy out of Belgium and northern France.

"Possession of this coast, therefore, would be a double victory to the allies, sorely hampering the enemy's submarine operations, and at the same time affording an opportunity to roll up his right flank on land.

WAR HITS PLEASURE RESORTS.

"Nowhere else may be found a more striking contrast between peace and war than that afforded by the Belgian coast in 1913 and in 1917. Practically the entire coast line in normal times is given up to the pleasures of seaside cities and rest resorts.

"La Panne, Coxyde-Plage, Oost-Duinkerke, Le Coq-sur-Mer, Wenduyne-sur-Mer, and Knocke-sur-Mer are all places which remind one of the seaside cities of New Jersey. Of these Ostend, Nieuport-Bains and Blankenberghe are the most pretentious.

"In these Atlantic Cities, Cape Mays and Asbury Parks of Belgium laughter and happiness reigned with a care-free abandon that only European resorts could know, while to-day war, on land, under sea, and in the air, harries the souls of the few brave persons who still remain there.

PRAY FOR DELIVERANCE.

"Between La Panne and Oost-Duinkerke is the Hooge-Blikker, 105 feet high, the highest point of the Belgian dunes, and also the widest point. Just outside of Nieuport-Bains in the village of Lombartzyde, there is a celebrated figure of the Madonna, held in veneration by Flemish fishermen from time immemorial, and to which the Flemings are to-day addressing their appeal that their land shall be liberated from the iron heel of the invader.

"Ostend is famous not only as a seaside resort but for its great fishing trade in normal times and for its oyster parks. Oysters in large numbers are brought here and kept in clarified sea water. The visitor may order his plate of shell fish right out of the water.

"Should the allies get control of the coast of Belgium as far inland as Bruges, they would come into possession of a splendid system of canals, and thence by way of Nieuport to Ostend and Bruges. There is also a canal from Bruges to the coast near Blankenberghe, another to Ghent, and a third to the waterway connecting Heyst with Ghent. A railroad parallels the coast all the way from the French border to the Dutch frontier.

FLANDERS MARSHY.

"West Flanders, where the big English smash is now on, is generally flat and low and in parts marshy. Under a new system of intensive agriculture the province was one of the most productive in Belgium in the years before the war, and 40 per cent of the population was engaged in manufacturing, the principal industry being linen weaving and lace making."

JAPAN CAN'T SEND ARMY.

Tremendous Cost and Lack of Tonnage Are Reasons Given.

TOKIO, Nov. 14.—Lieutenant-General Oshima, the Japanese Minister of War, informs Japanese newspapermen that the despatch of troops to Europe is an absolute impossibility, owing to the tremendous cost and the lack of tonnage.

Baron Takahashi, former Minister of Finance, and one of the leaders of the Seiyukai party, in a lengthy article in the newspapers, declares the Japanese army is deficient in ordnance and airplane equipment.

Tunic effects are noticed on almost every frock.

MILITARY NEWS

Like the other non-coms, Pte. Traynor had to revert to the ranks to go to France. No particulars as to the nature of his injuries have been received.

CAPT. V. M. EASTWOOD.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood of the Royal Bank, has received official word from Ottawa that his son, Lieut. and Acting Captain Vincent McCarter Eastwood, M.C., is officially reported wounded. Acting Captain Eastwood went overseas as a subaltern with the 93rd Battalion, and was one of the first officers of the Peterborough Battalion to go to France, being transferred to an Ontario Second Division Battalion. He has had a brilliant career at the front, and some time ago was awarded the military cross for conspicuous gallantry.

LANCE-CORP. R. HADDOW.

Lance-Corp. Robert Haddow, who enlisted here with B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, on the first of February, 1915, and who went overseas with Major Medd's Squadron is officially reported wounded. Before enlisting Lance-Corp. Haddow was a member of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, C.E.F. He was born in Scotland and his next-of-kin is his father, Robert Haddow, New Milne, Scotland.

PTE. JOHN HEAD.

Pte. John Head, who enlisted here in October, 1915, with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, and went overseas with that unit, has been wounded in the recent fighting. Pte. Head was a member of A Company of the 93rd and was transferred in the first draft to the 5th C.M.R. His relatives now live in Toronto.

PTE. W. A. LEAN.

Pte. W. A. Lean, a member of the Apsley platoon of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded. Pte. Lean enlisted in the Peterborough County unit just before Christmas, 1915, and went overseas as a member of C Company, under Capt. Bygott.

Mrs. Ringer, Aylmer street, received word last night that her husband, Sergt. A. Ringer, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was badly wounded in France, is in Halifax, on his way home.

Mrs. J. M. Luther has received a message from Halifax to the effect that her husband, Pte. J. M. Luther, of the 93rd Battalion, has arrived at Halifax.

Mrs. Mongoul received word this morning that her son, Private Chas. Mongoul, who enlisted with the first contingent, arrived at Halifax safely.

Mrs. Robert McIntyre of Keene and mother of Lance-Corp. Geo. McIntyre, No. 195150, of the 93rd Battalion, just received an official cable that her son, who was so badly wounded from gun shot wounds, is no longer seriously ill.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Having read the report on vegetable production at the Children's Shelter, I should like, through the medium of your valuable paper, to offer a word of praise to the matron for her untiring efforts, which have enabled the society to publish such a satisfactory report. She is a credit to the city of Peterborough. The matron is a good mother to the children under her care, and some gardener on top of that. I have seen the lady in question working in the garden all hours of the day, and I feel sure every credit is due to her for the success achieved. Thanking you in anticipation, —I remain, yours sincerely. Uno.

Peterborough, Nov. 15, 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I attended the meeting at the Armouries last evening, and was rather at sea as to who called the meeting. Was it Mr. Burnham who made the arrangements for it, or was it the Conservative Executive?

Mr. Moore, the President of the Association, presided. Now, it took to me that Mr. Burnham is not for getting politics. He claims to be in sympathy with the Union Government, yet he has prominent workers of the Conservative party affiliated with him in his campaign. I think it would make Mr. Burnham a stronger man at this time with all parties if he would keep away from all political associations. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.—Yours, etc.,

A Union Supporter.

Peterborough, Nov. 15, 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I would like to correct a statement in your paper of the 13th inst. The man from Belleville who the Chief says identified me, never saw me in his life before. Chief Thompson sent Detective Meagher over with the taxi for me.

In regard to the Western man, Mr. Gilleenie said he was not the man. In regard to the costs, the statement in your paper was not correct.—Yours,

Wm. Quinn.

15th November, 1917.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—In Mr. Burnham's address at the Armouries last night he stated that he had taken the only position open to him and that he had been willing to co-operate with the Liberals of this constituency in the interests of union here.

The facts are as follows: Mr. Burnham was selected as a straight Conservative candidate at a Conservative Convention over a year before Union Government was thought of. When the Union Government was formed the only proper course for Mr. Burnham to take was to resign as the Conservative candidate and thus clear the way for a Union Convention in accordance with the action of party leaders on both sides and the spirit of the country. Did Mr. Burnham take this patriotic course? He certainly did not. Instead of this he stubbornly took the position that he was the Union candidate and endorsed as such by the Conservative executive here and Sir Robert Borden at Ottawa. As a matter of fact Mr. Burnham was never endorsed by the Conservative executive, as he was later forced to acknowledge, and at the meeting last night it would appear that the President of the Conservative Association is the only member of the executive prepared to back him up in his present attitude. Sir Robert Borden has also plainly stated in a telegram to five prominent Conservatives here that he will endorse as the Government candidate the man selected at a Union Convention. If Sir Robert Borden is true to his word this cut Mr. Burnham out absolutely.

The truth is that all efforts towards co-operation and unify in this constituency have been blocked by Mr. Burnham's stubborn, selfish, unpatriotic attitudes. His total disregard for the feelings of either friends or enemies, and his open hostility toward public opinion as manifested here, smacks all together too much of the Prussianism that we are fighting against. We want no Kaiser to reign over us in West Peterborough.

A Union Convention will be held at Victoria Hall to-morrow night, and all men and women who believe that in order to successfully overcome a common foe who is as yet unbeaten, all parties and classes should stand united are earnestly urged to attend.

Yours truly,

JOSEPH WEARING.

AMERICAN PLANES TO FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Nov. 15. — Before the war is over America will be delivering its airplanes at the front in Europe by having them fly across the Atlantic in flocks, is the opinion of Caproni, the famous Italian inventor of the big machine of that name.

August C. Post, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, returned here on an American liner to-day and told of Caproni expressing this opinion to him in Paris. Caproni said he expected one of his machines to cross the Atlantic before long, and that flights of squadrons across the ocean would become common later.

LEG AMPUTATED AFTER A FRACTURE

Mr. Archie Fletcher, formerly of Peterborough, met with an accident in Victoria, B. C., recently, the result of which was the amputation of one leg below the knee. He had fallen on the sidewalk, causing a fracture, and due to other conditions, it was found necessary to amputate.

Face Peeling Habit Becoming Fashionable

Women of fashion and refinement in this country as in Europe seem to have been acquiring the mercolized wax habit, depending less and less upon cosmetics for their complexion difficulties. It does seem a lot saner to just peel off the worn-out skin when it loses its youthful color and appearance—now that this can be done so easily, safely, painlessly and economically.

There's no trouble getting mercolized wax at any drug store (an ounce will do), since its virtues have become generally known here, and there's no trouble using it—just as you use cold cream, applying at night, washing it off next morning. The wax takes off the old scarf skin, in tiny flakes, a little each day. This new under-skin which gradually appears, is velvety soft and beautifully white, radiant with girlish loveliness. Any surface trouble like chaps, pimples, red or yellow patches, freckles, etc., vanishes of course with the discarded cuticle.

Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Robert George Northcott, a "C" man, was exempted until his class is called.

Ernest Dickson Adamson, an "A2" man, together with his father, works 150 acres of land in North Monaghan. Two sisters reside at home.

"Are they young or old?" enquired Judge Huycke.

"I would not call them young," replied the applicant.

"Do they do any work on the farm?"

"No; they are not strong enough.

"They may have to do it before another year," replied Judge Huycke.

Further examination revealed the fact that a brother is a high school teacher in Whitby.

"Your brother in Whitby should go," said Judge Huycke.

The applicant was exempted, providing he stays on the farm.

WOULD NOT CHANGE

Mr. Hatherly, of Keene, appeared before the Board with the request that his two sons, Wm. and James Hatherly, be permitted to appear before the Keene tribunal as it was more convenient.

The request was refused, and the Hatherly brothers must appear before tribunal No. 275.

EXEMPTION DISALLOWED.

Robert Hopwood, an "A2" man, claimed to be the sole support of a widowed mother. The applicant also claimed to be afflicted at times with a throat and nasal trouble. One sister is employed in a Peterboro drug store. The mother resides in the country.

The applicant said that he gave his mother between thirty and forty dollars a month.

Lt.-Col. Clegg thought that his mother would be as well off financially if Hopwood was in the service.

"You will also have the satisfaction of doing your duty," pointed out Mr. Dumble.

The exemption was disallowed.

TRIED TO ENLIST.

John D. McIsaac, 605 Rubidge St., an "A2" man, claimed to be the sole support of a father and mother. His father is a carpenter earning 50c an hour. Applicant was an only child, and earns 54c an hour in the Canadian General Electric Co. Applicant tried to enlist before but he was under age.

The exemption was disallowed.

WAS DISALLOWED.

James Patrick Butler, another "A 2" man, claimed exemption on the grounds that he was the sole support of an invalid father. Applicant was one of nine children. One brother is studying for the priesthood; another is a shell inspector, and a younger brother is also earning a small amount. One sister is also a wage earner.

Applicant tried to enlist on two occasions but was turned down.

The exemption was disallowed.

Butler wanted to know if he could enlist right away without waiting for the draft.

The board could not give a definite answer to this question but the applicant's desire will not be lost sight of if the military representative can facilitate matters.

EXEMPTION ALLOWED.

Stanley Robert Lockhart, an "A2" man, claims to be the sole support of a widowed mother, several sisters and one young brother. The applicant is employed at the Henry Hope Company. Lockhart's exemption was requested by the company.

The exemption was allowed until Class 2 is called up.

QUESTION OF NATIONALITY.

Cecil B. Ryan, another employee of the Henry Hope factory, with an "A2" medical sheet, claimed exemption on account of the physical condition of his mother. Ryan's stepfather resides in the west.

The company put in a claim for Ryan's exemption. Ryan's parents were naturalized American citizens, and the applicant was born in Michigan.

Judgment was reserved in order to give the military representative an opportunity of taking the matter up with the American consul with a view of deciding whether the United States or Canada should claim Ryan's services.

WILL APPEAL.

John Clancy, who at his own request was sent up for further medical examination, returned with his medical sheet still marked "A2."

The exemption was disallowed

Clancy intimated that he would appeal the case.

Gordon Portsmith, an "A2" man, who claimed to be the sole support of a widowed mother, was exempted until July 1st. Portsmith has two brothers at the front.

ONE MUST GO.

Charles Stewart Brown and Allan Templeton Brown are two brothers residing on a one-hundred-acre farm in Douro. The father of the two boys made a strong plea for his two sons, claiming that he, himself, was unable to do much work, owing to his physical condition.

"One of these boys must go and do his share," said Judge Huycke. The two boys were given until next Saturday to decide which of them shall go.

TEMPORARY EXEMPTION.

Edward Fitzgerald, a surveyor for the Canadian Northern Railway, who appeared yesterday before the tribunal, was exempted for six months, and not totally exempted as was stated yesterday.

Francis Roland Sanderson, 146 Park street, was instructed to appear at Tribunal Number 276.

EXEMPTION GRANTED.

Donald Porter Dickson claimed to be the only son on a one-hundred acre dairy farm, Applicant sought exemption on the grounds that his services on the farm were of national importance. Dickson was exempted so long as he continues to work on the farm. The applicant was refused permission to peddle milk in the city.

"An unfit man could peddle milk," observed Lieut.-Col. Clegg.

A DIFFICULT CASE.

Andrew Brotherstone, Concession street, with two brothers in the service, is employed as a marine engineer on the steamer Naiad. A fourth brother is an engineer on the steamer Rainbow.

The Court found this a difficult case to deal with, especially as Brotherstone has two brothers overseas. Judgment was reserved.

EXEMPTION GRANTED.

Walter Garbutt, a farmer in Douro Township, applied for exemption on similar grounds. The exemption was granted, providing Garbutt continues to be employed on the farm.

William Quinlan was instructed to appear before Tribunal Number 276.

TRIBUNAL No. 276
CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS
W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members
Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

Mr. Aylmer Gets a Volunteer.

Self-conscious and unaccustomed to the presence of tribunals, a young man named Gunn entered the Council Chamber this morning and stood bashfully just inside the door. He hesitated which way to move, and simply remained standing, although many of the benches were empty. When he was called before the Board he explained that he could neither read nor write, neither could his parents. He has been working at the Bonner-Worth Factory, and, although only nineteen years old, said he was sent down to ascertain whether he came within the first category.

"How do you spell your name?" enquired Mr. Moore.

"G-u-double-n," replied the youth.

"We want guns for the army," said Mr. Moore.

Gunn said he was nineteen years old, but knew nothing about the Military Act.

"My father can't write, and my mother can't read," he stated.

"You must have come from a good school section," commented Mr. Moore.

"From Aurora, north of Toronto," replied Gunn.

He said he was only nineteen years old, so his mother told him.

To Mr. Aylmer, Gunn said if he was needed he was willing to go over. He didn't know much about the new regulations.

Mr. Aylmer—"Why don't you volunteer?"

"I'd rather volunteer any day than work," he replied.

Mr. Aylmer—"You can enlist now if you wish."

"Alright," the young man replied, and strode from the room to Chief Thompson's office, where Mr. Aylmer arranged for Gunn's examination.

He tried to enlist two years ago, but was rejected then because he was too young.

Will Appeal Decision.

Francis Roland Sanderson, 146 Park Street, employed at the C.G.E. works as "hitcher on the crane," applied for exemption on the ground of ill-health. He was married on September 26. The doctors, he said, hadn't discovered the ailment which he considered made him unfit.

Exemption disallowed.

Mr. Sanderson departed with an application for appeal.

Was With Metal Products Co.

George Arthur McElwain, 145 Rubidge Street, had been working with the Metal Products Company, but recently was engaged as a brakesman with the G.T.R. at Lindsay. He hasn't yet drawn his first pay.

He sought exemption as the sole support of his mother.

Exemption disallowed.

Claims Ill-Health.

William Bernard Quinlan, 913 Water Street, came to Peterborough from Toronto on Labour Day, and secured a position as a wool spinner at the Auburn Mills. The Medical Board placed him in Category "A2," but he sought exemption on the ground of ill-health, stating that he had not fully recovered from anemia and pneumonia.

Exemption disallowed.

Will Be Examined Again.

Herbert L. Simpson, 479 Bolivar Street, was rated "A2" by the Medical Board, but applied for exemption on the ground of infirmity. He said he had a "bad leg," and his nerves troubled him.

He alleged that the doctors hadn't given him a fair examination.

To Mr. Aylmer he admitted that he told the doctors nothing.

"But you were interested," Mr. Aylmer remarked.

"Yes, but I thought I'd wait until I found out their decision."

Mr. Aylmer—"If you were going before your own doctor you would tell him everything about your condition."

Brothers in English Army.

Alfred Walter Eccles, 168 Stewart Street, has two brothers in the English Army, and was himself rejected, after which he came to Canada. He is a lathe hand at the Henry Hope Factory, has one other married brother, and stated that he was the sole support of his widowed mother.

Decision reserved.

Claim is Allowed.

Since going to press with yesterday's issue, the medical category of J. L. Adams has been changed from A2 to B2, and exemption is allowed on that ground.

Works Ennismore Farm.

"I have the best 145 acres in Ennismore, and I'm working it myself," said James Joseph Crough, R.R. No. 2, Ennismore. "I had a man help me for a couple of weeks with the plowing, and have nearly one hundred acres finished. I have the place rented, and have been on it six years. My sister keeps house for me. It's the land John O'Reilly used to own, south of the 'Cross'."

"How did you take in the crop," Mr. Moore asked.

"My two sisters helped me."

Mr. Crough is the son of T. H. G. Crough, who lives about two miles from him.

Mr. Moore—"Your father is known as 'Irish Tim'."

"That's him."

Mr. Aylmer—"I guess your the kind of men we need at home."

"I'm sorry," Mr. Moore laughed. "You look as if you'd make a good soldier."

"And he's Irish too," added Mr. Aylmer. "There are few better fighters."

Mr. Crough was informed that he was exempted as long as he remained a farmer.

"I guess that will be always," he answered. "I'm not cut out for anything else, and I've been at it since I was nine."

Charles G. Kingan wrote that he had served as a shell-maker, where he had tried to do his bit. The Board decided that there was greater need for him in the army, and his petition was refused.

Company Made Claim for Him.

Mr. W. A. Richardson, of the Peterborough Canoe Company, stated that he was asking for the exemption of only one of their employees, Thos. Taylor, 558 Chamberlain St., who, it was stated, was especially valuable in the work of canoe building.

Exemption was refused.

Conditional Exemption.

Mr. A. L. Young, general manager of the Henry Hope Company, supported the claim of Linden D. McIntosh, 14 Brown Street, for exemption. The request was granted so long as McIntosh is employed as a tool maker at the munitions plant.

Placed in Class 2.

Arthur Farr, 94 Stewart Street, and A. L. Lightheart, 221 Rink Street have been transferred to the second class on similar domestic grounds. In each case there has been patriotic sacrifice that probably influenced the Tribunal.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE ARRESTED UNDER M. S. ACT.

Harold Morris of Ottawa Says It Has No Right to Make Him a Soldier.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 14.—Harold Morris, 31 years of age, and an employee of the Lands Patent branch of the Interior Department, is the first resident of the capital to be charged with unlawful desertion under the Military Service Act.

He appeared in the Police Court this morning in a non-penitent mood. He was remanded for a week. When arrested last night Morris vehemently declared that the Government had no right to decide whether or not he should become a soldier.

Reprisal Bill Is Adopted

Canadian Press Despatch:

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 15. — The Chamber of Deputies has adopted the bill for reprisals against the Germans as amended by the Senate. The Government is authorized to proclaim a state of siege, wherever necessary, to cancel contracts for public works with Germans, to annul any other contracts prejudical to national defence to prohibit international commerce with Germans, to intern enemy suspects and to revise land concessions to colonists.

The Chamber adopted on its first reading a bill providing for sending a military mission to England or the United States.

SITUATION IN PARIS INDEFINITE

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The situation growing out of the resignation of the Painleve Ministry is as yet most indefinite. M. Clemenceau is still the favourite for the Premiership, with even betting that the former Premier will be re-appointed.

To the Electors of West Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM,

Peterborough, Nov. 10, 1917.

The Social Class will meet to-night at the Conservatory.

Miss Mary Traill, Brantford, is visiting Miss Collins, McDonnel street.

Mr. Frank Degen is in Kitchener, Ont., visiting his brother, who recently underwent an operation and is improving. Mr. Degen will return to the city Saturday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Burnham have gone to Toronto to visit relatives. Mr. Burnham will return on Saturday.

Mrs. M. Kelleher and Mrs. N. Tobin were the hostesses yesterday at the weekly tea given by St. Peter's Patriotic Club. The tea was one of the most successful yet held by that society. The colour scheme of the afternoon was carried out in the decorations of the table, the shaded lights and costumes of the ladies, who wore white dresses and pink caps and aprons. Large bunches of chrysanthemums added to the artistic decorations. Mrs. J. D. Fitzpatrick, who poured tea, was assisted by Misses Lajoie and Wolfe. Vocal selections by Miss Maud Leahy were greatly enjoyed by the large number who came in to tea.

Mrs. (Capt.) W. H. Blanchard is down from Toronto for a few days, visiting friends in the city.

Mrs. T. J. Taylor, of Medicine Hat, and Master Murray Taylor, arrived in the city last night for a visit, and are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Edwards, "The Highlands," Warsaw Road, Douro.

THE EVIL GENIUSES OF RUSSIA RIDING TO THEIR FALL — On the reader's left is Nikulai, leader of the Bolsheviki, who was Premier of the Maximalists revolutionaries. On the right is Leon Trotzky, Lenine's chief lieutenant, who a few months ago was a $12 a week reporter on an East Side newspaper in New York. Late news from Russia indicates a revolution of feeling against these two men, and a return to power of Kerensky and the Provisional Government.

$36,811,475 Is To-day's Total Of The Loan

ONTARIO HAS BIG LEAD IN LOAN SUBSCRIPTION

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 15.—It was announced at headquarters of the Publicity Committee of the Victory Loan Campaign here to-day, that the total amount reported subscribed from the various centres all over the Dominion approximate $36,811,475. The three-days' total for Ontario is $24,962,000.

Peterborough's subscription to the Victory Loan reached $246,550 after after yesterday's results had been compiled. The figures for the first three days of the local work are as follows:

Monday	$103,500
Tuesday	58,100
Wednesday	84,950
	$246,550

These are regarded as very satisfactory, and the large number of small subscriptions is particularly an evidence that the entire public desires to contribute to his Victory Loan.

Charged With Keeping Purse He Had Found

Benjamin Roddy, an automobile truck driver, pleaded not guilty in police court this morning to a charge of keeping a purse he had found. It belonged to Mrs. Ethel Eakins, of Millbrook, who drove in from Monaghan on October 31st and afterwards went to the Grand Trunk station to go home. The handbag contained $10.50, a letter from France, pair of gloves and the many little articles of feminine favour and service. Mrs. Eakins advertised her loss in the Examiner and a witness of the finding of the satchel wrote to this office giving the information which the police effectively used.

Messrs. Harry Rush and Frank Adams, who are the dispensers of justice in the absence of Mr. Dumble, adjourned the hearing until this afternoon to enable him to call an important witness. He stated that he hadn't seen the advertisement.

WEDDING BELLS

CONDON—McDONALD.

The marriage took place yesterday morning at 6 o'clock, at the Church of the Sacred Heart of Miss Mary Irene McDonald, daughter of Mrs. McDonald, 259 Perry street, to Mr. Edward Joseph Condon, son of Mr. John Condon, 273 William street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father McAuley of Ennismore, assisted by the Rev. Father John O'Brien.

The couple were attended by Mr. James Condon, brother of the groom, and Miss Martha McCarney. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, after which Mr. and Mrs. Condon left on the 8.10 train for Toronto and Niagara Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Condon will reside in Peterborough.

MONCRIEF—DOBBIN.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Robert Dobbin, North Monaghan, when his daughter, Miss Leona Jane Dobbin, was united in marriage to Mr. Sidney Earl Moncrief. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Trinity Methodist church, in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride was supported by Miss L. J. Dobbin, while the groom was assisted by Mr. Norman Moncrief. A large number of presents were received.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARGARET J. KETCHUM.

The news of the death at Newcastle, Ont., on Tuesday, Nov. 13th, of Margaret Jane Ketchum, widow of Jay Ketchum, late Junior Judge of Northumberland and Durham, and eldest daughter of the late Rev. John Davidson, of Colborne, will be received with deep regret in Peterborough, where Mrs. Ketchum had many friends. She was a sister of Rev. Canon Davidson, Rector of St. John's Church, and of Mr. N. F. Davidson, K.C., of Toronto, who was to have spoken here to-night in the interests of the victory Loan. Mrs. Ketchum lived in Peterborough for a long period and had many friends here who will be grieved to learn of her death. She is survived by five sons, three of whom are on active service overseas.

GIANT DIRIGIBLES GUARD ENGLAND'S COAST FROM ENEMY AIR ATTACKS—This massive dirigible balloon is but one of the great number of similar craft guarding the coasts of Great Britain from air attacks by Zeppelins and German aeroplanes. Anti-aircraft guns and big naval guns mounted on railroad cars for greater mobility at English coast towns have done good work in repelling air attacks, but Britain's aircraft similar to that used by the raiders, have also been found extremely effective. The big dirigible shown in this British official photograph is being towed into its shed. The photo was taken from the air watch tower on the shed.

Word was received this afternoon from Kingston that nine Peterborough returned soldiers will arrive home on the 5.30 G.T.R. train this evening. They will be tendered a civic reception.

C. G. E. Employees Have Surprised The Loan Workers

With subscriptions ranging from $50 to $2,000, the Victory Loan workers had a big day among the C.G.E. employees yesterday. The total from the shop was about $10,000, and only a section of the staff was interviewed. All the employees of the draughting department even to the last girl, took one or more bonds apiece. That's the C.G.E. spirit.

The General Electric Company in Schnectady contributed $1,500,000 to Uncle Sam's wonderful Liberty Loan, and it is believed by the local committee that the Canadian General Electric Company will do just as well in proportion to their numbers.

A man of German descent got his name on the honour list of subscribers when he took a share of the Loan. And so it goes.

C.G.E. WIN TWO FROM PRINTERS

Last night in a five-pin league fixture the C.G.E. team won two of the three games from the Printers. The Printers were badly handicapped by the absence of three players, while the C.G.E. were one player short. Seaton, for the C.G.E. was high man for the night with a 500 total and high single of 246 in the first game. Henderson was high for the Printers with a 485 total.

To-night the EKO Club and the Centrals meet, and a fast game is anticipated.

NO MARGARINE FOR SOME WEEKS YET

Likely to Be December 1 Before It Is Put On Sale.

No margarine yet on the market and none is likely to be released before the first of December, say the dealers. The Food Controller and his department are busy sorting out licenses and deciding who shall have what brand and why. Meanwhile no licenses are to be issued until all applications are in and filed, in order that no dealer shall have will be no margarine manufactured in Canada, it is stated, for apart from the fact that an up-to-date factory would be a poor investment under the present uncertain conditions, the consideration that duty is charged on the ingredients used in the manufacture and not on the finished article, would immediately put the Canadian made produce out of competition with the American.

At a meeting of the Food Controller and representatives of the dairy and produce trade held last week in Ottawa, the regulations were thoroughly discussed. A resolution was passed asking that colored margarine be permitted, as the uncoloured is not sufficiently pleasing to the eye to sell readily. Some uncoloured margarine will be fairly rich in colour, but that made from the purest oils will be almost white. A second desolution was passed asking that margarine be sold only in the original manufacturer's packages in order to avoid fraud.

THE SUBMARINE IS A BAD FAILURE CLAIMS BRITISH WAR EXPERT

War Authority Says That Its Defeat Outweighs All Reverses

LOSSES ARE LESS THAN WRECK TOLL

Britain Could Rebuild Year's Sinkings in Eight Months

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Arthur Pollen, the famous British war expert, has made the following statement to The Associated Press on the submarine war and the various political crises in Europe:

"Anything unsatisfactory in the military and political situation in Europe is balanced by the extraordinary news that the German submarine campaign has broken down altogether. The submarine is defeated. This is the most momentous event since the United States declared war. It means that we can all stay in, and that America can really come in. Six months ago shipping was being destroyed, according to some authorities, at a rate of nine million tons per annum. Had this loss continued, the Germans had the right to expect, not indeed military victory, but a peace that would mean something much less than defeat. This was Germany's only hope, and it was the Allies' only anxiety. For every one, including the German higher command, knew that with sea communication reasonably safe, the military defeat of the German army was certain.

Less Than Wreck Toll.

"In the first fortnight of November, the rate of loss of British tonnage of ships greater than 1,600 tons each, has fallen to about one million tons a year. The present shipbuilding capacity of Great Britain alone can make this loss good in less than eight months. At the rate America, Great Britain, and Japan are striving to attain, we should replace this loss in less than eight weeks. The rate of loss for last week is actually less than the annual toll of wrecks in peace time. It is an amazing development. It is not to be expected that losses can remain as low as this. They must fluctuate up and down. But they will never cause us uneasiness again.

Reverses Trivial.

"Compared to this Germany's recent successes against Russia and Italy, and the jolt these have given to allied morale—which we see reflected in the discussions on Premier Lloyd-George's speech — are really trivial incidents. Whether the Italians hold the Piave, the Drenta, or the Adige; whether it takes Kerensky and the forces that are making for ordered government in Russia a week, two weeks, or a month to pull that distracted country together; whether the House of Commons on Monday forgives the British Premier's blazing brutality or resents it; are all, compared with the change in the position at sea, quite unimportant. Now that the means required for victory are assured no dispute as to the best way of using them can do worse than slightly delay the issue. Germany can never make a separate peace with Russia, and must always maintain a great army on the eastern front.

Strike at Austria.

"It is unbelievable that the demoralisation of a part of the Italian army spread to the whole. The German and Austrian invasion of Italy amounts really to an extension of their western front. For the first time France and Britain and America will be able to strike at Austria as well as at Germany. This will not ultimately be a military advantage to the enemy. It may indeed be his ruin. In Britain it is certain that sober councils will prevail. It is to the last degree improbable that any excited or hysterical defeat of Mr. Lloyd-George in Parliament will take place. In face of the revindication of sea power, the greatest war achievement of the British, American and Allied Navies in the last three and a half years, we may be sure that there will be a reaction of optimism. For Germany's defeat at sea is final, universal, and permanent, whereas Germany's successes on land are local, partial, and temporary."

CATTLE MARKET

There was no more life to the market yesterday than there has been since Tuesday, cattle shipments being very light and trading slow. Canners were slightly easier, selling in some cases for $5 per cwt.

Those who prophesied a steady decline of hogs a few weeks ago have certainly up to date not had their predictions fulfilled, for the porkers have advanced in leaps and bounds this week, closing at $17.75 fed and watered.

Lambs sold at Wednesday's price in most instances, although a few fetched another ten cents, going at $16.50. It was even asserted that a lot of porkers had sold for $17.90, a very probable price in the future.

There is a fair demand for breeding ewes these days, and a few sows also sold at fair prices.

Dear Mary:

Well, even I must buy more furniture, blankets and comforters. The doctor told me that it is more healthful to sleep apart, so James and Ruth are each to have a room. I'm going to let Ruth have my bedroom set and get me a new one which is modern.

I'm going to get two single beds for our room and single beds for the children. They use less space and are easier "made."

Mustn't you do something like this soon?

As ever—HELEN.

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WAR WONDERS PERFORMED BY ARMY DOCTORS

Medical Progress in This War Transcends All Previous Work

WAR SURGERY DOES MIRACLES

But the Greatest Wonder is the Cheerfulness of the Patients

Two facts have increasingly differentiated the present from all previous great wars; they are the very small mortality (through disease) among the forces engaged and the very small mortality among the wounded who are not immediately morally injured, writes a medical correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. Between them these two features of the war must have spared in our own forces alone many hundreds of thousands of lives as compared with the standard of all past wars. In fact, it is probably no exaggeration to say that by this time neither side would have been in a position to continue the war had it not been for the advance of medical science and surgical skill.

In the triumph of medicine the two great weapons have been sanitation and prophylactic inoculation. In a scene of unparalleled confusion and destruction and in an area of quite primitive sanitation the untiring exertions of medical officers and the intelligent co-operation of the men have resulted in an astonishing degree of sanitary efficiency. Refuse has been destroyed or deeply buried; battlefields in many cases have been cleaned up within a few days; pure water supplies have been provided. Everywhere behind the immediate front order and cleanliness have been the rule. The rule of the R.A.M.C. officer has not always been welcomed by the inhabitants, but it has worked and with magnificent success. Camps which in previous wars would have been death-traps, have had as low a mortality rate as the most approved health resort. The work of the battalion medical officer is not showy, it is often monotonous, but it has been invaluable, and has probably saved more lives than all the other medical work of the war.

Preventive Inoculation.

With the other weapon, preventive inoculation, medicine has scored an equal and more resounding success. Only the student of the history of warfare can properly be astonished at the history of this war. In the past typhoid and dysentery have scourged both sides impartially; in every European war to such an extent that the human killing was put in the shade by the slaughter of disease. In this war, while the mechanisms for killing by human agency have outstripped everything previously conceivable, the typhoid and dysentery groups have claimed a quite negligible toll of victims except in a few unfortunate circumstances such as those in Gallipoli. Not only have typhoid and bacillary dysentery been robbed of their epidemic terrors, but our troops have been successfully guarded in the East against plague and cholera. The case for preventive use for vaccines is closed; it rests for all time on incontrovertible bases.

Surgery' Advances.

On the other hand, it seemed at first as though the sister art of the surgeon was to have but poor success. Wounds were of an average gravity altogether beyond that expected from the experience of the South African War, and unlike them they proved to be almost in every case heavily infected with organisms from the cultivated soil on which the fighting took place. Severe suppuration was universal, tetanus and gas-gangrene were almost epidemic among the wounded, and while the fate of those with penetrating wounds of the body was almost assured, many died of comparatively trivial injuries for lack of early and adequate treatment. The medical forces did wonderfully and gallantly, but quite inadequate and unprepared in pitals by surgical specialists.

This picture of the fate of the wounded, painfully true of the first months of the war, has now been altered almost beyond recognition.

PRESS ON JAPANESE-AMERICAN AGREEMENT

"Results of the Mission."

Providence Journal: "The announcement that Japan and the United States have reached a 'complete agreement' in regard to China and a 'clear understanding' as to military, naval and economic co-operation in the war testifies to substantial results from the visit of the Japanese Mission."

"Of the Utmost Significance."

Baltimore American: "In the entire history of the war there has been no other single event of wider compass than the agreement that has been signed between the United States and Japan. Such an instrument, framed during the progress of strife, is not of itself so singular. But that it should have been effected as a direct and emphatic blow to the finely webbed schemes of the Germans to disseminate distrust between the United States and its commercial associates in the Far East is something of the utmost significance."

"A Blow to Prussian Hopes."

Pittsburg Gazette Times: "German intrigue has been as represented in fomenting ill feeling between the United States and Japan then this new understanding has been a blow to Prussian hopes equivalent to the loss of a great battle in the field. All possibility of Japan leaguing itself with Germany is gone forever."

Sunday School Lesson Questions

NOVEMBER 18, 1917.

Nehemiah's Prayer Answered.—Nehemiah 2: 1-11.

Golden Text: Ask and it shall be given you.—Matt. 7: 7.

1. Verse 1—Nehemiah naturally felt sad, but did he show his sadness in his face on purpose to attract the attenion of the king, and would you say that this was a part of God's answer to his prayer? Give your reasons.

2. Nehemiah intimates that it had been his habit to be cheerful before the king, and thus hide any sadness he might feel: Why is it folly for us to go about with sad faces, when no good can be accomplished by it?

3. Verse 2—The fall of an apple suggested the law of gravitation, and here the sadness of a man's face puts in motion the great work of building the walls of Jerusalem: Which means does God more frequently use in carrying on his work in the world, so called trivial things or great things? Give your reasons.

4. Verse 3—Should the burden of progress in the church, or in the state, rest upon the heart and mind of all the people, or upon the leaders only, and why?

5. When we have an important favour to ask of a great man, how much depends upon the words we use, and the manner in which we approach him?

6. What qualities did Nehemiah show, which may be worthy of our imitation, in his request to King Artaxerxes?

7. Verse 4—The answer to Nehemiah's long prayer was developing nicely, but the position looked critical, and Nehemiah offered up to God an instantaneous and earnest prayer: What lesson is there in that for us?

8. Which is the better, and why, having offered to God prayer for help and guidance in a certain thing, to gratefully thank Him for having heard us, and then to go on taking it for granted that our case is safe; or to keep praying until the thing has actually been accomplished?

9. Verse 5—To what extent is our work in life hindered, or helped, by doing daring things, pushing on with courage in face of great difficulties?

10. Verse 5—Which class of good people, as a rule, do the best work in life—the timid and cautious or the bold and fearless; and why?

11. Why is it impossible, or not, for a man of prayer and faith to fail in any work he may be led to undertake?

12. What is the measure of our obligation to keep up the monuments or graves of our ancestors, and what good purpose do we serve when we do so?

13. Verse 6—How much did Nehemiah's prayer and God have to do with the willingness of the king in granting Nehemiah's request?

14. If Nehemiah had made this request of the king, without his long and earnest prayer to God to move the heart of the king, what would probably have been the result?

15. How long was Nehemiah absent at Jerusalem? (See chap. 5: 14.)

16. Verses 7, 8—When God promises to help us in our work, is the promise contingent, or not, upon our planning and doing things with the same care as if we had no help from God? Why?

17. Verses 7, 8—Will God ever help a man, or not, and why, who does not do all he possibly can to help himself?

18. Verse 9—Why would you say, or not, that the king, in sending a little army with Nehemiah, was inspired to do so by God?

19. Verses 10, 11—Why is it that certain men are always annoyed in proportion as the work of God flourishes?

Bovril saves life of Shackleton's Men

SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON wrote :—

"When the Endurance sank in the Weddell Sea, we had to seek refuge on the shifting ice. Most of the stores had to be scrapped, as the avoidance of weight was of great importance. It was then that the Bovril rations were of such splendid help. During our five and a-half months' drift on the floe, the Bovril rations formed one of the staple diets; and after the ice broke up, and we took to the boats, they were our mainstay. I think it is not too much to say that without them, few, if any, of us would have survived."

The following is an extract from the published official cable relating to the party left on Elephant Island under Mr. Frank Wild:—

"When Sir Ernest left there were rations for six weeks; but, realising that rescue might be delayed long beyond that period, Wild determined to exercise most stringent economy.

"He decided to husband the Bovril ration, which was to form the staple sustenance. The stocks of tea and coffee having been exhausted months before, this was, too, the only form of hot beverage they possessed, and it was issued in this form once a day. Twice weekly it was given out to each man without water as a meal."

In spite of the increase in the cost of Beef (the raw material of Bovril) there has been no increase in the price of Bovril during the War.

Body-building powers of Bovril proved to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken

Moving Picture Censors.

The national board of review of motion pictures is made up entirely of unpaid workers, including a general committee of thirty-five members, self perpetuating, from which is selected an executive committee, which, in turn, elects members of the review committee. This latter committee is divided into sections, which attend from twenty-five to thirty picture reviews weekly. The general committee is a court of appeal for any pictures which may be held for further consideration. It was formed in 1909 and has always been gladly recognized by the manufacturers, exhibitors and producers. Last year it caused to be eliminated 46,900 feet of objectionable films. Among those on the general committee are: P. F. Jerome, business bureau of the international committee of Y. M. C. A.'s; Orlando F. Lewis, general secretary of Prison Association of New York; Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, general secretary of Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.—Film Fun.

Floating Drydocks.

Our largest floating dock is the Dewey, at the Olongapo naval station, in the Philippine Islands. Floating drydocks are so arranged as to lift a big battleship bodily from the water. When it is desired to dock a vessel the floating dock is sunk by admitting water to it, and the ship is floated over it. When the ship is in the proper place over the dock the water is pumped out, and it rises, lifting the ship with it. When it is desired to refloat the ship the dock is sunk again by admitting water, and the ship is hauled off. There are side walls to the dock which remain partly above water. In these are located the pumping machinery, and on them the docking gangs work. The Dewey is in three sections, of which the two small end sections lift the large central section and are themselves lifted by it.

Goethals Saw the Point.

Shortly after our war with Germany was started R. J. McBride of Beaumont was awarded a big contract for the construction of wooden ships for our government. The fact that McBride's firm had never engaged in shipbuilding promised to militate against his getting a contract, and the lack of practical experience was mentioned during his conference with General Goethals.

"Your firm has never constructed ships," said the general.

"No, sir."

"Well?" pressed the government's representative.

"General, you built the Panama canal," replied McBride.

"So they say," was the answer.

"Did you ever build a canal before?"

General Goethals saw the point

Carnations and Rats.

Not long ago the basement of a department store in San Diego, Cal., received a sudden influx of rats. Traps, however baited, tempted but few, and other methods of riddance tried seemed of little avail. About this time the janitor noticed that old carnations thrown into the rubbish disappeared overnight. He put two and two together and began baiting traps with carnations. Every trap added to the fatalities in the rodent kingdom.

The city health department then took it up and has been achieving very satisfactory results therefrom. The odor of the flower seems to attract rats from some considerable distance, the variation of color apparently making no difference.—American City.

How the Camera Man Fools Them.

The life of the camera man who takes the weekly news motion pictures is not always one of glory. When Mrs. Vanderrich, for instance, asks him to take a picture of her poodle when he wants permission to take pictures of her yacht he finds himself between two fires, notes the Popular Science Monthly. Either he must waste some precious film on the dog or he must refuse and be shown the quickest way back. One wise camera man, however, improvised a fake camera crank for such occasions. The crank arm fits loosely on the shaft of the film gear in the camera. When the poodle is going through his antics the turning arm slips on the shaft, and not a foot of film is exposed, although to all appearances a picture is being made.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked, and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Suphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Jack O'Lantern Salad.

Make a fruit salad of 3 oranges, 3 bananas, ¼ pound of white grapes, ½ pound of English walnuts and a few candied cherries. Pour mayonnaise over all and serve in orange cups. To make the orange cups cut small round pieces off the tops of large oranges, scoop out the pulp, cut three small holes in the side of the oranges, as you would in making the features of a Jack O'Lantern. Put two raisins in for the eyes and a candied cherry for the mouth; fill with the fruit salad, put the lids back on and serve on lettuce leaves. You then have little Jack O'Lanterns that add to the effectiveness of a hallowe'en dinner.

A Storm That Made a Record.

The most violent storm that ever ravaged England occurred Nov. 26 and 27, 1703. The loss in London alone was $10,000,000. Eight thousand people were drowned in the floods. Twelve warships, with more than 1,800 men on board, were lost. Trees were uprooted—1,700 of them in Kent. Eddystone lighthouse was destroyed, and Winstanley, its contriver, was killed with several others.

Matrimonial Amenities.

"The wife and I had a spat this morning. She remarked that she didn't get much of a man when she married me."

"Whew! And what did you say?"

"Oh, I agreed with her. I said if I'd been a high class man I wouldn't have picked her out.

Modesty.

Modesty is one of the sweetest and most desirable qualities one can possess, and yet too much modesty hinders advancement. When this quality is overdeveloped it antagonizes aggressiveness, without which no great success can be attained.

Sympathetic.

Chouteau—Oh, yes, a very good doctor.

"Well, I like a sympathetic doctor."

"Oh, well, he's sympathetic. He never makes me pay in advance."

Voice of the Turtle.

King Solomon in his song says: "The winter is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land."

BED LINEN A LA MODE.

Counterpanes and bolster and pillow shams are being developed in a variety of new materials and designs. Some are made up in fine corded gabardines, finished along the edge with wide scallops. A big bow of satin ribbon corresponding in colour to the decorations of the room is tacked in the centre of the shams and cover. In other instances, three initial monograms occupy this place of honour. In the latter cases, large eyelets are often embroidered around the edges, and coloured ribbon run through.

Heavier coverings are developed in fine white pique in broad ribs. The edges are turned back with wide hems mitred at the corners. In the centre of both cover and shams, large baskets filled with different coloured flowers are embroidered in heavy cross stitch. Stamped in cross-stitch pattern representing Mother Goose characters and animals, these last are particularly attractive for the youngster's room.

The woman who is fond of crocheting and has plenty of leisure, may make a very lovely linen set for her bed out of strips of heavy white linen sewed together with pieces of filet insertion and edged with lace. If more elaboration is desired, the linen may be embroidered in a fine running design.

Peach Ice Cream.

Scald one pint of milk in a double boiler; add two level tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed to a thin paste with a little cold milk, stir until slightly thickened, then cover and cook for twenty minutes, stirring occasionally. Beat together four eggs, two cupfuls of sugar and pinch of salt, stir in a little of the cooked milk, then turn all into the double boiler and stir until the custard thickens. Strain and set aside until cold. Pare, mash and rub through a colander sufficient peaches to give a little more than one pint of pulp and sweeten to taste. All this to the cold custard with one pint of rich cream, pour the mixture into a freezer and freeze until firm. Remove the dasher, pack down the cream with along spoon, replace the cover, fill up the tub with ice and salt and set aside for several hours to ripen.

GERMANY AND IRELAND.

How Huns Have Tried to Use Feelings of Unrest.

German love for the Irish was born of expediency.

The Imperial Government looked upon Ireland as a desirable base of operations and upon the Irish people as fitting mediums for the advancement of Germany's plans.

Bernstorff recommended intensive cultivation of the spirit of unrest exhibited by the Irish and to that end urged that money and influence be exerted by German emissaries in the United States as well as in Ireland.

Casement was gulled into taking action that cost him his life and with the exception of rioting, led by that body of irreconcilables which has ever afflicted Ireland, German plotting proved abortive.

German propaganda failed as regards Ireland and no wonder.

The professions of friendship and comradeship expressed at that time for Ireland by Germany was too palpably part of the German game.

The true German opinion of the Irish may be gathered from the following extract culled from the great German encyclopedia, the Conversations-Lexicon of Meyer:

"The character of the genuine Irish is a singular mixture of opposite traits; many of them, no doubt, developed by their unfortunate history. The main feature of the Irish is inconsistency and thoughtlessness, though they possess such characters as are compatible with these vices. The Irishman lacks reasoning power, perseverance, and self-control. He possesses a poetical faculty and a taste for art, music, and rhetoric. He is keen for knowledge, cunning, clever, and witty, although for the sake of deception he often pretends to be stupid and naive. But with all his intellectual powers he lacks profoundity. Superficial in his actions and thoughts, untrustworthy as a worker, lacking perseverance, and fickle, he is not equal to the performance of any great task in life and is incapable of attaining results commensurate with his spasmodic activity. Those who are not his relations or friends dare not trust him. The proverb seems true that when an Irishman is stabbed, another Irishman is always bound to drive the dagger in. Treason has always been a prominent feature in all Irish risings. Conscientiousness is conspicuously lacking in the Irishman, and he is not distinguished for his love of truth. Irritable as he is and inclined to quarrels and violence, he is fond, too, of amusement. Hospitable and extravagant, he forgets to provide for the future. Though often a victim of intemperance, he can put up with dearth when necessary, and is quite contented if he only has potatoes to eke out his life."

That would make good reading at the next meeting of professional German-Irish agitators who masquerade as Friends of Irish Freedom.

Crop Worth $930 an Acre.

Harvesting three crops of broom corn from one planting in a single season, the yield from each cutting being about one ton to the acre of broom corn, is what is being accomplished in one section of the lower Rio Grande Valley, Texas, this year.

The average price received for the brush, which is used in the manufacture of high-grade brooms, is $310 per ton, or a total of $930 per acre. In this region, which only a few years ago was a wilderness of mesquite trees and prickly pear, situated more than 100 miles from the nearest railroad outlet, there is being rapidly developed the greatest broom corn growing industry in the United States.

There is being grown there this season 40,000 acres of this product and the extremely high prices which dealers are paying for the brush are bringing fortunes to many farmers. The fact that the growing season is practically continuous throughout the twelve months of the year makes the possibilities of the industry unusually attractive.

The first planting is usually made in January, and as rapidly as one crop is matured it is cut and from the stubble there is quickly produced a second and third crop. All of the broom crop in the valley territory is grown by means of irrigation.

NO REDUCTION DUE IN PRICE OF SHOES

"What price did you pay for your shoes?"

"Eighteen dollars," was the quick response overheard in one of Toronto's popular shoe stores the other day. "That is simply shocking—almost a week's salary, and more than the average for girls," came the remark from the elder woman. They were nothing extraordinary either. Only a little higher than the ordinary run of shoe, but they were of the fine ivory kind, with a turn sole.

The manager felt it incumbent upon him to explain just a few of the difficulties which manufacturers are experiencing, which naturally affects the shoe merchant. Despite the rumour that ladies' shoes are going to decrease in price, he stated that the women could look for even higher prices in the spring. Kids are unusually scarce; those used in the best grade shoes have gone up 10 cents a foot. This is due to the fact of the great scarcity. India and Egypt and all those mountainous countries which are at war have had their trade completely cut off, with the result that South America is practically the only source where the American and Canadian markets can draw from.

As a result of the increased demand on the leather market through the advent of the United States into the war, the army work has become the big issue, and has resulted in a greater stiffening of prices for the civilian trade.

Owing to the increased prices, women who formerly purchased several pairs of shoes are only buying one now. Through this decrease in business the dealers have been necessitated keeping up the prices, and are not buying extensively on the markets.

From New York reports were heard that all the large houses had suffered poor sales through the fall, and were looking for a big rush in January, when higher prices can be looked for.

The majority of lines of women's shoes have already doubled in price, but no reduction is looked for, not even by the Canadian manufacturers.

The advertiser who is deceived as to newspaper circulation is not entitled to much sympathy."

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. Thos. McGonigal, 3432 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa.

POTATO CROP BREAKS RECORD.

Railroad Board Chairman Says It Is Half Again as Big as Last Year.

"The railroads are now moving what promises to be the biggest potato crop in the history of the country," Fairfax Harrison, chairman of the Railroads' War Board, said yesterday.

"This crop, which it is estimated will total approximately 453,000,000 bushels, or half again as much as last year, has been on the way since the middle of September. The movement of it will continue until about April 1.

"Reports received by the Commission on Car Service indicate that, even with intensive loading, more than 750,000 cars will be needed to handle the potato crop."

"Everyone said She could not live!"

—she was so severely burned," said Mrs. Archie Bruhm of West Northfield, N.S., of her little daughter, whose clothes caught fire while she was playing at a bon-fire.

"As soon as the accident occurred I spread Zam-Buk on cotton cloths and applied it to the burns. At first she suffered agonies, but soon Zam-Buk began to relieve her, and gradually it drew out all the pain and soreness. We persevered with the balm, and it completely healed the burns."

Although Zam-Buk is so splendid for such serious burns as this, it is just as necessary for the little burns which are of far more frequent occurrence—the burns sustained while ironing, opening the oven door, handling a stove lid, striking a match, or a scald from the kettle or boiling fat.

As soon as the injury is sustained smear on a little Zam-Buk. You will be amazed how quickly the pain disappears and healing begins. Every housekeeper should keep a box on hand for emergencies.

For cuts, bruises, sore lips, chapped hands and chilblains Zam-Buk is indispensable, and nothing can equal its healing power in cases of eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, ulcers, abscesses, bad legs, boils, pimples, old sores, blood-poisoning and piles. SHAPE OF THE HAND.

The Reason Our Fingers Are Not All of the Same Length.

There is no known reason why our fingers should be of different lengths today. In fact it is thought by some people that the hand would be stronger if the fingers were all of the same length, says the Book of Wonders. Certainly, however, the hands would not then be so beautiful and might not be so useful.

The human hand today is perhaps the most versatile thing in the world. You can do more things with the hand than with any other thing in the world. The probability is that the shape of the hand today and the length of the fingers are the result of the different things the human being has called upon the hand to do during man's development up to the present time.

We must go back to the time, however, when man walked on fours, for that is probably the real explanation. Originally man's fingers were of different lengths because all four footed animals had the same peculiarities. The shape and length of the toes and their arrangement were the ideal arrangement for giving the proper balance and support to the body and in moving about and in climbing produced the best toe hold.

WHERE THE MULE FAILS.

He Doesn't Relish a Battle When the Artillery Gets Active.

More nearly impervious to heat than any of the other domestic animals, including his own ancestry, the mule has played a prominent part in the development of our southern states. On the sugar plantations and in the cotton fields he is without a peer.

His traditional endurance renders him almost invaluable to the quartermaster's department of armies in the field, but the experienced artillery officer uses horses instead for handling artillery in action.

A mule doesn't enjoy a battle. He doesn't relish its excitement and its terror, that metamorphosis that changes men alternately into poltroons and demigods.

Under a sustained artillery fire a horse becomes unusually docile. He turns instinctively to his master as to a creature of higher power, and his very terror renders him gentle.

But the mule displays no such faith in humankind. In the turmoil of battle he suddenly becomes arbiter of his own acts, and he either bolts or balks. A mule disapproves all that he does not understand, and it is traditional that he is not amenable to reason.

White Sands.

The sands at Blackpool, in Lancashire, are said to be the whitest in the British isles. From Penzance to Land's End, on the coast of Cornwall, the sand on the seashore is very white, while in St. Mary's, one of the Scilly islands, the sand on the shore is exceedingly white and glistening. On the other hand, the sand about Plymouth is bluish gray in color, probably owing to the shells of mussels broken and mixed with it, and on the coasts of the North sea the sand of the seashore is yellowish brown or reddish.

Bacteria Long Lived.

How long some bacteria may live under proper conditions is brought out by M. W. Lyon, Jr., of George Washington university in a letter to Science. He tells of a culture of organisms of paratyphoid beta kept for more than ten years sealed in a test tube at Howard university, which, when transferred to another medium, produced the reactions that proved the bacteria to be alive and active.

ROYAL

THE JOCKEY OF DEATH

"The Jockey of Death" the world's greatest circus picture, a brand new copy with everything new but the name. This king of all sensational scenes, the escape of the heroine from the circus and the grip of the villian, the death plunge of man and beast over a roaring chasm 5000 feet high, fight to the death in mid-air, nerve racking, hair raising feats of skill, and daring never before attempted, performers who take their lives in their hands to make this attraction marvelous. One thousand performers take part in this gigantic production including two of the highest salaried circus performers in the world.

In addition to the above great picture we will show high-class Comedies, a Western Story and another episode of the Million Dollar Serial, making a program that should command an admission price of double what we ask. If you can attend our Matinees you would avoid the big crowds.

A COMPETITION

By Lieut. Roland Johnson

A French aeroplane of the fighting scout type, landed gracefully on an English aerodrome several miles behind the firing line. It "taxied" up to the sheds, and waited until an officer approached. The pilot, removing his flying helmet and goggles, showed a fine head of black curly hair, and flashing eager eyes.

"Bon jour, Monsieur," he said. "Have you any—what does one say—sparking plugs?"

"Oh yes," said the Englishman, examining the French machine. "But what a jolly little machine; what can you get out of her?"

The other with quick intuition, understood.

"A leetle—well enough to beat ze Hun!"

They laughed. "Yes, I should just say so!" said the Englishman.

Indeed the machine looked as if it was as fast as a meteor. Every turnbuckle wire and strut was carefully stream lined to offer the least wind resistance. The engine was colossal in that small machine.

For the moment sparking plugs were forgotten as they ran over the merits of the aeroplane. Despite the difficulty of speech they understood each other at once. For the airman's instinct was strong in both.

"I go," the Frenchman said with a delightful accent, "to meet the Huns. Will you accompany me?"

"I don't mind if I do!" said the other nonchalantly, though inwardly he was longing to try his favourite machine against this strange type.

"Good. You give me two sparking plugs, and five minutes and I am then ready," said the Frenchman.

The doors of one of the hangars were swung open, and, a pale blue machine, of no greater dimensions than the stranger, was wheeled out.

"But that is what I call a machine of the most excellent," said the Frenchman generously. "Oh, It's not so bad!" said the other.

In reality he thought it the best machine ever made; but he was not going to say so, because, of course, there was a risk that he might be beaten by this new type. One never knows.

True to his word, in five minutes the Frenchman was ready— and the two machines left the ground almost simultaneously.

"Now we're off," said the Englishman to himself, as he saw the other a shade in front of him.

Up they climbed at an almost incredible angle, and turned to cross the lines. They were out to find the Hun. Nor had they far to go, for as the lines came in sight, they saw far below them, six German aeroplanes, huge lumbering machines which were just crossing them on some raiding expedition.

"What cheek!" said the Englishman indignantly.

"C'est la guerre," said the Frenchman softly, as he fingered his machine gun.

Both held to their course. The Huns could not avoid them. They met at twice the speed of an express train, swerved sharply, to avoid collision and fought.

What a fight! No hiding in dug-outs—no long waiting for signs of movement. Like a thunderbolt, each machine made for its opponent, with the deep toned roar of the engines, and the rattle of the machine guns, turning, diving, manoeuvring to get into a favourable position. This was not the work for which the Hun bombing machines were fitted. They were too slow and hampered by their bombs.

An armour piercing bulelt hit one of their bombs—a loud explosion—a cloud of smoke as from a bursting shell, and as it cleared away, a few charred sticks were seen falling to the earth.

"Mine, I think," the Englishman said to himself enthusiastically.

"C'est la guerre," repeated the Frenchman as he saw it.

So the two fought on, but in spite of their superiority of machines the odds were against them. So soon as they obtained a favourable position, some Hun would creep up behind them and open fire. Already their machines were the worse for the fight; wires and spars had been shot away. But the Huns had had enough. In spite of the odds they felt their helplessness at the famous onslaught of these two swift machines. Back they turned and dived under cover of their anti-aircraft guns, whose shells began at once to blotch the skies.

The victorious two turned home. They landed, but the Frenchman did not move.

"By Jove. He's unconscious," said the Englishman, and ran to him. A wound in his leg had reddened his machine, and he had fainted from loss of blood. It was sheer will power that had saved him and his machine.

"I wonder which really is the better machine?" said the Englishman, as he helped to carry the newly made friend to a stretcher.

MACKLEM DEPORTED.

Detroit Commissioner Sends Him Back to Canada.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 16.—Omar L. Macklem, who had been lionized here for several months as a Colonel in the Canadian army, and who made numerous addresses before the local Board of Commerce concerning his war experiences, was deported to Canada by Federal authorities yesterday. The deportation followed a short examination before U. S. Commissioner Frick, who based his order on the technical ground that Macklem might become a public charge.

Although Macklem recently stated he never had claimed to be a Colonel he was introduced as such and appeared in uniform at various public meetings. Information received from Canada was to the effect that Macklem had been honourably discharged from the army as a private.

WAS HARDLY ABLE TO WALK, HE SAYS

Morgan Gets About as Well As Anybody Since Tanlac Overcame His Rheumatism

"You can see for yourself how well I can use my limbs, now, but before I began taking this Tanlac I was so crippled up with rheumatism it was difficult for me to walk at all." This statement was made by Edwin Morgan of 20 Cartwright street, London, in a conversation with the Tanlac representative at Standard Drug Company, Ltd., recently.

"The rheumatism," he continued, "was in both my legs and hurt me so bad I could hardly get up the doorsteps. In fact I could hardly walk at all, and, besides this, I had pains in my back and my kidneys were out of order all the time. I had very little appetite, was always tired and all the treatment and medicines I tried d'd me no good. Finally the rheumatism got me down and when I first commenced on Tanlac I had been in bed for a week or more.

"No, sir, I never did notice a change for the better until I got to taking Tanlac, then I soon got up and about, and the fact that I can now get about so well proves to me that Tanlac is remarkable. Why, I can even go up a flight of stairs without any trouble and, to-day for the first time in a long time, I have put in a full day's work. My limbs don't hurt me now, the pain is gone out of my back and my kidneys are in fine shape. I have a fine appetite, and sleep good every night, and although I am sixty-eight years old I am beginning to feel almost like a young man again. All my misery is gone, and at the rate I am taking on my strength I'll soon be as robust as ever. I am just now starting on my third bottle and I will be glad to tell anyone how it is helping me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

WAR WONDERS ETC.

Universal serum treatment has almost done away with tetanus. More and more early and energetic surgical treatment of all wounds has very largely defeated gas-gangrene. In our more recent battles more and more of the major operative work has been carried out in casualty clearing stations and advanced hospitals by surgical specialists.

Wounds are opened up, completely cleaned, and in an increasing proportion of cases are closed completely and immediately. As a consequence the men arrive at base hospitals in England from five to ten days after being wounded, not as previously with profusely suppurating wounds, and the prospect of months of illness and repeated operations, but with their injuries already healed or healing. A conspicuous example of the improvement which has been effected is that of wounds of the knee-joint. Infection of this joint, the largest and most complex in the body, has been one of the most justly dreaded events in surgery. Its ending was at the best a permanently stiff and useless joint, often amputation, and not rarely death. Lately it has been common to find in a single ward six or eight wounded knee-joints all recovering, while perhaps two-thirds of them will have useful joint-movement.

The key to the improvement lies in pushing the surgeon with his ever-increasing experience always nearer and nearer to the fighting line. The enemy has endeavoured to counter this by persistent bombing of the advanced hospitals, but the saving of life is more than worth the loss of life, and defensive measures should not prove too difficult.

Sound and Bold Methods.

But while many wounded allow of the attainment of such happy results there are many others of such extent and complexity and so intensely soiled that much must happen before healing is possible. The group is fortunately a diminishing one, though still very large, and it is in this connection that most of what the lay press has heard of war surgery has been published. Hypertonic saline, Eusol, Flavine, Brilliant Green have been the banners of a friendly battle of technique, the echoes of which have reverberated in many columns. But to tell the truth, it is new antiseptics but sounder and bolder methods which have produced the improvement. In the end the only antiseptic that avails is that furnished by the patient's own tissues and juices, and the only treatment that avails is to give him the best chance to cast out the invading organisms. It is significant that each new antiseptic must be applied in conjunction with the freest opening and drainage of the wound. Where one feature is common to many approximately equally successful methods, it is a sound inference that this similarity and not the differences is the essenial. And such differences as there really are lie rather in economy of disturbance and nursing than in ultimate results.

Making New Faces.

Of all classes of wounds, those of the face are the most distressing and frequently the most crippling. In no department of surgery probably has so much permanent advance been made as in the repair of this class of wound. To those who have not seen them in their early state, the dreadfulness of some of these injuries is hardly conceivable. Surgical help begins early and ends late, but the results in most cases are astonishingly gratifying. The first work is that of the dental surgeon when, as almost always, one or both jaws are injured. It is work requiring great skill, patience and ingenuity, and upon its results hangs the whole prospect of a tolerable life for the wounded man. Later, the plastic surgery of the face steps in to remove scars, to replace by all sorts of inventiveness lost cheeks, destroyed noses, lips that have been blown away. Gaps in the jaw are filled by bone transplanted from other parts, skin to replace losses is borrowed from parts which can spare it, and fitted with the nicety of cabinet-making, and in the end a face is recreated which is at least something human and tolerable.

But while there is endless matter for wonder in war surgery, there is, on the whole, nothing so wonderful as the men themselves. Their unconquered and unconquerable cheerfulness, their good humor and helpfulness, and their complete trust in the doctor make a shining record in the memory of those who have tried to help them.

"MY SON! OH, MY SON!"

Harry Lauder was one of the speakers at the luncheon tendered to the distinguished French editor Stephane Lauzanne, on Monday. He surprised his hearers by the simple pathos, as well as by the trumpet-like patriotism, of his address. In closing he turned to Mr. Lauzanne, and said: "I am one of those who love France. I own a little corner of your country. It is a small plot, lying on the crest of one of her green hills, back of the battle lines. My son is there, buried in the sacred soil which has always nurtured human liberty. All of the gladness of my life is buried there in his grave."—New York Editor and Publisher.

"A Better Understanding."

Syracuse Post-Standard: "The new covenant means a great deal more than added power to the Allied cause. It means a better understanding between Japan and the United States, brought about by a well defined statement of their particular and common rights in China and by the elimination of the misapprehensions which Germany has so sedulously fed."

"Removal of the Suspicions."

Rochester Union and Advertiser: "To most of us it will seem that the agreement between this country and Japan, made public in Washington yesterday, is rightly called historic by Washington. The removal of suspicions that will be effected by it will be of more than merely theoretical advantage to both countries, in that it will enable both to act more freely in the Far East in relation to China. But its chief advantage lies in the removal of the suspicions that have been felt by many people in each country of the aims of the other."

Greater Love Hath No Man Than This

Half hidden in the files of the London Gazette, where it is set forth with all the ponderousness of official language, is a story of self-sacrifice that stands out pre-eminently, even in this age of deeds of superlative courage and super-chivalry.

The record is contained in the announcement of the award of the Albert Medal of the First Class to Lance-Corporal Charles Henry Anderson, late of the 1-14th Battalion of the London Regiment, who lost his life in France in November last. The official narrative is as follows:—On November 28, 1916, Lance-Corporal Anderson was in a hut in France, with eleven other men, when, accidentally, the safety-pin was withdrawn from a bomb. In the semi-darkness he shouted a warning to the men, rushed to the door, and endeavored to open it so as to throw the bomb into a field.

Failing to do this, when he judged that the five seconds during which the fuse was timed to burn had elapsed, he held the bomb as close to his body as possible with both hands in order to screen the other men in the hut. Anderson himself and one other man were mortally wounded by the explosion, and five men were injured. The remaining five escaped unhurt. Anderson sacrificed his life to save his comrades.

When history opens the purple testament of bleeding war . . . .

every man and woman who has played a part will bear a record.

Your name may not be writ among those of the immortals—

But for honour's sake—for the sake of men like Anderson—see to it that it is writ on the Scroll with those who at least placed their money at the service of their country.

Shall it be said that Canada spares not her sons from the sacrifice of death, yet withholds her dollars needed to give them victory?

WHEN WAR WILL STOP

SUCCESSFUL PROPHET MAKES SECOND PREDICTION.

Man Who Foretold That the United States Would Enter Struggle in Spring of 1917 Now States That Peace Should Come About September of Next Year at the Very Latest.

IN the late summer of 1916 I predicted April 1, 1917, as the probable date of America's entrance into the European war, at the same time submitting in detail my reasons for this prognostication. The approximate correctness of that prediction leads me to hazard another prophecy, this time on the war's duration, a question paramount in the minds of all men today, writes George H. Borst in the Philadelphia Ledger.

Out of the amazing mass of conflicting reports and rumors one fact at least appears to me so clear and convincing that its meaning cannot be mistaken. The reversion of Germany to ruthless submarine warfare was a frank admission that the Imperial Government no longer believed it possible to win the war by universally recognized methods of warfare. It seems clear that the consequences of this policy must have been carefully weighed; that among its certain results could be counted the early entrance into the war of many neutrals, foremost of which would most certainly be the United States; that, of the remaining neutrals, almost all would become potential enemies (a fact which must have caused grave aprehension in any consideration of Germany's commercial future), and, lastly, that the Empire by such action would necessarily brand itself as an outlaw nation in the eyes of all humanity.

Only desperation could account for Germany's decision, for in the words of Romain Roland, "What is the value of life when you have saved it at the price of all that is worth living for?" In the War of 1870 all records show that Prussia observed scrupulously the accepted rules of warfare; but then Prussia was an easy victor. To-day, however, she finds herself in the position of the cornered criminal, ready to grasp at any straw which may promise victory; scratching, biting, kicking, but willing to sacrifice even honor to attain her goal.

Such, it seems, is the interpretation we must place on submarine warfare; and upon the success or failure of this warfare depends in large degree Germany's future as a military power. Lacking submarine success (and unless Germany is able to starve the English people into submission and to secure possession of the British fleet complete success is impossible), defeat is inevitable. In a war of attrition Germany must lose. Accepting then the view that submarine warfare was adopted as a last hope, he must be a confirmed pessimist who sees a chance of ultimate success for the submarine. With the keenest minds and the greatest inventive genius of the world concentrated on the solution of this problem, we may rest assured that some means will be found to combat this evil. It is hardly likely, however, th the full realization of the U-boats' failure will be admitted by the German people before the summer of 1918.

Further reasons also tend to substantiate these opinions. There is the growing discontent in Austria-Hungary, magnified a thousandfold by Russia's declaration of "no annexations and no indemnities." The Slav peril, the argument used so ruthlessly by the Prussians to terrorize and unify the Germanic peoples for the last 40 years, has virtually disappeared. Therefore if the Russian armies continue to fall back, fear (the great underlying cause of so many wars) from that quarter will be lessened and a strong moral reason for continuing a losing fight removed. If, on the other hand, Russia stays in the fight (and I believe by the spring of 1918 Russia will develop formidable military power), her strength alone may prove a decisive factor to the Allies.

Added to these reasons we find American troops appearing in constantly increasing numbers on European battlefields; we read from every quarter of the diminishing food supply in Germany, of the growing boldness of the Reichstag, of the Polish troops' refusal in Germany and Hungary to fight their comrades and relatives in Russia. We see the strangulation hold of the Allies taking effect on every hand; Italy gradually driving a wedge between two Austrian armies; France recovering ground at Verdun, and England hammering the heart out of the German troops in Flanders, and all the time counter-attacks becoming feebler and more infrequent.

To-day these facts may be only apparent to the German people; their hopes may still be pinned to the submarine or to a separate peace with Russia. They will face another winter before realizing the hopelessness of their task, but with spring will come an awakening. Defeat, hunger, and fatigue will force the issue. By summer definite overtures of peace may reasonably be looked for, and by late summer or early fall (I have set September as a likely date) a cessation in fighting will probably ensue and permanent peace will be ushered in about the end of the year. Does this prediction seem rash? Time alone will prove its worth, but the handwriting on the wall seems clear and unmistakable and to me spells one more year of war.

The term "Walloons" is used to designate those Belgians who speak French or a French dialect, while the Flemings are those who speak Dutch or a Dutch dialect.

MORE DEVLISH GERMAN GAS

Gas Masks Useless, Penetrates the Clothes, Causes Irritation.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Frits has a new gas. It is a bit more devilish than any of its predecessors, because it is more insidious. Gas masks are small protection against it, because it penetrates the clothing and sets up an irritation in any spot on which the skin has been rubbed or broken. Then it spreads.

This is the third new gas to be discovered in four months. By the time the Americans get into the field this may have almost become a "gas war." Persons given over to forebodings visulise troops fighting in the front trenches clothed like deep sea divers in suits that cannot be penetrated by the new deadliness.

The new gas is delivered either from hose, in the old fashion, or from bursting shells, in the new. It cannot be detected by the sense of smell, and often an hour or more passes before the unfortunates discover they have been "gassed." The subsequent treatment is rendered more difficult by the fact that the methods which experience has shown are best adapted to the asphyxiating gas, are positively dangerous with the "sulfure d'ethyle dichlore," which is the new form. Yet it is often difficult to distinguish between the sufferers from the two forms.

With the ingenuity that distinguishes them, the Germans use both gases in the same sector. The new gas directly attacks the mucous membranes.

"In the autopsy we are often able to peel off the mucous membrane as one would an old glove," said one surgeon. "Sometimes it breaks and curls up like the shingles on an old roof."

The gas clings to the clothing, so that subsequent wearers may be attacked if it is not thoroughly cleansed. The nature of the new weapon may be indicated by some of the directions given to army surgeons for treating those injured by it:

"Strip them at once if possible and bathe in a solution of soapy water. This should be done at the dressing stations, if possible."

the real breatheable tablets, make the throat, chest, and lungs cold-resisting. When a nasty cold or a coughing bout foretells the revival of your old bronchial trouble, the best thing to do is to take Peps at once to strengthen and

By this direct treatment Peps keep trouble off the

WILL BE BALLOT IF VOLUNTARISM FAILS

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 14.—Premier Hughes opened the Referendum campaign with proposals whereby electors are asked to agree that voluntarism should continue. The number of reinforcements required is 5,000 monthly, compulsory reinforcements to be called up by ballot only to the extent to which voluntarism fails to supply that number. The ballot will be from among the single men only between the ages of 20 and 44. Persons in particular industries and ministers of religion will be exempt. Eligible males of families represented at the Front shall not be balloted for until others are called up. All ballots to be so conducted that families contribute nearly as practicable pro rata. In no case will the sole remaining eligible member of a family represented at the Front be called up.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—Department store and moving picture theatre officials were in arms yesterday morning over the published report of the remarks made by Rev. George Hanson before the Montreal Presbytery as to moral conditions here. They claim that Mr. Hanson has been hoaxed and is unable to substantiate his charges.

GUYNEMER.

The hero of a hundred fights,
With fiery soul to fear unknown,
No longer scales empyreal heights
Nor ranges depths of air alone
To mark the foeman's albatross
Limned 'gainst the blue of distant sky;
Who counted death a gain, not loss,
As swift he onward sped on high,
Could he but grapple with that foe
And send him hurtling far below!

Sky scout was he in heaven's blue
Who trailed his foe through fields of air,
Or scanned with sight as eagle's true
The hidden battery in its lair!
Around him burst the screaming shell
As dauntless he sped on his way,
While far below flamed fires of hell
That showed where battle held its sway,
A knight in quest of joustings there,
The king of airmen, Guynemer!

Dead eagle of aerial plains
Who half a hundred fights had won,
In years to come when Silence reigns
O'er fields where war in its course has run,
Proud France will mourn above thy tomb,
And travellers from distant lands
Will note where poppies reddest bloom
Above thy dust, and reverent hands
Will tend and guard his resting place—
This knightliest soul of France's race!

To the Electors of West Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and coroperation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM,

Peterborough, Nov. 10, 1917.

GERMANY AND THE EAST

As many answers as there are Allies might be given to the question, "Why are we at war?" but beneath all the answers that they might conceivably give lies the basal fact that the war was forced upon them by Germany's determination to strike a blow for universal dominion. As to this no doubt can be entertained by even moderately attentive observers of German policy, either under Bismarck or Wilhelm II. And yet it is surprising how many worthy people have steadfastly refused to read the rude lesson of history that Prussian policy has always been the policy of the highwayman, in pursuance of which she has never scrupled to attack any State whose overthrow seemed to promise her a pennyworth of advantage. And just as the footpad who has the misfortune to interfere with a strong and resolute traveller begins to protest that he is a poor man with a large family, and pleads for mercy—and an alms, so Germany now is posing as the innocent victim of the world's inhumanity, and is hinting at the possibility of peace and some small compensation for her injured innocence.

The unfortunate fact remains that Germany has only herself to thank for her present uneasy situation. The war is the climax of a design long thought out and deliberately put into execution. Wisdom is said to come from the east, and to the east we may look for some enlightenment on this point.

Why is an Allied force at Salonica? Why do the British find it necessary to defend Egypt and to have an army in Mesopotamia? Why are the Turks mixed up in this dispute? The answer is that the Turks are in it at the bidding of their kind but not disinterested friend, the Kaiser, and that the British find it necessary to detach forces to outlying theatres of the war in order to prevent any premature realisation of Germany's ambitions in the East—not to mention other regions of the world.

There was a time when Bismarck declared that the whole of the Balkans were not worth the bones of a single Pomeranian grenadier. Times have changed, and the Kaiser has sacrificed millions of others besides Pomeranians for the sake of the Balkans, and the lands that lie beyond them. This is not a passing desire nor a resolve of yesterday. Like all German ambitions it has its roots in the past, and its growth has been plain to see. We need not follow German writers in tracing the pre-historic origins of the "German Drang nach Osten," but so early as 1841—before Prussia had made good her hegemony of Germany—the great von Moltke pointed to Asiatic Turkey as a field for a bold and aggressive policy, which neither France, Britain nor Russia was then in a position to hinder. In 1848 Roscher designated Asia Minor as the future portion of Germany, and since then a host of writers, famous and obscure, have continued in the same strain. In 1896 the Pan-German League published a pamphlet entitled "Germany's Claim to the Turkish Inheritance," according to which Germany was to serve herself heir to Asia Minor and Syria and make of Mesopotamia a German India.

Meanwhile others besides the pamphleteers had been busy. In 1880 a German company with a capital of 50 million marks was formed for the exploitation of Asia Minor. In 1883 von der Goltz undertook the reorganization of the German army, previously in French hands. The success of his efforts was proved in the brief war of 1897 with Greece. A branch was opened at Constantinople by the Deutsche Bank, which in 1888 acquired the concession of what afterwards developed into the Bagdad Railway. German trade was pushed in every corner of Turkey by an army of commercial travellers and concession-seekers under the most august patronage. The peaceful penetration of Turkey had begun in earnest. In 1889 the Kaiser and Kaiserin paid a state visit to the Sultan, and in 1898, while the Sultan's hands were still bloodied with the Armenian massacres, the Kaiser again visited him, then went on to the Holy Land, where he not only posed as the Protector of Protestant and Catholic Christians, but startled the world by announcing that the Sultan and all the three hundred million Mohammedans who reverenced him as their spiritual head, might rest assured that the German Emperor would at all times be their friend.

Let a German explain the meaning of this amazing declaration. Pastor Naumann, who has since sprung to public notice as the author of Mitteleuropa, was present and, among other reflections, recorded this: "It is possible that the world war will break out before the disintegration of the Ottoman Empire. Then the Caliph at Constantinople would once more uplift the standard of a Holy War. The Sick Man would raise himself for the last time to shout to Egypt, the Soudan, East Africa, Persia, Afghanistan and India, 'War against England'.... It is not unimportant to know who will support him on his bed when he rises to utter this cry!" (quoted by Marriott. Eastern Question, p. 356.)

The world-war has come, and Pastor Naumann's forecast has been fulfilled to the letter. The Sick Man, dosed with German steel tonic, and supported in German arms, has shouted "War against England," but the result has been disappointing. The intrigues of Germany have been laid bare in all the countries enumerated by Herr Pfarrer Naumann, but events have shown that of the three hundred million Mohammedans who respect the Sultan as Caliph, only a misguided handful could be deceived into regarding the German Emperor as their friend.

But even admitting Germany's title to the Sick Man's Asiatic heritage, why did she need to fortify it by preparing trouble for England in Africa and India? Because Germany's greed did not stop short at Asia Minor, nor even with Syria and Mesopotamia to boot. Germany regards any colonial possession, actual or prospective, not only as a source of profit to herself, but still more as a means of annoyance to her neighbors and a step on the way to world domination. Hence Paul Rohrbach has written: "If the English wish Egypt and India to remain unassailable in the future, and if they wish to render themselves secure against the German submarine danger they must defeat us to such an extent as to sever our connection with the East, to render us powerless to prevent the break-up of Turkey in favor of England and her Allies, and to force us to submit to permanent restrictions as to the construction and use of submarines." (Quoted from "Deutsche Politik," Nov. 24, 1917, in the Round Table, March 1917, p. 268.) After that need any one ask why Britain is at war, or why her armies are in the East?

Palpitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

PUBLIC OPINION

Teutonic Logic.

(Buffalo Commercial.)

At the time of the destruction of Louvain by the German troops in August, 1914, Mr. Gibson, first secretary of the American legation in Brussels, in company with some other diplomatic officials, was conducted about Louvain by a German officer.

"Just to see what would happen,' says Mr. Gibson, "I inquired about the provision of The Hague Conventions prescribing that no collective penalty can be imposed for lawless acts of individuals. He (the German officer) displayed that to his own satisfaction by remarking:

"All Belgians are dogs and all would do these things unless they are taught what will happen to them.

"Convincing logic!

"With a hard glint in his eye he told us the purpose of his work; he came back to it over and over, but the burden of what he had to say was something like this:

"'We shall make this place a desert. We shall wipe it out so that it will be hard to find where Louvain used to stand. For generations people will come here to see what we have done and it will teach them to respect Germany and to think twice before they resist her. Not one stone on another, I tell you—nie ein Stein auf einander!'

"I agreed with him when he remarked that people would come here for generations to see what Germany had done—but he did not seem to follow my line of thought."

THE TWO JOHNS.

(Touchstone in London Daily Mail).

John Brown went out to the war—
Went of his own volition.
The army had men, but it wanted more,
And he threw up a good position.

His country was faced by a savage foe,
And it never occurred to him not to go.

John Smith remained behind
Where prospects were more inviting,
For he was a man of a peaceful kind,
With little stomach for fighting.
There was plenty, he said, to help us win,
And, incidentally, save his skin.

John Brown had the deuce of a time
In excessively awkward places;
John Smith continued, with trust sublime,
Selling of ribbons and laces.
Though but for Brown and the likes of Brown
The Germans had certainly come to town.

The posters may make appeals;
John Smith is strong to resist 'em.
The root of an Englishman's right, he feels,
Is our voluntary system.
If we used compulsion do such as he,
Where would our boasted liberty be?

AUTOCRACY V. DEMOCRACY.

Now, it is entirely true that when autocracy sets out to rule beneficently it can achieve wonders. Merely as concerns honesty, order and sanitation, it was a blessing to a peaceful Germany. Your life, your health and your purse were astonishingly safe. So far, excellent, but what of your soul? Autocracy did your thinking for you. It supplanted your conscience. It not only robbed you of your heart's best prerogatives, but made them very thankful for being robbed of them. And when the long awaited and passionately wished for day arrived, it plunged Germany into a mad conflict with four-fifths of the human race. We make no excuses for the failures of democracy. But we do not admire the autocracy of Turkey or of old Russia, nor, taking it all in all, can we admire German autocracy. The fatherland's present rulers found a docile, industrious, peace-loving race, educated it, organised it, disciplined it, endowed it with unexampled efficiency, and headed it for calamity and woe illimitable. Just here is our count against autocracy. Never mind about its success or its fizzle as a government at home; there is no argument there; one autocracy happens to have succeeded, others have fizzled. What concerns us vitally is the fact that any autocracy anywhere may at any moment become predatory, a menace to its subjects and a terror to the world at large.—Chicago Tribune.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Ruben's Old Dad

What Busted Him All to Squash

By M. QUAD

Copyright, ..., by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

I got out at a small railroad station in Tennessee, to find a crowd in front of a saloon, and as I began inquiring the cause of the excitement a young man of twenty turned and replied:

"Stranger, I can tell ye all about it. Do you want to see the corpse?"

"Is some one dead?"

"Dead as a coon track, and it's my own dad at that."

"Been a row here?"

"Not a bit of it. Dad jest made a fule of hisself. He's in thar waitin' fur a cart to take hisself home to be laid out and buried."

"Never seed nuthin' to ekal it in all my bo'n days," said a man in the crowd.

"I was right yere or I wouldn't hev sniggered to it nohow," added a second.

"It was jest this way, stranger," continued the son as he picked a sliver off a pine box and began to whittle at it with a spring back jackknife: "Dad and me comes down yere this mornin' to buy a mewl. Dad was powerful frisky all the way down, and he ses to me, sez he:

"'Ruben, I kin outwalk, outrun, outshute, outboller and outlick anything on top of this yere airth's surface.'

"I sees dad was purty chucky, and I sez to him, I sez:

"'Dad, you's top of the heap round yere, and nobody kin deny it, but doan' you go and meet up with no fight in town. We's arter a mewl, we is, and we doan' want no fussin' nor nuthin'.'

"And with that dad jumps fo' feet high, and cracks his heels together, and whoops out that he's b'ar traps, pizen, powder and catamount all boiled down into one, and that he's dangerous if anybody goes to pick up his hind foot."

"Yaas, and I hears him boller when he's a mile away," said one of the crowd.

"Of co'se you did," replied Ruben; "of co'se. Dad was powerful on hollerin'. He'd holler a b'ar out'n a tree half a mile away. When he got down yere thar was a feller from Memphis with a patent liftin' masheen a-standin' right yere. Thar's the pieces of it agin this fence, while the feller hisself is ten miles away and still runnin'."

"But 'twasn't his fault," protested a man on muleback.

"I ain't sayin' as 'twas," placidly answered Ruben. "I'm sayin' as dad got mixed up and made a fule of hisself. No sooner had he sot eyes on the masheen than he cracks his heels together and crows like a rooster and sez to me, sez he:

"'Ruben, I kin pull the hull state of Tennessee right up by the roots if I kin git a brace fur my feet.'

"Yaas, I heard him say them remarks," put in one of the crowd.

"Of co'se he said 'em," continued Ruben; "of co'se. He spit on his hands, grabbed them 'ere handles and when he straightened up I jest felt the ground a-bobbin' all around."

"So'd I," called seven or eight voices in chorus.

"Dad had one side of the hull country lifted up two foot high when there was a rip and a squash, them handles tore out, the masheen flew to pieces and the airth sunk back with a chug which made us dizzy."

"Then your father had broken a blood vessel or something of the sort?" I queried.

"Skeersly, stranger, skeersly. Dad wasn't no man to stop at one blood vessel. He jest busted hisself all to pieces and was a goner afore we could reach him. I might say he sort of run together and caked. He was six foot high when he grabbed them 'ere handles, and now you can't make him over four foot eight as he lays in thar on a board. Jest pulled his knees up and his shoulders down, and I reckon his pants would hold his galluses up if thar was any buttons on 'em. The man who owned the masheen wasn't to blame—of co'se he wasn't—but when he seed the calamity he started fur Knoxville on the jump, and he was jumpin' when he turned the co'ner of the hill up thar. Dad's in yere, stranger. Come and take a look. Mighty good man he was."

"And you are waiting to take the body home?" I queried as a wagon drove up to the shed.

"That's it, stranger."

"It will be a sad sight for your mother to see the body come home."

"Toler'bly sad, toler'bly sad," replied the young man, "though she's been expectin' it for the last ten y'ars. I know about what she'll say. As the wagon drives up and she sees me she'll stand in the door and call out:

"'Has it happened this time, Rube?'

"'Yep, maw.'

"'Smashed up or dead?'

"'Dead as a dead rabbit!'

"'Tackle an elephant, did he?'

"'Wurs'n that, maw.'

"'A hull circus?'

"'And wuss than that. He tried to lift the hull airth on one of them masheens.'

"'Shoo! Shoo! And it busted him?'

"'All to smash!'

"'Doctor look at him?'

"'Two of 'em, and both agreed that his prancin' days was over.'

"'Waal, I knowed they'd be if he kept whoopin' it up, an' mebbe he's better off. At least we'll allow that he is, and you cum in and cut some wood and feed the hawg and we'll git an early start to bury him in the mawnin'.'"

THE PROVINCE OF LIVONIA.

Germans Are Overrunning Rich Part of Russia.

Livonia, one of the three Baltic provinces of Russia, is now being overrun by the Germans, following their capture of the provincial capital, Riga. The province of Livonia has the Gulf of Riga as its western boundary, and is bordered on the east by the Governments (States) of Petrograd, Pskov, and Vitebsk. More than 1,000 square miles of Livonia's territory is insular, however, including the islands of Oesel and Runde, in the Gulf of Riga, while another 1,000 square miles is represented in that portion of Lake Peipus which belongs to the province. Nearly two-fifths of the remainder of the territory is forest land, while there are nearly a thousand small lakes, numerous marshes and peat bogs and a considerable tract of sand dunes on the Gulf of Riga shore, so that the agricultural area is smaller than would at first appear.

The cultivable lands of Lavonia are largely in the hands of wealthy nobles, the size of the average estate being nearly 10,000 acres. On these estates the most scientific farming implements are used and cultivation is conducted according to the most modern methods. The chief products are rye, barley, oats, potatoes, and some wheat, hemp, and buckwheat.

Among the chief industries of the province are woolen, cotton, flour, flax, and saw mills, distilleries, breweries, soap, tobacco, and furniture works.

More than 100,000 persons eke out a livelihood in the fisheries of Lake Peipus and the Gulf of Riga.

Although coins of the time of Alexander the Great have been found on the island of Oesel, the history of the province emerges from obscurity not earlier than the eleventh century, when the Germans began to penetrate to this region. About the middle of the twelfth century merchants from the powerful Hanseatic city of Lubeck reached the mouth of the River Dvina, and established trading posts in the vicinity of what is now Riga. These commercial pioneers were followed by emissaries of the Archbishop of Bremen, who began to preach Christianity to the semi-piratical natives. Then came the Order of the Brethren of the Sword, apostles who inculcated their religious teaching with the aid of steel.

About the middle of the sixteenth century Livonia underwent a partition, the Northern half being assimilated by the growing power of Russia and the Southern portion being annexed by Poland. When the war between Sweden and Poland was launched this unhappy province became the battleground of the warring armies, and a century later it was the scene of the triangular conflict of Sweden, Russia, and Poland. By the treaty of Nystad, in 1721, the province was definitely assigned to Russia.

About 43 per cent. of the inhabitants of Livonia are Letts, while an almost equal number are Esths. Eighty per cent. of the people are communicants of the Lutheran Church.

In one particular Livonia outshines every other province in Russia—in its public school system. It is estimated that nine-tenths of the children receive regular instruction in times of peace.

Jap Restaurant Supervision.

Mr. Shoda, Minister of Finance in Japan, has undertaken the role of the beneficene Haroun er Reshid, Calif of Bagdad in the eighth century. With his son, Mr. Shoda visits the cheap restaurants of Tokio, known as sobaya (buckwheat rolls) on Ikizaka street, Hongo. They are of class similar to those known in Canadian cities as "coffee-and-cake eats."

The official and his son occupy their seats close to the counter, order two bowls of mori soba, the cheapest but most substantial course on the menu. The Japan Times quotes the Minister of Finance as commenting upon the tendencies of the time. He is of the opinion that "young men of the student class are inclined to indulge in too much useless luxury. They pine to wear silk clothes and drink expensive rice-wines in fashionable restaurants." Mr. Shoda is quoted as having instructed his son in the following language:

"This sobaya where we are is vividly reminiscent of my school days. More than twenty years ago, when I was at the University, this cheap joint was our Yawogen (one of the fashionable restaurants of Tokio). Here we entertained our friends on their visits or return from vacations. Many very happy times have occurred here. I have brought you here that with me you may cherish the dear memories of my younger days." Before he had ended the meal, The Times asserts, Mr. Shoda consumed eight bowls of mori soba.

How Belgians Escaped.

According to a telegram from Havre, where the Belgian Government is temporarily located, about 150 Belgians have succeeded in crossing the frontier into Holland and freedom in a curious manner.

The German military authorities had decided to have certain trees cut down because they interfered with the view of the sentries placed along the barbed wire fencing and the cable which, charged with a strong electric current, prevent persons from escaping from Belgian territory. One hundred and fifty inhabitants of Selzaete were requisitioned and ordered to work at cutting down the trees.

The improvised tree-cutters succeeded in doing their work in such a way that several trees fell across the barbed wire and the electrified cable, and made a wide, safe opening. Then they proceeded to transfer themselves to Dutch territory, accompanied by their five German guardians, who had long grown tired of their duty and were only too pleased to desert, bag and baggage.

Let us get back to common-sense natural food

A CENTURY ago a wealthy faddist in old London invited his friends to a "white dinner." Nothing but the old-time whole-grain bread had ever been used before, but a Hungarian miller solved the problem by removing from the dark-colored flour everything but the white starchy parts so that the bread too, at the dinner, might be white. The idea of white foods became a fad and the craze spread all over the world.

Dr. Jackson's

is a return to the old-time, common-sense, natural diet. The almost universal use of white foods is founded upon a FAD. The daily growing popularity of Roman Meal is founded upon NATURE.

Roman Meal is a well balanced combination of whole berries of wheat (30%), whole berries of rye (35%), wheat bran (10%), and flaxseed (25%). The flax has been rendered absolutely tasteless and odorless by electricity; it is the most nourishing seed known. Roman Meal prevents indigestion. It relieves constipation, or we will return your money.

There are many Roman Meal recipes printed on the package—but you can use all or any of your own favorite recipes by mixing 1-3 white flour with 2-3 Roman Meal. Roman Meal restores the lost balance to the white flour. It makes pancakes so digestible that the most delicate person will relish them, also waffles, muffins, fruit rocks, gingerbread, brown bread, steam pudding.

You just ought to see how the kiddies and grown-ups relish Roman Meal porridge with its delicious nut-like flavor. Roman Meal porridge MUST never be stirred, except while mixing meal and water.

Roman Meal prevents indigestion. It is porous and remains porous if you do not stir while cooking. The digestive juices reach every particle quickly. Digestion is thus both rapid and thorough.

The bran in Roman Meal gives the muscles of their digestive system its natural work to do—and thus relieves constipation. The flaxseed also aids in this and prevents the bran from causing catarrh of the bowel. Ask your doctor. At all grocers.

Roman Meal Company, Toronto, Canada; North Tonawanda, New York; Tacoma, Washington. 11

Carnegie's Advice.

Andrew Carnegie, who for years yielded an influence in the industrial world as great perhaps as any living man, came to this country practically penniless when he was twelve years old. His phenomenal rise in life may be attributed to his following clear principles and methods. In an address to students in a commercial college he said: "Avoid speculation; avoid indorsements. Aim high. For the question, 'What must I do for my employer?' substitute 'What can I do?' Begin to save early—capitalists trust the saving young man.' Concentrate your energy, thought and capital; fight it out on one line."

Kneeling Horses.

In ancient times, before the invention of stirrups and luxurious saddles, horses were taught to kneel to permit their riders to mount. A beautiful Greek vase in one of the museums in Petrograd shows a war horse of many centuries ago kneeling low before an amazon. The riders in those days mounted from the "off" side in contradiction to the modern usage. Plutarch tells how in the first century of this era certain effeminate Roman riders found even the horse block of too little assistance and had their horses trained to kneel to them.

Hair of the Bear.

How many hairs are on a square inch of a bear's skin? A count, carefully checked, because prizes were awarded to the winners closest to the actual number, disclosed that one square inch of this particular bear skin held just 10,543 hairs.

To See an Eclipse.

The Manchester Guardian, in England, makes itself responsible for the following story: Not long ago, when, in the usual order of events, there was an eclipse of the moon—visible at Greenwich—a man whose work brought him daily into Manchester, was seen going home about two hours earlier than usual. Upon being asked by one of his train companions to account for the sudden break in his routine, he replied that he had to be back in the city before 9 o'clock because he had read in his morning paper that the eclipse of the moon would be visible from Albert Square from about that time onwards, and he was not going to miss the opportunity, as it was a fine night. He lived in the country.

The story recalls the famous incident connected with Dean Swift when his word was law in Dublin, some two hundred years ago. The Dean had announced that there would be an eclipse of the sun on a certain day, at a certain time, visible from his house. Some time before the appointed hour, large crowds of people flocked from all parts of the city and congregated around the Dean's house, much to his annoyance. So much, indeed, did it trouble him, that he finally sent out word to the waiting multitude that the eclipse had been postponed, and would not take place for some time. The people at once returned to their homes, disappointed, but unquestioning.

Repotting Plants.

Repotting plants becomes necessary at intervals from two considerations. The plant uses up the available fertility in the soil and fills the pot with roots. In repotting plants it is well to shake off whatever earth can be separated without breaking and injuring the roots. Then water and shade for a few days.

Fame is something which must be won; honor only something which must not be lost.

How Playing Cards Are Made.

Did you know that ordinary playing cards are made of three or four sheets of paper pasted together? In making them the sheet on which is printed the back of the card is laid down on a table and the white side brushed with paste. A sheet of cartridge paper is laid on this and covered with paste. Perhaps a second sheet of cartridge paper is added. Finally the sheet which is to form the face of the card is placed on top.

When the workman has a great stack of these pasted sheets he puts them in a strong press and squeezes out all the water from the paste. Then they are separated and dried, which makes them rough and wrinkled, so that they have to be ironed between steel rollers and pressed between smooth sheets of zinc in another press. After this they are brushed with a mixture of white lead, water and glue. When this is dry they are rubbed with flannel dipped in soapstone and polished with a brush to give them a smooth, bright finish.

NO SLUMP COMING IN POTATO PRICES

Who is making the profit on potatoes? Contrary to the rumour that potatoes are going to take a drop in price local dealers promise higher prices. Potatoes to-day are selling anywhere from $1.90 to $2.10 a bag.

Judging from the expression of opinion which prevailed among some of Ontario's representative farmers at the hog conference which was held in the city this week, the farmers will be content with a good living profit on their produce and vegetables. "Farmers have made more money in the last three years than has ever been known for farmers to make in the history of Canada, and we are ready to admit that we have, and also ready to say we are anxious to lend our co-operation in every way which will help in the war," was the sentiment expressed by a large number. "If by greater production we can secure more reasonable prices the farmers are ready to do what is right."

When interviewed yesterday, one of the buyers at the Toronto market stated that they were paying $1.90 a bag for potatoes wholesale. On looking into the situation he gleaned from the farmers that the wholesale men had their buyers out through the country and had bought the potatoes at $1.25 a bag. In his opinion potatoes were plentiful and were held up by the wholesale merchants.

"There will be no slump in the potato market," declared the buyer for the Ferrier Company this morning. "Potatoes are not very plentiful this season and the present prices will be raised as soon as the first heavy frost comes to $2.50 a bag, and if we bring in the New Brunswick potatoes they will be at least $2.75 a bag."

About this time last year potatoes commenced to advance in price and finally reached the high-water mark at $4.50 and $5.00 a bag. "The people cannot afford to buy potatoes at any such rediculous price," said one dealer, "and if the consumer is to be protected it is time some action was taken in the matter and the minimum price set on potatoes."

JESSIE WILLCOX SMITH'S NARROW ESCAPE.

How she escaped from Indians is told by Jessie Willcox Smith, who writes, for the first time, the story of herself in the October Good Housekeeping.

"The first book I was ever asked to illustrate was a thrilling story about Indians—a regular boy's book. I knew very little about Indians, but with the aid of a friend who had a wonderful collection of Indian curios, and with very hard work on my part, I managed to turn out a fairly presentable set of drawings. Later I was somewhat dismayed when a second book came, also about Indians, with the request that it be given me to illustrate. I was not by way of refusing a manuscript in those days, so I began another struggle with Indians, the result of which also met with the approval of the publishers. But when this was promptly followed by a third Indian book, I felt that I must speak or forever after be condemned to paint Indians. So I wrote to the publishers that I did not know much about Indians and that if they had just an every-day book about children I thought I could do it better. I was immediately rewarded with one of Louisa M. Alcott's stories, and a letter saying they were glad to know I did other things, as they had supposed Indians were my specialty!

"So, after two narrow escapes from being forced into the wrong channel—for first, I tried to be a kindergarten teacher, and second, I almost became an Indian specialist—I came into my own, and ever since it has been one long joyous road along which troop delightful children —happy children, sad children, thoughtful children, and above all wondering, imaginative children, who give to their charmingly original thoughts a delicious quaintness of expression. I love to paint them all.

"Many of my portraits are painted out-of-doors. Out-of-doors seems the natural background for childhood. Given leaves, and flowers, and sunshine, which is theirs by right, their little faces glow in the full light as thought illumined from within. Heavy draperies and dark shadows, with the strong, concentrated studio light, are not expressive of childhood to me. I want children under the blue sky, in the shining radiance and joy which is their birthright, and with the flowers of God's earth, of which they are only a higher bloom, at their feet."

A Back Bay woman had been notified by her cook that she would "be lavin'" when her week was up. A little later, however, the cook changed her mind.

"I cannot understand you, Bridget," said her mistress. "Here I've trotted all over town trying to find a new cook, and now you tell me this. How did you happen to arrive at this new conclusion?"

"Well, mum," replied Bridget. "I sez when you were out, 'Biddy,' I sez, 'ye'd better wu-rrk for the divil ye know than for the divil ye don't know.' So it's stayin' I'll be, mum." fied by her cook that she would be

WOMEN'S ARMY CORPS GETS OUT FOR ITS WORK

(From the London Times)

The "Leave train" was due to start in half an hour, and the platform of the London terminus was crowded. Having secured my seat, I amused myself watching the scene around me. Presently my attention was arrested by hearing a somewhat quavering treble voice exclaim: "Squad! 'Shun!" and I noticed a body of about 50 girls drawn up at one side of the platform. A fine, upstanding, healthy lot they looked; dressed in a workmanlike uniform of khaki, with warm overcoats and brown hats, and knapsacks neatly slung across their shoulders.

This was a draft of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps en route for France, for the "Waacs," or the "Brownies," as they are familiarly called, are already well known on the other side, though in England people are only just becoming aware of their existence. The officer in charge, a quiet-looking girl of two or three and twenty, was obviously a little nervous, but she handled the women admirably. Two were told off as luggage orderlies and the rest were shepeherded into reserved second-class carriages. A few minutes before the train started the young officer got into my carriage, and as we had it to ourselves we soon began to talk. I had to make all the overtures, because as my companion subsequently confessed, she "felt such a raud compared with a real nurse, and was sure nurses must think the W.A.A.C. very silly." I told her the corps was already very popular in France, and was proving itself far too useful to be considered silly.

Thus encouraged she became quite communicative. It appeared that this was the first time she had been across, and that she was an "Assistant Administrator," i.e., the lowest of the superior grades. "I felt such a fool in khaki for the first week or two," she confided, "but now I begin to see that it has its uses. It explains who you are and what your business is and certainly makes things easier for the officials, while it would be difficult to deal with large numbers of girls if you were not in a recognized uniform of some sort."

On arival at the harbour station the girls were quickly formed up again on the platform, and, each carrying her own luggage, were marched on to the boat. A large body of troops were waiting to embark after them, and these greeted the girls with great enthusiasm. A part of the lower deck was set aside for them during the crossing and the transport officer seemed anxious to consider their comfort in every way.

NOT ALLOWED TO TALK TO MEN

Later on I was joined by the Assistant Administrator on the upper deck. She explained to me that one of her difficulties was that according to the rules of the corps, no woman in the ranks may speak to a man officer. The authorities of the W.A.A.C. are determined to enforce this rule but unfortunately, many officers seem unaware of it, and girls are sometimes placed in an awkward position. My young acquaintance to her great embarassment was obliged on several occasions to explain this to the officers on board, who naturally enough asked the girls questions as to their destination and duties. We subsequently had tea together, and she told me that her responsibility ended on reaching France, as the boat would be met by the Area Controller, the chief representative of the W.A.A.C. attached to the Base Headquarters and her assistants. An area controller, I gathered, had to be addressed as Ma'am" and treated with great respect.

There were other still more important people in the background, but an assistant administrator would not be likely to encounter them. On arrival the girls were all to be marched to the Passing Through Hostel, where they would have a meal, and where those who could not be sent on at once to their destination would remain for the night, sleeping on mattresses on the floor "just like Tommies." There were also permanent hostels at each base, where the girls at regular work there are most comfortably housed and loked after by their own administrators.

Ashore I saw the girls smartly drawn up on the quay and my friend the Assistant Administrator standing at attention before a woman officer, to whom she was apparently making her report. Two others were examining tickets, while a fourth was calling over the girls' names and checking a list.

Next day, on getting into the tram the first person I saw was the Assistant Administrator. She hailed me with enthusiasm. "I am going on to the terminus," she said, "a lot of our girls are employed near there; there are two hotels with a couple of hundred in each and I want to have a look at them before I go back to-night. I learnt that the draft she had brought out had all been dispatched to their various posts. Some were gardeners who had enrolled in order to help in the soldiers' cemeteries, which we and our Allies are working together to make into places of lasting beauty; others were motor transport dirvers, clerks, cooks and household workers generally.

As we neared the end of the tram line the streets through which we were permitted to recognize their own brown girls in W.A.A.C. uniform. It was dinner time and they were hurrying out of canteens, offices, and workshops to their hostels for the midday meal. A cheerful, busy-looking band they seemed, evidently very popular with the Tommies, with whom they were chatting gaily. On catching sight of my friend's uniform as the train passed them, the girls saluted with beaming faces. She explained that they were not allowed to salute at all at home but here they were permited to recognize their own officers.

Good luck to the W.A.A.C.! It takes all sorts of women as well to win the war, and not every woman will make a good nurse.

What the Huns Are Saying

On September 14th the Vorwarts wrote: "The worst disappointments which our diplomacy has given us during the war are greatly surpassed by this latest sensation. No word of censure or condemnation is sharp enough for the man who, in a responsible position, sends such irresponsible telegrams to his Government, and who, apart from the moral aspects of the case, violated the most primary dictates of prudence and caution in face of our experiences with the Mexico despatches." The blood-curdling ravings of the Pan-German newspapers, or the most inflated heroics of the Kaiser reveal less of the mad egoism that is corrupting the German nation than this pronouncement of the most important Socialist organ in Germany. It refers to the discovered crime of Count Luxburg, the German minister to the Argentine. The Argentine was then a neutral country, a neutral with strong friendship for Germany, and the German minister advised his government, when it sank Argentine merchantmen to see that no trace was left, in fact to make certain that not only the ships, but the crew, should be sent to the bottom. Such action, directed against enemy ships, is so outrageous that the Germans have always repudiated it, and when confronted with evidence, have made some kind of paltering excuse. In the case of neutrals it is a unique combination of murder and treachery. And the great Socialist organ of Germany has no more to say about it than that it was most stupid and unpardonable of Count Luxburg to run the risk of being found out, especially when he had the warning of the discovery of the similar but lesser treachery of Germany to the United States in the case of Mexico. There can be no arranged peace with a nation in this mood; an imposed peace is the only hope for the future of the world.

As it is gradually dawning on Germany that she has no hope of retaining possession of Belgium, the extremists are in violent agitation. Count Reventlow, writing in the Deutsche Tageszeitung declares as follows: "If it be true that the German Government has decided on the renunciation of Belgium, the ruin of the German Empire is sealed." The Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten, writing on September 14th, said: "Why has Germany had a fit of the blues for the last six months? Why all this whimpering about peace. Can the whining of the Scheidmann-Erzberger group in the Reichstage be traced back to the unnecessary, hasty, and untrue self-accusation uttered by the flurried Chancellor at the beginning of the war, when he promised to make good the wrong done to Belgium. This confession of guilt has played the devil with our belief in ourselves and should never have been uttered."

The Post, the organ of the small but influential Prussian Free Conservative Party, in an article of September 17, gives a remarkably sane estimate of the world-position brought about by the war. "England," it said, "may have lost much during the struggle, but she has gained infinitely more. She has secured and fixed, the bases of her sea and colonial supremacy much more firmly than ever before. She has obtained Germany's colonies. The Cape-Cairo-Calcutta route has been practically secured. Her power in the Mediterranean area has been increased, and she has swept German commerce aside all over the world. Wherever she has obtained entrance and influence, England has wiped out the last traces of Germany's commercial activity. Here German capital has gone, German property has been annihilated. Everywhere where our merchant was at work to increase our wealth and strengthen our influence sits the English competition. Not only have German possessions gone, but respect for the honour of Germanism has been uprooted and unsullied. In numerous countries people regard the German not only as conquered, but as dishonoured. To his own advantage has the Englishman made his hated opponent impossible and harmless for a long time to come. We need, therefore, not only the restoration of Germany's colonies and lost property, but also positive compensation for the damage done to Germany's position in the world." The Post has only one hope, not of military victory for Germany, and it may be added that military events on the Western Front, since the dat- of the article has made military victory for Germany still more impossible, but that England may come to the end of her military tether and be so foolish as to endeavour to bring about peace by negotiation. The Post may abandon this hope and turn to what is the only hope for Germany, that Germany should realize that it is not the action of England and the Allies that has dishonoured her throughout the world, but the unscrupulous methods of Germany herself. When Germany begins to set her own house in order, the possibility of peace will dawn, of peace not only in matters military but in commerce and all international relations.

Italians Flood Country In Attempt To Entrap Invaders

Flood-Gates at the Piave and Sile Rivers in Neighbourhood of Venice Are Opened---German Attack on the French Front in Belgium is Repulsed---Lord Northcliffe's Attack Has Stirred England.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 16.—The flood gates of the Piave and Sile Rivers, northeast of Venice, have been opened by Italian engineers. The section of Italanis in opening the flood gates of the Piave and Sile Rivers probably means an attempt to drown out the Austro-German forces which crossed the lower Piave several days ago at Grisolers, about seventeen miles northeast of Venice. The flooding of the triangle formed by the two rivers and Adriatic also probably would make ineffective any German attempt to debauch in force against the right flank of Italian Army along the Piave.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 16.—An attempt to negotiate for the creation of a Socialist Government in Russia and postponement of the railway strike there are described in an Exchange Telegraph Company despatch from Petrograd dated Tuesday. Premier Kerensky, the despatch adds, has issued proclamations declaring his adherence to the revolution, and guaranteering the clearing out of Bolsheviki as well as to transferrence of power to Democratic organizations, the Prelinary Parliament and the committee for safeguarding the country and revolution.

It is reported from Kiev, the despatch adds, that there is heavy fighting throughout that city. Airplanes are participating on both sides, and there have been numerous casualties. The armistice at Moscow expires to-day.

Northcliffe Again Jars England to Wakefulness

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ed. L. Keen)

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Lord Northcliffe has again jarred England to wakefulness. His letter to Premier Lloyd George severely criticizing the present government and declaring that unless there is swift improvement in British methods the United States will assume the entire management of a great part of the war to-day created the greatest political stir since the Northcliffe munitions campaign. Coming on the heels of a threatening crisis growing out of the displeasure expressed over Lloyd George's Paris speech, the attack of Northcliffe created a situation that promises heated debates in the House of Commons, and certainly a possible shake-up in the War Cabinet. Comment on the Northcliffe letter follows largely the political bent of the various papers. Discussion in political clubs brought forth the belief that Lloyd-George, himself, may survive the crisis his government undoubtedly faces. The general opinion is that there must be a house-cleaning in some of the departments, however. Northcliffe would not support former Premier Asquith as a possible successor to Lloyd George.

To-day's newspapers unanimously resumed a discussion of the inter-allied Council plan, as outlined by Lloyd George as a result of the Northcliffe letter. The communication completely revived the flickering evidences of a political crisis. The spectators suggested that a Government be built around Sir Eric Geddes, now First Lord of the Admiralty, and Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade. Geddes is the representative of the business interests of the country, while Cecil represents the political interests.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Independent Socialist group in the German Reichstag has requested the President to convoke an immediate session of the Reichstag, to discuss the peace offer of Nikolai Lenine, leader of Russian Bolsheviki, the Amsterdam correspondent of the Central News cables.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 16.—A German attack in Belgium was repulsed by the French. German aviators bombarded the region south of Nancy. There were no victims.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 16.—In reply to a question in the House of Commons to-day Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty said: "The good return of tonnage sinking by the enemy submarines last week are indeed comparatively favorable. The result of the last two months ought to be taken as indicating that the submarine menace is a thing of the past or defeated.

A BERLIN REPORT.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The town of Cismon, on the Northren Italian front has ben captured, the War Office announces. Near the Adriatic, on the western bank of the Piave, Hungarian troops advanced and captured one thousand Italians.

PROGRESS BEING MADE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—American naval experts, it was made plain to-day do not agree with the view that the lull in submarine activities indicates a collapse of the U Boat campaign, or that anti submarine measures have proved wholly effective. They agree that progress is being made against the menace. But meanwhile the American navy will continue its preparations to deal with the menace.

IS FORMING A CABINET.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—George Clemenceau, who is forming a Cabinet in succession to that headed by Professor Painleve expects to present the complete ministry to President Poincare this afternon.

IMPOSSIBLE TO SEND JAPANESE TROOPS TO EUROPE

Japan However Will Continue To Assist the Allies in Other Ways Than Troops However, Minister of Finance Shoda Declares,

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ralph H. Turner.)

TOKIO, Nov. 16.—"The sending of troops to Europe by Japan is impossible," Minister of Finance Shoda declared to-day in an address before the National Economic Association's meeting at Osaka.

"The reason is obvious to explain," the Minister asserted. "The Allies understand Japan's peculiar position in the war," he continued. "Japan has and will continue to assist the Entente in other ways than by troops. She has already invested a hundred million dollars directly or indirectly in the Allied cause. She will maintain that financial aid. There is no danger in the Russian situation. The extremists will never succeed there. Italy's situation has also been improved by the co-operative Allied offer. Any talk regarding the early end of the war is German propaganda. Despite the American trade embargo, Japan has on hand to-day enough steel construction material to build 300,000 tons of shipping by next March or April. The Government is planning to increase her naval armament so far as finances will permit."

Minister Shodas speech was regarded here as expressing the official's sentiments on the matter of sending troops to Europe. Newspapers have been filled with various reports of the Entente's desire to have Japan represented in Europe by troops.

UNION GOVERNMENT

Union or party is the big question before the people to-day. Win-the-war is the main thing, but in some cases perhaps party sentiment blinds the perceptions. Two classes of people see things differently. Even in commercial circles some people demand union-made goods, and other are satisfied to use articles without the union label. Peterborough Shoe Store believes in union made goods, and has a splendid line of "stamped in the leather" boots. Union men can live up to their principles by buying union boots at the Peterborough Shoe Store. For Saturday the special leader as a bargain will be ladies' vici-kid boots, high heels, at only $4.50. HUN READY FOR RETREAT

German Government Preparing Its People for Another "Strategic" Retirement—91 Divisions Exhausted in Vainly Defending Passchendaele Ridge

WITHDRAWAL NECESSARY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Wm. Phillip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Nov. 16.—German newspapers found on recently captured prisoners show the Kaiser's government is preparing the public for another "strategic retreat" on the west front.

Captured German officers admit the German High Commander fears that a retirement for a distance "of several miles" may be necessary through the recent British advance. Data now in possession of the British staff shows that Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, in two months exhausted 91 German divisions, (nearly 1,365,000 men), in defending vainly the Passchendale ridge, and in friutless counter attacks. In a similar period of about two months the Germans used during the battle of the Somme 86 divisions (1,290,000 men). The inspired articles in German newspapers preparing the public mind for retirement on the west front shows the German's Staff's realization that its man power is fast waning.

Enemy Attacks Repulsed By The Italians

ROME, Nov. 16. — All along the mountain front the Asiago to the Piave river, attack by the Austro-German forces, which are seeking to crush in the Italian line, have been repulsed, it is anounced officially. All positions attacked yesterday remained in the hands of the Italians. On the Venetian Plains, artillery battles of intense severity across the Piave river, are in progress.

Pte. J. E. Rich, formerly of the 39th Battalion, 187 Bethune Street.

SERGT. ARCHIE LAPLANTE.

Mr. E. D. Laplante, 287 Wescott Street, has received official word from Ottawa that his son, Sergt. Archie Laplante, Canadian Mounted Rifles, is officially reported killed in action. Sergt. Laplante, with his brother, Pte. Godfrey Laplante, enlisted here with B (Peterborough) Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, in 1915, and went overseas with that unit. He had been in France for many months and had seen much hard fighting.

GUNNER HERB. TURNER.

Mrs. Herbert Turner, 336 Water Street, received an official message from Ottawa this morning that Gunner Herbert Turner, Canadian Field Artillery, is officially reported killed in action on 28th October. Gunner Turner enlisted here in the summer of 1915 with the 33rd Battery and had been in France for a long period. Before enlisting for overseas service Gunner Turner was employed at the Quaker Oats Company.

Gunner Turner is survived by a wife and three small children.

PTE. WALTER CORNELIUS.

Mr. Richard Cornelius, Western Avenue, received official word this morning that Pte. Walter Cornelius, Canadian Mounted Rifles, is officially reported killed in action between 30th and 31st October. Pte. Cornelius enlisted in a unit recruited outside of this district, and had been in France for some time.

MORE PETERBORO' SOLDIERS ARRIVE HOME FROM FRONT

Big Squad of Veterans Representing Many Different Units of the C. E. F. Reached the City Last Evening After Serving Overseas

GUNNER DORRIS HOME

Peterboro's already large population of returned soldiers was considerably augmented last evening, when a big squad of local boys who have been on overseas service, arrived home. The party reached the city on the 5.30 G.T.R. train and were welcomed by Mayor Duffus and Ald. Duncan and Taylor on behalf of the city.

The squad included Corp. George Hetherington of the 26th Battery, C. F.A.; Gunner Ambrose Dorris, of the 4th Battery; Pte. Ira Brady, of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles; Pte. Stanley Chambers, of the 21st Batt.; Pte. Alex. Walker, formerly of the 93rd Batt.; Pte. Cecil Kylie, of the Canadian Pioneers, and Pte R. Allen of the 247th Batt.

The veteran in point of service in the party was Gunner Ambrose Dorris, better known to his numerous friends as "Buck." Wearing the red epaulets that showed he was a member of the artillery forces of the 1st contingent, Gunner Dorris was among the first off the train. He enlisted in Peterboro with the 24th Field Battery quota early in August, 1914, and left with the first artillery squad going overseas as a member of the 4th Battery. He has seen twenty-seven months' service in France, going into action in February, 1915, and finally being invalided to England, in April, 1917, after the Canadians had captured Vimy Ridge. Gunner Dorris saw long and hard fighting during the 2nd battle of Ypres, Festubert, Givenchy, Zellebeke, the Somme and on the Arras front. Just after the big push at Vimy he was sent to England for treatment, and has been in the hospital practically ever since. He has to undergo further treatment at Kingston.

HOME COMING SADDENED.

The home coming of Pte. Cecil Kylie, a well known Ashburnham boy, who went overseas with a Pioneer Battalion in 1915, and was wounded in France, was saddened by the news of the death from wounds of his brother-in-law, Pte. Austin Tobin, formerly of the machine gun section of the 93rd Batt. Kylie heard of his sister's bereavement only a day or two ago.

WAS WITH 21ST.

Pte. Stanley Chambers, who arrived home last evening, enlisted here in the autumn of 1914, with the 21st Batt., and went overseas with that celebrated Eastern Ontario battalion, in the following spring. After being wounded in France, Pte. Chambers was sent to the Canadian Pay and Records Office, where he has been on duty for some time. He is unfit for

FRIDAY, NOV. 16, 1917

THE BURDEN OF BLAME.

The spectacular Bourassa is to the fore again. The Globe says it is against Bourassa; so is every patriotic Canadian. If it is "against Bourassa," it is rather friendly at present to the man who is very largely and very directly responsible for the vicious vogue Bourassa has gained; for the evil he has done; for the influence he has wielded, and is wielding to-day.

Bourassa is a man of great ability; of insatiable ambition for prominence; of diabolical cunning in promoting his campaign of treason and disruption of Canadian citizenship, and ambitions.

He is the head and front of the Nationalist heresy, which denies that Canada has any right to fight in the wars of the Empire—to do its duty as an autonomous part of the Empire. He has gained many disciples; but Bourassa and Nationalist anti-British treason did not make much headway till it was taken up, adopted, encouraged and officially and financially helped by the party of which Sir Robert Borden was, and is still, the recognised leader.

Nationalism first came to a head in Drummond-Arthabaska, when its first parliamentary member was elected.

The Borden government hailed the occasion as a good chance to "kill Laurier," by electing a member of the organisation which held Laurier as its deadly enemy.

The Borden government party sympathised with the election of the anti-British Nationalist, who was supported at that time by the whole body of Nationalists, including two of the Quebec members of the present Union Government.

When the Nationalist candidate won the Borden government party was in ecstacies—the first blow had been struck to "kill Laurier," and a prominent party leader, who spoke in Peterborough on Wednesday night, is said to have sent a telegram of congratulation to the successful Nationalist—no matter if he represented traitorous ideals—he was against Laurier, and that was enough—anything, even condoning and encouraging treason, to weaken the Liberal leader, and strengthen his opponents' chance for office.

The next step was to form an offensive alliance (offensive in the worst sense) with Bourassa and the Nationalists. In 1911, when every man who favoured larger trade with our neighbour was a "traitor"; when the flag was wildly waved; when imperial solidarity was demanded, Mr. Borden and his party made a compact with Bourassa and the Nationalists.

Mr. Bourassa was brought into an Ontario riding—the ultra traitor to help the ultra loyalists. He was introduced from a Conservative platform as "our leader," and the champion of shooting holes in the flag addressed the flag-wavers.

About thirty flag-shooting Nationalists were put up as candidates of the Conservative party in the Province of Quebec, and their election expenses were financed from the Conservative election fund.

Twenty-seven traitors were elected as supporters of Mr. Borden, and not only was their support accepted, but the terms of the disgraceful pact with treason was carried out. In forming his cabinet, Mr. Borden took three of the flag-shooters into his government as advisers of His Majesty the King.

Sir Robert has a tender heart for Nationalism yet. In forming his Union Cabinet, he included two Nationalists, disciples of Bourassa.

As a result of the official and material assistance of Mr. Borden and his party to Nationalism, which would otherwise have been a flash in the pan, it is a power in Quebec to-day.

For the past six or seven years we have had preached in Quebec the doctrine that Canada owes no duty to Britain—should not help her fight.

The innocent habitant swallowed this poison the more readily because he saw that the Borden government thought it was right or they wouldn't have had three Nationalists in the Cabinet.

In consequence of the Nationalist move, the recruiting spirit was killed in Quebec, and when war broke out there was no adequate response.

The blame for this condition that conduced to Canada being 100,000 short of her 500,000 quota, rests upon Nationalism, and Nationalism got its strength from the direct, material and official coddling and encouragement of the Borden Government.

Ultimately and finally the burden of blame for the failure of recruiting in Quebec, and the elements of disunity that threaten national schism, rests upon the Borden government.

Hon. Mr. Crothers, Minister of Labour in the Borden government, and, according to Mr. Burnham, its replica, the Borden Union Government, speaking in his home town, St. Thomas, said:

"If Quebec had done her duty as the other provinces, we should never have required the Military Service Act."

The blame for Quebec not doing its duty, rests upon the Borden government, whose Quebec members, as they and Bourassa had done for years — not only unmolested, but encouraged, strenuously, openly and persistently preached to the people of Quebec the Nationalist doctrine of Canadian non-participation in Britain's wars.

And Bourassa and Nationalism are encouraged yet. In Toronto, ex-Mayor Hocken the other night demanded that Sir Lomer Gouin should be "hanged, drawn and quartered," because he disapproved of conscription.

But Bourassa, the arch-traitor, who spoke from a Conservative platform as "our leader" in 1911, is allowed to pour out through the medium of Le Devoir, his newspaper, with a daily circulation of between 25,000 and 30,000, vitriolic virulent denunciations of conscription, and preach treason.

Why not discipline Mr. Bourassa, and shut down "Le Devoir"? Is it possible that the subscriptions paid for by the Conservative election fund in 1911 have not expired?

Or does the Bourassa compact to "kill Laurier," with the Borden government—which, according to Mr. Burnham persists in the Union government—still hold?

When so much fustian about "treason," and Quebec's failure are talked about, a reconsideration of the facts that place the responsibility upon the Borden government, when the Borden government is under trial, may be timely.

Make your dollars fight at the front by buying a Victory bond.

Mr. Hall's Address

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of West Peterborough in the House of Commons.

MASSES REQUIRE JUSTICE.

Now is the time in the history of this Country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles, and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people, who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

WAR POLICY.

To-day we are engaged in a great war with the Germanic powers in defence of Canada and the Empire. In the great struggle is involved the very existence of the freedom and liberty of mankind.

Our duty is plain. Our course is clear. We must prepare for any sacrifice of blood and treasure. We must fight Germany until we secure a just and lasting peace. In this resolve all Canadians are united from Lake Champlain to the North Pole, and from our furthest east to our furthest West.

Such being our Nation's resolution I pledge myself to support any effective war measure no matter from what source it may come. We must give immediate and constant support to our noble Canadian armies, who have covered themselves with glory. We must support them with men. We must feed them. The rich and poor alike must serve. Our only difference is in how to serve, but serve we will.

FOOD PRODUCTION.

Great Britain has appealed to Canada to send her 300,000,000 bushels of wheat to feed her teeming millions and those of Italy and of France.

This enormous quantity of wheat would feed 40,000,000 people for a whole year. This shows our Allies want food.

To this appeal the Borden-Rowell Government only answers, eat less, slay and eat the calf and the lamb and prepare for meatless days.

Let the Government encourage the Farmer to produce more. Give him agricultural implements duty free. Supply him with suitable labour on fair terms to till the soil. Use our Banks and Loan Companies to lend him money on fair and easy terms of payment to assist in every possible way to plant and produce foodstuffs. Supply the Farmer with steam or gasoline Tractors to enable one man to do the work of five. Shield us from the profiteer who plunders the farmer and robs the consumer, makes profit of a million a year and supports Sir Robert Borden and his hypnotizer, Sir Joseph Flavelle.

A forward policy on these lines would be a double blessing. It would reduce the cost of living at home and would help supply the necessities of our Allies overseas.

Remember one single North West farmer produces 2,000 bushels of wheat per year when well directed and equipped. 100,000 men would produce 200,000,000 bushels of wheat. Those already on the ground in the North West, properly equipped and manned, could produce 200,000,000 bushels of wheat. Those already on the ground in the North West, properly equipped and manned, could produce 200,000,000 bushels more.

I pledge myself, if elected, to support prompt and immediate efforts to reduce the high cost of living.

BORDEN DISCRIMINATES AGAINST ENGLAND.

Since the War began the Borden Government imposed an increased duty of 5 per cent. on British-made goods entering Canada. This should be removed at once. Our great Mother of Nations has troubles enough without the Borden Government thus increasing them.

PROFITEERS AND SOLDIERS.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers and to increase the pensions or allowances to our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of "cold charity" by this grateful Nation, on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

NO CONFIDENCE IN BORDEN.

Sir Robert Borden has been for six years, and is now, the Prime Minister of this Country. Its chief head and front, with full power to choose and remove his Ministers. He is appealing to this Country under an assumed name, but the policies and methods of his Government remain.

I cannot stop to repeat the well-known charges of grafting proved on sworn testimony from the mouths of unwilling witnesses, respecting the purchase of motors, of horses, of binoculars, of bandages, of drugs, of boots, of shells, of gauze fuse and of all the implements of war.

These unseemly transactions have taken place under the nose of Sir Robert Borden, who now seeks to stifle and conceal further investigation with the hollow pretense of so-called Union Government, which in no sense whatever represents true believers in the principles of justice, truth and Liberalism.

BORDEN CONDEMNED FOR SUPPLYING DEFECTIVE AMMUNITION.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden, who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross Rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian Boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross Rifle was used by our troops at the six battles of St. Julien, of Givenchy, of Festubert, of St. Eloi, of Zillebeke and of Sanctuary Wood. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed or wounded and some of them to-day languish in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Government without a chance of voting against it.

GRAFTERS.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

TO OUR NOBLE WOMEN.

I appeal to the women of this riding who are casting their vote for the first time to act on the pure impulse of your heart, come along and vote according to the dictates of your own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for you in these anxious times. I know your "beloved is white and ruddy"; the chiefest among ten thousand. His countenance "is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars," and by him and his I pledge myself to stand.

UNITY OF ACTION AND SENTIMENT.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side, the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

"With firmness in the right as God gives us to "see the right," I appeal to you, fellow electors, to press on to finish the great war in which we are engaged "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, his widow and the orphan, to do all which we may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace with all nations."

For these reasons I appeal to you, my fellow electors, for your vote and influence in the pending election.

Your Obedient Servant,

2d-115-1w-47 R. R. HALL.

any further active service as the result of his injuries.

PTE. BRADY HOME.

Pte. Ira Brady, Park Street, who enlisted here early in 1915, with the Peterboro Squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, was another veteran who reached home in last evening's party. Pte. Brady was wounded in France, and has seen much fighting with the C.M.R.'s.

CORP. HETHERINGTON.

Corp. George Hetherington, who originally left here with the 26th Battery, C.F.A., under Major Gerald Hall, and who was injured shortly after reaching France, was another of last night's arrivals. Corp. Hetherington was home on furlough after his accident so that this is his second home coming since he donned the khaki.

A 93RD MEMBER.

Proudly wearing the bronze button that showed that he had seen service in France, Pte. Alex. Walker, formerly of the 93rd Batt., had a broad smile on his face when he stepped off the train. Pte. Walker has good reason to smile too for while he is not as young as he used to be, and gave the age limit for service a hard twist, he nevertheless managed to get to France and do his bit. And there has been many a younger looking man who came back to Canada without seeing France because he was over age.

Sergt.-Major Tom Miller, of the 93rd Battalion, was with last night's party as far as Millbrook, and dropped off at that station to visit his home.

COMMON SERGEANT SON OF DICKENS

LONDON, Nov 16.—Henry Fielding Dickens, sixth son of Charles Dickens, the novelist, has just been appointed to the lucrative post of "Common Sergeant," as the Chief Justice of the London city courts is officially called. The salary of the post is $15,000 a year.

Mr. Dickens is 68 years old, and has been a practicing member of the London bar since 1873. His youngest son, Major Charles Dickens, was killed in action last year.

NOT HUNS BUT CAESARS

A well known historian, writing of the decline of the Roman Empire, uses the following words: "Thus faded away a polity which for centuries had been admitted by the entire civilized world to be normal and legitimate. Alike to governors and governed, the Empire had become a matter of course; as much a part of the eternal order of things as the rising and setting of the sun and the seasons of the year. With no sudden catastrophe but through the decay of generations, it fell to pieces. For good or evil nationalism succeeded Empire, and it is unlikely under modern conditions that any race will aspire to universal dominion or claim the heritage of the Cæsars."

This was written years ago, before the new soi-distant Rome had revealed itself to an astonished and embarrassed world. The author could not be expected to foresee the results of the next forty years, years which witnessed the development of Germany from disunion and comparative poverty to an empire at least superficially united and more than superficially wealthy and powerful. It has also witnessed the growth of an idea of Empire unparelleled in history. The heritage of the Cæsars, and more than that heritage, has been claimed by united Germany.

REQUIRES HIGH QUALITIES.

A grandiose scheme of world policy requires high qualities for its conception. Unfortunately, it requires quite other qualities for its fulfilment and maintenance, as Spain found to her cost. Never probably in the world's history have the two sets of qualities combined in any race. The Roman Empire grew, and lived, by chance, by compromise, by individual desires and endeavour, but not by an imperial scheme; the British Empire grew and lived in the same way. Will Germany be able to carry that heavy handicap of a logical elaborate co-ordinated scheme, ennunciated by professors and politicians, historians and poets, collectively foaming in a highly indignant manner at the haphazard and casual success of the British Empire?

The German World Emipre is not yet; indeed owing to the events in various parts of the globe it would seem to the casual observer to be more remote than it was, say, in 1913. But the idea of German Empire is in full, rotund existence in the Fatherland and it is possible to examine it, perhaps more dispassionately than it would be under the cultural influence of its realization.

THE MAIN POINT.

The main point to observe in the German claim to World Empire, is that it is made with sublime assurance on the ground of well established merit. German Kultur must (in the sense of the categorical imperative) be impressed upon the lesser and decadent races of Europe, the Latin, the Anglo-Saxon and the Slav stocks, not only in the interests of the conquerors but of the conquered. Germany, with her sweet inherent reasonableness, which has only been temporarily concealed by the mists of war, will take the remaining nations by the hand and point them kindly to the German Truth, and land them gently by the well-guarded paths of German domination. Incidentally she will sweep, with her disengaged hand, those monuments of their faith, their humanity and their art, of which the foundations were laboriously built centuries before the Prussian Kingdom appeared on the map of Europe, into nothingness and oblivion.

And she will firmly and quietly take under her own control all the strings of the world, for the greater glory of the German God and the greater benefit of the German race. An American writer, Mr. Swope, in his recent book entitled "Inside the German Empire," has chronicled the opinions of Professor von Stengal, a name well known in Germany, on this aspect of German dominion. In the new era this beatific Professor thinks that such things as Hague Conferences will be unnecessary. The administration of the world is Germany's mission. "The one condition of prosperous existence," remarks the Professor, "especially for neutrals, is submission to our supreme direction. Under our overlordship all international law would become superfluous."

A NEW GERMAN EARTH.

This opens a vista of a new German earth, a vista of neatly kept, highly serviceable routes which the German people, military, administrative and commercial pass to and fro, god-like, in pursuit of their German business. In the background, somewhat shadowy and obscure, a little diffident and anxious, are the others, the helot nations, also intent of Germany's business, and with a lively remembrance of the past, stayed and comforted by the assurance of Germany's justice, benignity and good faith.

But, lest we should suppose that the new world is to be a mere lotos land, a firm, almost a ponderous warning, is supplied by another German writer, Otto von Gottberg, in a pamphlet on "American Neutrality." He says: "Nature must have one ruler. We can see that in the beehive, in a pack of wolves, or in the hen coop." These zoological illustrations say all that need be said as to the German conception of human society. This conception is founded like all their conceptions on their experiences of their own country. The features of other countries are hardly worth the study of the potential German Imperialist. One wonders whether Herr von Bethmann Hollweg would describe the German states as a beehive, a wolf pack, or a coopful of hens.

IDEAL IS THERE.

The ideal is there—we are left in no doubt as to that. So far, of course, the actual realization of the Pan-Germanics combined with Imperium Germanism, has been somewhat limited. Its brilliant potentialities were however exhibited before the war in German colonial activities in Africa such as the suppression of the Herrero revolt; subsequently in their masterly administration of Belgium. These essays in imperialism speak for themselves. But not only is the Ideal there, we discern also the self confidence, the conscious merit, which renders the ideal so plausible to its originators. The epigram on Galba may be slightly modified in the case of Germany, and may run: "All men would have thought her capable of empire, if they had only heard her talk."

Should the German scheme fail in the result, to come to fruition, other nations will have some idea, from the biting experience of the last three years, what they have missed. They had only to give up their faith, and the life of their homes, their art and their commerce, their political ideals, and their personal dreams and desires, all that makes life gracious and kindly, human and adventurous, and they in the character of wolves in the pack or hens in the coop, would have received the blessing of German "direction" and "overlordship."

Professor von Stengal and Herr Otto von Gottberg must view with amazement the unmistakeable fact that the peoples of the allied nations are prepared to make any sacrifice to undergo any trial, rather than to allow this blessing to descend upon themselves and their children.

Two Americans of Military Age Are Beyond the Law

Two Ashburnham young men who had been reported to Chief Thompson as having failed to register under the Military Service Act were found to be American citizens and therefore did not come within the Canadian law. They are of military age and the Chief has reported them to the proper authorities, although he remarked that the two countries have not yet arranged for the exchange of respective nationals.

"E" Men Failed To Apply For Exemption

Two young men who had failed to comply with the regulations of the Military Act surrendered themselves to Chief Thompson this morning. They were "E" category men, but did not apply for exemption. The Chief turned them over to Major Scott, who has been sent to Peterborough to take charge of a local depot for the handling of defaulters under the Military Service Act.

Electric Light Pole Smashed Sewer Connections

Utilities Commission Will be Asked to Meet the Claim for Damages —Tenders Accepted for Snow Ploughing.

At a meeting of the Board of Works, held last evening, Mr. D. J. Burk, 591 Homewood Avenue, put in a claim for damages resulting from a broken sewer pipe due, it is said to an electric light pole, which had been placed directly over the sewer. The cost of excavating was placed at twenty-two dollars. The matter will be referred to the Utilities Commission. Mr. Burk, who was present at the meeting, said he was entitled to twenty-five dollars. The Commission will be asked to pay this amount.

A BALANCE.

A report to the committee showed a balance of about $2,800 in favour of the Board of Works Committee. The appropriation for the year was $22,300.

MORE POLES.

A report was read from City Engineer Parsons recommending that an application of the Utilities Commission to place the following poles, be granted: Three on Reid street, north of McDonnel; two on Brock street, west of the G.T.R.; three on Walkerfield Avenue, and two on Monaghan Road, south of Walkerfield Avenue.

SEWER CONNECTION.

A letter was read from J. E. Emmerson regarding his claims on account of his sewer connection having been blocked. In this matter the City Engineer will be instructed to see Mr. A. Brown, and try to ascertain whether the connection was laid on the property before it as laid on the street. If such was the case the City Engineer will open the connection on the street and ascertain whether the city's work was defective.

TENDERS FOR SNOW PLOUGHING.

The following tenders for the snow ploughing were received:

No. 2—
Wm. J. Stinson $190.00
E. Ferguson 209.00
E. B. Reid 165.00
No. 3—
E. Ferguson $400.00
No. 5—
R. Nicholls $125.00
No. 6—
R. Nicholls $128.00
C. Sexsmith 150.00
No. 7—
D. Conroy $170.00
No. 8—
B. Revoy $275.00
B. McCarrell 160.00
Albert Valois 200.00

The tender for No. 2 was accepted from E. B. Reid, for 5 and 6, from R. Nicholls, from D. Conroy and, 8, from B. McCarrell.

The City Engineer was authorized to arrange for the work in No. 3 and 4.

mitted to hospital suffering from a gunshot wound in the side. Pte. Small went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred to another battalion at the Front.

PTE. THOMAS PATRICK DONAGHUE.

Pte. Thomas Patrick Donaghue, a local boy who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, is to-day officially reported wounded. Pte. Donaghue originally enlisted here with the 33rd Battery, but was transferred to the 93rd, and went overseas with the Peterborough County Battalion.

PTE. W. W. BAILEY.

Pte. William Walter Bailey is another former Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion who is officially reported wounded. Pte. Bailey was a member of the Pioneer section of the 93rd, and after going overseas was transferred to another Canadian battalion in France.

PTE. J. E. RICH.

Miss Matilda Henry, 187 Bethune Street, received word to-day that Pt. John Edward Rich, No. 412518, who enlisted with the 39th in Peterborough, and was later transferred to another battalion, has been admitted to No. 3 Casualty Clearing Station. No particulars of his wounds were contained in the telegram.

Mrs. Norman Kellingbeck received word that her husband, Pte. N. Killingbeck, has arrived safely in Halifax.

Mrs. W. L. Evans, 505 Sherbrooke street, has received word that her husband, Private William Evans, has arrived at Halifax on his way home. Pte. Evans went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and for some time was in a hospital in France.

Mrs. N. McMahon, 114 Robinson Street, has received a copy of the burial report in regard to Pte. James Buckingham, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action on the 9th of May, 1917, while fighting with the 21st Battalion.

The report states that Pte. Buckingham was buried at Arleux-en-Gohelle, 4 1-4 miles south of Lens, France, and that a wooden cross, with particulars of the deceased inscribed thereon, had been erected to his memory.

A PROTEST AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PERTH, Ont., Nov. 16.—Under the auspices of the Farmers' Club of Perth five hundred farmers paraded the streets of the town here last night to the town hall and later many townsmen joined in voicing their opposition to the manner in which conscription was affecting them in depleting their farms of needed help, and in a few cases requiring that the farmer either sell or rent his farm inside of, in the majority of cases, two months, and be ready to go when drafted into the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

This is the first case in the Dominion of any organized efforts along this line being made by the agriculturists. As a result of the meeting a resolution was drawn up and forwarded to the Minister of Agriculture explaining the grounds of complaint.

POLICE CONFERENCE THIS AFTERNOON TO DISCUSS MILITARY LAW

Chief Thompson gathered the entire police force, including the detectives, in the court room this afternoon for a "chalk talk" on their duties under the Military Service Act. Every man was in full uniform, with helmets, polished buttons and belts, creating an atmosphere of ceremony that is reserved for rare occasions. In fact this afternoon's conference was almost an event breaking in upon the humdrum of every day routine.

While Chief Thompson has not hurried thoughtlessly to turn his forces loose after military defaulters, he has not been idle since receiving official instructions on Wednesday. He has gone over the various clauses of the law, underlining the salient points with red ink, and was fully prepared to point them out to the men and discuss them.

He stated that the meeting was to take up the military service law and a few other things, but did not offer any details of the caucus. It may be assumed that following this afternoon's gathering the city will be cleaned up of whatever defaulters may be attempting to hide in the crowd.

A Locomotive Every Hour

That is the Contribution of Baldwin Locomotive Works

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PHILADELPHIA, Penna., Nov. 16. —A locomotive an hour is the contribution of the Baldwin Locomotive Works to the allied war machinery. President Alva B. Johnston announced to-day that the 20,000 workmen are turning out 78 locomotives a week, one for each working hour.

LAKEFIELD PERSONALS

Lakefield, Nov. 16. — Miss Greta Trude of Smith is visiting friends in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor of Warsaw were in the village yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Garbutt, and Miss Vera, were visiting friends in the village on Wednesday.

Mr. D. Fitzgerald spent the week-end at his home here.

The Payne hunting party arrived home to-day from the Parry Sound district. The hunters state that the deer are plentiful and it was no trouble to secure their number.

Mr. Henry Simpson of Newcastle, spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. W. Madill spent a few days at Buckhorn on business.

Miss Condon of Peterboro spent Tuesday in the village.

Mr. George Spence was in Peterboro on Wednesday.

It was the first week that the Jinkses, who had fallen heir to considerable property, had been in their new home. Mrs. Jinks was giving a dinner party with the fond hope that from this occasion she would be fairly launched in society. "Lena," said Mrs. Jinks to her new cook, "be sure to mash the peas thoroughly to-night."

"What, ma'am?" exclaimed the amazed cook. "Mash the peas?"

"Yes, that is what I said, Lena, mash the peas," repeated the mistress. "It makes Mr. Jinks very nervous at dinner to have them roll of his knife."

"The Film of Fear" Examiner's New Serial

After all, to be jealous is only a woman's way of paying tribute to another woman's charms, but as Richard Duvall pithily puts it in the Examiner new serial story "The Film of Fear," which commences in to-morrow's (Saturday) issue, "there are ways of showing appreciation that have their faults."

A woman chose one of those ways to pay her tribute to the beautiful and successful young actress, Ruth Morgan. In consequence when the story opens, Ruth seems in imminent danger of losing that greatest of all possessions, her beauty.

It took the combined efforts of Richard Duvall, famous detective, and of his wife, Grace, to trace the mystery that ensued from the effects of the unknown woman's almost uncanny cleverness, and so finally put an end to a reign of terror in the big studio. Even then it took a woman to catch a woman. Brilliant solver of crimes that he is—and those who know this disciple of M. Le Fevre through such stories as "One Million Francs," "The Ivory Snuff Box, and "The Blue Lights" will recognise and welcome his return to mystery delving—Duvall would have been up against a blank wall had not his wife taken a hand.

There is much of the psychological in this newest story of Arnold Fredericks' which adds to the baffling maze into which a beautiful young woman is plunged. The gradual unfolding of a series of startling developments is so unusual and brisk that "The Film of Fear" stands on a par with, if not superior to, other stories in which the Duvalls have pitted their brains and nerve aginst mysterious crime.

Nor is it a story to "pick up." There is a whip at the very end that will make the reader go straight through without stop till the last word is read.

Don't miss the first instalment to-morrow.

Found Coppers Accumulated Very Rapidly

A well-known citizen, who holds a responsible position with a large manufacturing concern, in this city, some time ago decided to put by, in a proper receptacle, (cold storage, as it were), all the cent coins which came into his possession, through making purchases in these days of 9c, 47c, 59c and 98c so-called bargains, with the most astonishing results.

Therefore, the said citizen looked upon these coins as a sort of encumbrance to his pocket, perhaps on account of their weight, at any rate he disposed of them very quickly by giving them to the younger members of the family, dropping them in gum machines and other sundry methods. But presto, all this is changed. He reasoned out that they amounted to quite a sum each year, and decided to find out for himself what it really was. Thereupon the box, mentioned was requisitioned, and the coins deposited therein. And now another and a larger box will have to be provided to hold the ever-increasing flow of coins, as several hundreds are now corralled.

Whilst the objective of the citizen is very praiseworthy, still it would not be well for the public at large to collect this currency in such a manner, as the withdrawal of these cents from circulation would seriously inconvenience the masses, generally, and the merchants, owing to the scarcity, would have to ticket their wares 5c, 10c, 25c and 50 cents, etc. In these times of high-priced bacon and flour, with potatoes soaring upwards, it is not advisable to further afflict a long-suffering people.

Nothing gives the average woman more pleasure than to have the street car conductor miss her.

A considerate wife will not insist upon her husband doing more than two-thirds of the housework.

GUNNER AMBROSE DORRIS,

Who returned home last night from overseas service, after three years and four months' absence. He was in France and Belgium for twenty-seven months with the 4th Battery, C. F. A.

AN AEROPLANE WAS INVENTED 70 YEARS AGO

An old faded handkerchief with a printed design showing a steam-propelled aeroplane in full career for China, owned by Mrs. A. M. Snowden, of Southwold, Suffolk, depicts the aeroplane built by F. Stringmellow in 1848 with which, so it is said, successful "flights" were accomplished on the downs at Chard. There is a close resemblance between that machine, built nearly 70 years ago, and a modern monoplane. The broad, fan-shaped tail with which Stringfellow's machine was equipped is the main distinction in the older design, and Stringfellow had admittedly modelled his plane on the design conceived by Sir George Cayley in 1809. The great novelty introduced by Stringfellow was the steam equipment. An engine and boiler were crowded into the under-carriage, whatever room remained being allotted to the passengers. The machine had two propellers, each three feet in diameter, which were driven by pulley bands, and it was provided with three wheels for coursing along the ground.

The old machine was a nine days' wonder, but there is no record that it ever got beyond the experimental stage and a few unsteady "swoops" on the downs. It is recorded that it was deficient in equilibrium, "a puff of wind being sufficient to upset it."

It was of course, the butt of all the satirists. The handkerchief (which has preserved the out line of the old machine) pretends that the flying monster was capable of going to China "in twenty-four hours certain," passengers being landed by parachute at places en route. The steersman is crying, "Hallo, Bill Jackson, keep your eye on Malta, and get ready to drop the parcels. Tell the Bombay gent in No. 5 to have his parachute in readiness, tie his hat on, and shut his mouth, as it's "blowing a stiff breeze." Passengers are seen descending over the various countries of the earth, and at the journey's end the Emperor of China, surrounded by his wise men, is awaiting with trepidation the arrival of the aeroplane.

SCENE FROM "THE BIRD OF PARADISE"

"The Bird of Paradise," a drama of Americans and modern Hawaii will be seen here at "The Grand" next Wednesday, Nov. 21, for two performances.

The play is by Richard Walton Tully, the author of "The Flame," "The Rose of the Rancho," and other pieces of almost equal renown.

There is a love story in the play—the love of Paul Wilson, a young physician, and "Luana," the beautiful 'child of Mount Pele,' the sacred volcano, whom all good Kanakas worship wherever the ancient gods are not forgotten.

In this play the American abroad, both as trader and as missionary, is better described than in any other drama which has been written, and, indeed Mr. Tully's accuracy has seldom been equalled in books. The futility of trying to make over an epochal visualization in a decade, and the prevailing instinct for money-making, both receive their touch of gentle, but certain, satire at Mr. Tully's pen.

Odette Goulder, a 19-year-old discovery of Manager Morosco's, plays Luana with almost sensational force, and an insight which is absolutely startling, and the remainder of the cast is of high order, including a native Hawaiian troupe of singers and players.

MAY SEIZE GOODS FOUND AS HOARDS IN 8 WAREHOUSES

Buildings Filled to Capacity with Many of the Food Necessities of Life

WAREHOUSE OWNER TOLD AUTHORITIES

Arthur Williams, Food Administrator, Explains Government View of Situation

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Agents of the United States Secret Service discovered eight warehouses in the lower west side of Manhattan, packed from cellars to roofs with sugar, salt, canned goods, cheese, butter, eggs, coffee and other non-perishable foodstuffs. All of these goods, it was learned by the officials, have been held for some time by food speculators, who are now ready to dump them on the market at large profits.

Eight different men are mentioned in connection with this alleged hoarding of necessities. One of these is reported to have filled and sold out one of the warehouses twice, making a clear profit of 100 per cent. each time. It was intimated by secret service officials that the warehouses and their contents will be seized. The first information on these specific cases of hoarding is said to have been given to the government by the owner of one of the warehouses, who discovered what was being done with his property after he had rented it.

It was reported that the federal agents have discovered that a number of so-called chain grocery stores have been collecting huge quantities of supplies in loft buildings in the old wholesale dry goods district. The authorities were not prepared to say that this constituted hoarding of foodstuffs, as it had not been ascertained whether the goods being gathered were to be held indefinitely or to be put out to the public at once.

Implied criticisms of the Federal Food Administrator, Mr. Hoover, for his failure to act on the food hoarding cases reported by Chief Flynn, of the United States Secret Service, nearly two weeks ago, were answered by Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator for New York city. Mr. Williams said that the suggestion that there had been unnecessary delay between receiving the reports and acting on them, came from persons who do not understand the situation.

"The Secret Service report is only as to the presence of goods and elsewhere," said Mr. Williams. "That which was recently made public in this city, with a certain flourish of sensational effect, relates to goods stored elsewhere as well as under different forms of ownership and which, at least to considerable extent, had not been previously included in any routine reports of stocks," he said.

As an illustration Mr. Williams said that a reported storage of 61,000 cases of milk was found to amount to 61,000 cases. This could not have been known, he said, but for the good work of the Secret Service. Concluding, Mr. Williams said:

"Some question arises as to the identity of the consignor, as to the consignee, and there seems to be some confusion also as to names in which they they are known, the original report indicating a number of distinctly German type. It is apparent that very careful investigation has to be made to determine facts without doing possible injustice, and even now the investigation is not complete.

"The report of large hoarding was not given out immediately, partly to avoid the possibility of sensationalism, partly to avoid any possibility of doing an injustice to an innocent and uninformed owner, partly to be sure as to the facts before taking taking such measures as the conditions might justify."

...milton Men Are Acquitted

Are Found Not Guilty of Manslaughter in Death of Dr. MacRobbie

HAMILTON, Nov. 14.—J. H. B. Smith, J. J. McAuliffe, Walter Scott, and S. Asseltine were to-night acquitted on the charge of manslaughter, to which they in the morning pleaded not guilty, in connection with the death of Dr. MacRobbie, who was found dead in the Crescent Oil Company's office, on Sunday, August 19. Mr. Justice Latchford,, who is presiding at the Assizes, after hearing the Crown's case, dismissed them all without allowing the case to go to the jury. The evidence was similar to that given at the inquest and preliminary hearing, and was to the effect that the four accused and the doctor had been drinking.

Dr. McRobbie was found with his skull crushed in on the premises of the Crescent Oil Co. Scott, McAuliffe and Smith were in the building in an intoxicated condition. J. J. McAuliffe is a real estate agent; Harry Smith, Manager of the Crescent Oil Co.; J. Scott, an architect, and Herbert Asseltine, caretaker of the Oil Company's premises.

SUCCESSFUL ATTACK BY BRITISH PLANES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 16.— Two German planes were destroyed, two more forced down out of control, and bombs were dropped over the German aeroplane sheds at Randzaeme, in a sea plane raid announced by the Admiralty to-day. The raiders failed to reach the Uytkerke aerodrome owing to the high winds, and therefore turned their attention to the Randzaeme aviation depot. All the British machines returned.

JOHN WOOD FATALLY SHOT.

Inquest Opened Into Peculiar Occurrence Near Actinolite.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 15. — A fatal shooting is reported from the vicinity of Actinolite. John Wood, a young man, with his wife and child, was driving along a road, when they overtook two lads who had a gun. They had some conversation with the boys, when one, it is said, pointed the gun at Mr. Wood. The gun was discharged, the contents entering his body. He was given medical attendance, but without avail, and he died. Coroner Dr. H. C. Kindred, of Tweed, was called. He empaneled a jury and ordered a post-mortem. The inquest will be resumed on Friday at Bridgewater.

The Victory Loan Specially Recommended To Farmers And Employees Of Factories

"Soldiers win battles, but money wins wars," was one of the striking epigrams Mr. W. L. McKinnon used in his explanatory address on the object, operation and organization of Canada's $150,000,000 Victory Loan at the Grand Opera House, last night. "Money fights, and every dollar counts a blow," he declared, in a plain presentation of the conditions that imperatively demand the success of this loan, and if possible, that it be oversubscribed one hundred per cent. for a grand total of three hundred millions.

The spirit of patriotism that should animate the Canadian people in their response to this appeal to maintain the supply of the sinews of war was the motive worked and stimulated by the forceful speeches of His Honour Judge Huycke and Capt. Oke, late Chaplain of the 92nd overseas Battalion.

Mr. McKinnon added the economic aspect of the Loan, reminding his audence that, if it should fail, serious financial problems would follow in its wake, affecting all classes in the Dominion. His reference to this consideration was scarcely an admonition for all signs point to a splendid total when the last bond has been purchased on November 30th, but should the campaign fail many industries would have to close, farmers would have to accept lower prices for their products and the whole machinery of Canada's war enterprise would suffer a setback.

WANT CO-OPERATION OF PEOPLE.

Mr. McKinnon pointed to the menacing force of the enemy opposing us with the full weight of their resources for the purpose of putting down the freedom of the world. They must be met by corresponding unity and, if the people of Canada unite and direct their power the victory loan will roll up to the success the country desires.

In the previous loan early this year, there were only 40,800 subscribers.

"Canada has sent 400,000 men overseas, or has them on the way," Mr. McKinnon said.

"Can it be that we will send ten men to the front for every one man who lends money to the Government when it is most needed?

Or that three of our soldiers are killed or wounded for every man that lends his money to the Government?

I don't blame the people of Canada for that state of affairs, but if they don't rise to their opportunity and responsibility they will be unquestionably to blame."

WANT SMALL SUBSCRIBERS.

Mr. McKinnon explained that the former loan had been floated by the professional brokers and bankers. They concentrated their selling efforts on their monied clients. Hence the number of subscribers was comparatively small. The fringe of the country was not touched.

"Our present effort is a campaign of education, to instruct the great Canadian people what these bonds mean, why it is to their advantage to buy them according to their means, and how their money can be used in a splendid patriotic endeavour. It is nothing less than a house-to-house canvass of the whole Dominion of Canada."

Mr. McKinnon traced the Victory Loan organisation from Sir Thos. White, Minister of France, to the individual canvasser.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn accepted the chairmanship of Peterborough County's committee at the request of Sir Thos. White. He gives practically all of his time to the work from purely a sense of patriotism. He receives no other reward. The local machinery has already been explained in the press.

There is the element of a sporting contest to the campaign, although a very serious contest. Mr. McKinnon pointed out. There is lively competition of team against team, county against county, division against division, and finally, province against province This factor creates a certain interest that will deepen as the work progresses.

The Eastern Ontario division, of which Peterborough is one of the eight counties, has an allotment of $5,...,000, and its first three days show a total subscription of $2,579,000.

"I hope you will not quit when we have reached our objective. Let us go the limit."

THE INSTALLMENT PLAN.

Mr. McKinnon gave the details of the plan of paying for $50 and $100 bonds in weekly installments of $1 and $2, respectively. "There is scarcely a citizen in Peterborough who is unable to pay one dollar a week at this time. And don't stop at one bond; take as much as you can save within the next year. If you need the money at any time the banks will buy your bonds."

Mayor Duffus was chairman of the meeting and those on the platform with him were Mr. McKinnon, Capt. Oke, Mr. R. L. Warren, Judge Huycke, Mr. J. J. Hastley, Rev. C. J. Phelan, Mr. V. Eastwood, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., W. H. Bradburn, Dr. Malcom McCulloch.

Captain Oke described the battle of Vimy Ridge in a graphic and realistic word picture. Passing to the Victory Loan he stated that Britain had loaned five billions of dollars to her Allies and Dominions during the past three years, in addition to her own vast war expenditure of twenty-one billions. While she is able to continue the financing of her own efforts, Canada has been asked to assume our responsibilities. Not only is it our filial duty to help the Mother Country in her extremity, but we should recognize that before the war British capital has invested three billions of dollars in the development of this country, and we should be ready and eager to repay that assistance.

Capt. Oke stated that Canada's cheese and grain was bought this year but few of the farmers knew where the money came from. Lord Baeding arranged that if the Canadian bankers would raise one hundred millions he would get the remaining three hundred millions.

"We are abundantly able to raise the new loan. There never was a time when money was more plentiful or more liquid."

The farmer and the factory are especially appealed to, and every farmer in the county should be given an opportunity of subscribing.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn requested the citizens to make their contributions through the canvassers or the headquarters office on Hunter street. With their hearty co-operation the committee expected to bring Peterborough's effort close to one million dollars.

Judge Huycke's address was a strong appeal to the community spirit of Peterborough. Many boys had gone, others were going and the citizens remaining behind, when subscribing to the Loan, should realize that they are rendering aid to the soldiers who have gone from this city.

During the evening musical numbers were given by Mr. Tom Ward and the Opera House orchestra, and the Victory Loan motion pictures lucidly explained the essential facts of the new bonds issue.

A vote of thanks was tendered the management, who placed the Opera House at the disposal of the County committee for the meeting.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN HOLD REGULAR MEETING

Qualifications Necessary for Women Voting Were Discussed

The qualifications necessary for women voting on the Federal elections was the chief point of discussion at yesterday's meeting of the Council of Women. This was found, through Sheriff Hall, to be extended to the wives, mothers, and sisters of all Canadian soldiers who are at present overseas, or who have been service.

A communication was received advising the Council of Women that the Board of Education is looking into the question of the care of the feeble-minded, and that there will probably in the near future be auxiliary classes on such in the schools. The School Board thinks that the Government has too much on its hands at present to take up the question thoroughly. In the meantime the School Board will act.

Mrs. Mann, who was appointed to look into the means of preventing unsanitary conditions under the street gratings and stopping the disgusting habit of spitting on the street, reported that in conversation with the sanitary inspector she was told specific cases of unsanitary condition must be shown of fills under gratings. In the matter of spitting, the only preventative suggested was to make an example of a person found doing so on the street by calling an officer. The law would then probably be enforced.

The Mayor will be asked to have the by-law enforced, particularly on the Market.

Series of Addresses.

Dr. Birnie gave the first of a series of addresses on the great social evil which threatens to spread through the world. Her address was heard by all with keen interest, and it was decided that the matter should be given more publicity and dealt with more freely for the protection of the public.

Military Police Will Not Hold Up Men On Streets

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Nov. 16.—There will be no stopping of men on the streets for the purpose of seeking out evaders of the Military Service Act as far as the military police are concerned, Prov. Marshall Major Alex. Sinclair said to-day. Both military and civil police authorities will co-operate to bring about the highest degree of enforcement to the Military Service law, he said, but there would be no special or concentrated effort on the part of the local military force which is about one hundred strong, to seek out the defaulters.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members

Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Mrs. Maloney appeared before the tribunal on behalf of her tenant, John H. Leahy. The latter is an "A2" man and works Mrs. Maloneys' farm. The applicant, who is one of six brothers, claimed exemption on the grounds that his work as a farmer is of national importance. A second brother of military age works out in Douro and is scheduled to appear before tribunal number 275. Four of the six brothers are of military age. The brothers work three hundred and fifty acres of land between them. One brother has been killed in action, and another brother is said to be physically unfit.

Arrangements will be made to have the brothers appear in a body before the tribunal.

Willing to Go.

Benjamin Foster arrived in the city on Wednesday from a lumber camp north of Parry Sound. Foster was willing to report for duty providing he passed the doctors. He returned to the tribunal yesterday afternoon with his medical sheet marked "E" and was exempted until his class is called.

"I am not claiming exemption," said Foster.

Claimed to be Over Age.

George Philips, another lumberman, from the north country, received an "A2" certificate. In claiming exemption, Philips said he had rheumatism.

"You can't expect us to ignore the finding of the Medical Board," said Judge Huycke.

Applicant said he had a fifty acre farm which he worked in the summer time. Philips has one team of horses which he lets out in the winter time for their keep.

The Boa I did not approve of Philips' method of farming. The applicant was exempted until the first of the year after Philips had changed his claim for total exemption to that of temporary exemption. Later in the afternoon Philips again appeared before the Board with the information that he was over the age limit. The Board refused to change the original ruling and referred Philips to the appeal court.

Was Disallowed.

Edmund Quinlan, an "A2" man, applied for exemption on physical grounds. Quinlan was rejected on two previous occasions and at the suggestion of the Board decided to abandon his claim for exemption. Quinlan was employed with a lumber company north of Parry Sound.

The exemption was disallowed.

Brothers to Appear.

William Spencer, an "A2" man and one of the quartette of lumbermen who came in from Parry Sound, applied for exemption on the grounds of being a farmer. Spencer has another brother on the farm. The applicant was instructed to find out what disposition had been made of his brother, and report back to the Board.

Are Exceptions.

Fred Haggart, a one-armed veteran of the present war, appeared before the tribunal with a claim for exemption. Needless to say the claim was not granted as the Military Service Act does not apply to men who have served overseas and have received an honourable discharge. Haggart said that he had been instructed to appear before the Board by the Customs House officials.

"Those people must be crazy down there," said Judge Huycke.

Both the local post office and customs house authorities insisted on returned soldiers in their employ applying for exemption despite the fact that such men are classed as exceptions to the Act.

Temporary Exemption.

Michael George Leahy was exempted until October the first next. Leahy is a farmer, and together with two brothers, aged fifteen and nineteen respectively, works a farm. Their father, John Leahy, is unable to do much work. It developed that within the last two months a farm has been transferred to the applicant for exemption. The court disregarded this element of the case.

A Russian Subject.

The case of I. Simmons, involving a question of nationality, has been disposed of. Mr. Joseph Wearing, who was instructed by the tribunal to look into the matter, brought in the following report:

The man's parents were Russian Poles, en route to England, when he was born in Paris during a sojourn there of two days. He remained in Great Britain with his parents till manhood, later removing to Canada. Neither he nor his parents were ever naturalized in Great Britain, Canada or elsewhere.

According to the common law of England a man's nationality depended entirely on his place of birth and the principle of dissoluable allegiance was tenaciously held right into the last century. Although the law in these respects has long since been modified, this man is alien according to British law. The question is whether he is French or Russian? France allows the nationality of children born to aliens to follow that of the parents, therefore this man is a Russian subject and is not amenable to the provisions of the Military Service Act.

Norman Bruce Ballantyne, an "A2" man, claimed exemption on the grounds that he was a farmer and that his work was of national importance. The applicant, who has a brother, was instructed to appear next week with his brother. Ballantyne, together with his brother and father work a two hundred acre farm in North Monaghan. The applicant asked for another medical examination, which was granted.

Cases Disposed of.

The application for exemption of N. V. Winston, 326 Water street, was disallowed.

W. L. Belleghem, 188 Hunter street, an "E" man, was exempted until his class is called upon.

H. C. Fulford, 556 Water street, an "A2" man, appeared before the Board, and his claim for exemption was disallowed.

B. W. Browett, Y.M.C.A., a "C" man, was exempted until "C" class is called.

Judgment was reserved in the case of S. R. Hodgins, 586 Charlotte street, an "A2" man.

A. L. Lilley, 76 Auburn street, an "E" man, was exempted until his class is called.

The exemption claim of Leo. Herlihey, 676 Stewart street, an "A2" man, was disallowed.

R. D. Pulver, Y.M.C.A., an "E" man, was exempted until "E" class is called.

G. H. Flower, 417 Dublin street, an "A2" man, was allowed until June the first next to report.

Bruce Quinn, 478 Mark street, a "C" man, was exempted until his class is called.

C. M. Moncur, 407 George street, a "C" man, was exempted until "C" class is called.

M. M. Kerneghan, 497 Aylmer street, another "C" man, was granted exemption until his class is called.

The claim for exemption of J. F. Rogers, 321 Simcoe street, an "A2" man, was disallowed.

TRIBUNAL No. 276

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS

W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members

Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

Included With Married Men.

Richard Arthur Heard, 237 George street, appealed on domestic grounds, as the support of his mother and two sisters. He was transferred to class four, which puts him in the position of a married man with a family.

Appeal Disallowed.

Lawrence Meagher sought exemption on domestic grounds. One brother has been killed at the front and the applicant is helping support two invalided brothers. Exemption disallowed.

Not a Citizen of Canada.

Elario Antonio Lucano, 136 Park street, born in Italy, has lived in Peterborough about six years, but hasn't taken out naturalization papers.

"We haven't anything to do with him," said Mr. Aylmer, taking up the next appeal.

Young Farmer Exempted.

Alexander Ivison Edmison, of the 3rd concession of Ennismore, is helping his father farm 140 acres. His appeal for exemption was allowed on the condition that he continues at his present work.

"Do you think you are needed at home more than at the front," Mr. Moore asked him.

"That's for you to decide," replied Edmison.

Discharged Soldier Not Included.

Mr. W. G. Morrow, Water street, appeared for his son, Andrew Melville Morrow, who enlisted at the outbreak of the war and was invalided home shell-shocked.

Mayor Duffus remarked that this case was not included under the Act as the applicant for exemption was a discharged soldier. Simply a record of the appeal was taken. Gunner Morrow's brother was killed in action on October 26th, and another brother is still at the front.

"Well, Mr. Morrow, you certainly have done your share," Mr. Aylmer observed as he handed him a formal record of his appearance before the tribunal.

It was stated that honourably discharged soldiers do not come within the jurisdiction of the tribunals.

Herbert L. Simpson was sent back to the medical board yesterday upon his claim that he had not told the doctors on his first examination that he had a swollen leg and other disabilities, returned with his category unchanged. His appeal for exemption was disallowed.

Sidney Todd, a thresher of North Monaghan, who based his appeal on the service he was rendering the farming community as the owner of a threshing machine, was granted an exemption until February 1st, 1918, by reason of his business obligations.

Antoine Lazue, Romaine street, an "A2" man, claimed that he was medically unfit. He enlisted at the outbreak of the war, but was discharged from service at Valcartier. Exemption was disallowed.

F. M. Kitney, Otonabee, told the tribunal that his father, two married brothers and himself have a partnership agreement to work their farm. Exemption was refused.

James E. Flett, Sherbrooke street, a C.P.R. telegraph operator, presented his claim on the ground of the importance of his work. Exemption disallowed.

Harry Westley Wildman told the City Hall Tribunal this afternoon that when he appeared before the Medical Board he neglected to draw their attention to his high insteps and weak ankles, which he was confident would render him unfit for marching.

"Who is going to examine you now?" Mr. Aylmer asked him.

"I got to go back to be examined again," Wildman replied in a rather belligerent tone.

"No, you're not. We are sending you down to the Registrar in Kingston, and he can do with you whatever he decides."

Wildman put one foot up on Mr. Aylmer's desk and pointed to his high instep. He was immediately told to put it down.

"I'm not a doctor," Mr. Aylmer said. "You thought you would take a chance with the doctors and if you got A2 then you would claim an exemption. You should have told them about any disabilities you had. It couldn't have bothered you very much, or you would have told the Medical Board."

Wildman remarked that "they" should go back to the North after the men who were said to be hiding there.

"You've done your duty in reporting to the Medical Board and filling your claim," Mr. Aylmer replied; "but you fell short in not taking the right attitude in your examination. If you had any disabilities, you should have told the doctors. If there are any men hiding, they will be gradually rounded up, and they will be in a far worse position than you."

Wildman was instructed to carry his appeal to the Deputy Registrar at Kingston.

F. G. Carpenter, 182 Hazlitt street, an "A2" man, was granted exempted until he ceases to be a farmer.

V. M. Powell, 588 George street, and R. G. Northcott, 416 Mark street, "E" and "C" men respectively, were exempted until their classes are called.

Charles H. Barringer, a "B3" man, was exempted until his class is called.

John E. Cronin, an "E1" man, was disposed of in a similar manner.

Albert Mahaffey is not scheduled to appear until the first of December. Mahaffey was sent up for medical examination.

Life wouldn't be worth the living i fit were a continuous succession of pudding and ice cream.

"Woman, lovely woman," seems to be proper, but "Man, lovely man," dosen't sound good to us.

POLICEMEN ARE REFUSED EXEMPTION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Nov. 16.—This was policeman's day at Tribunal 352, Yonge and Davenport road, when a list of seventy-nine of the Toronto police force appeared. The Police Department had put in appeals for their exemption in the national interest, but the tribunal did not take this view and fourteen were ordered into khaki.

The Vatican Issues Appeal To Save Civilians

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, Nov. 16.—The Vatican to-day issued instructions to Papal representatives in Vienna and Munich to appeal if necessary to the Emperor and the Kaiser for orders to German and Austrian troops in Italy strictly to respect the rights of civilians. Emphasis was laid on the necessity that women, children, members of the clergy and hospitals and churches be spared from attack.

ONE-THIRD OF THE LOAN HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED

TORONTO, Nov. 16. — Subscriptions to the Victory Loan as reported from all parts of Canada up to noon to-day totalled $35,775,800, according to incomplete returns received at Dominion headquarters to-day. The Ontario Provincial total so far reported remains at the same figure as last night, that is $33,065,150.

Thursday provided another good day for the Peterboro workers and it is stated that to-day's figures will be a big surprise.

The results to-date are as follows:

Monday	$168,600
Tuesday	82,300
Wednesday	94,900
Thursday	74,500
	$321,100

Local Firm Gets A Clean Bill of Health

The Montreal Star has a despatch from its Ottawa correspondent dealing with the report of Messrs. Henderson, Clarkson and Brodie, the commission investigating the packers' business. It is said the report will show that the Wm. Davies Company made a profit of 50 per cent. in 1916 on the basis, not of the original capital, but of all the money arising out of profit working in its business.

The Star says: "The Matthews-Blackwell Company is also reported on, but it is understood that the commission gives it a clean bill of health."

NEW COMPOSITION BY MR. HUYCKE

"March Characteristique" Will Be Played at Patriotic Recital To-night

At the organ recital to-night at Murray Street Baptist Church, Mr. Asa Huycke's new composition, "Patrol Characteristique," will be rendered as an organ and piano duet by Miss Ida Sanderson and Mr. Huycke.

In the distance a band is heard approaching, first the drum, then in quick succession tubas and horns; then trombones, cornets and smaller instruments come into prominence. As the band approaches and marches past the piccolo livens up things by playing a variation on the trio part of the march; then the reeds are heard in a wild skirl, followed up gradually by the larger instruments until finally nothing is heard but the bass horns and an occasional thump of the big drum.

The proceeds of the Recital are to be given to the Red Cross Society.

Truck Went Into the River

One of the big service trucks of the Canadian General Company broke through the platform of the waterworks dam this afternoon, and when last heard from was lost to view in fifteen feet of water. Six men and the driver who were on the truck at the time had a narrow escape. The six men in question were riding on the back end of the truck and managed to slip off as the truck disappeared in the hole below. The platform broke over one of the wheel pits.

Farmers Discuss Hog Production

District Representative McRae met a number of the Reeves of the county and other farmers at the City Hall this afternoon to discuss the problem of how to increase the production of hogs. Reeve Anderson of Otonabee and Reeve Walsh of Douro were among those present.

Ketchecum Party Had Good Luck

The Ketchecum Hunt Club, Messrs. M. Comstock, H. A. Morrow, W. G. Morrow, H. C. Winch, Robert Stuart, Chicago, J. H. Anderson, J. D. Collins, W. H. Hill, F. L. Roy, R. J. Munro, E. F. Mason, W. C. Ackerman, W. H. Denham and Drs. Armstrong and MacPherson, returned to-day from Lake Ketchecum. The party secured 14 deer and 1 bear.

A RARE CHANCE FOR MEN

Men who have waited until now to leave their orders for a new winter suit or overcoat should read the Globe Tailoring Company's offer on another page. "Waste not, want not," is a good old saying that men should remember these days, when leaving their measure for winter garments. The Globe Tailoring have decided on such a remarkably low figure for thrifty men who order on Saturday or Monday that there is sure to be no waste or extravagance. According to ruling prices, men can count on a saving of at least $5 or $8 on a new suit or overcoat. Mr. J. L. Wyatt, a practical tailor, will ensure satisfaction in the correct booking of your order and making your exact measurements. Read the announcement elsewhere.

THE PROGRAMME AT THE EMPIRE

"The Apple Tree Girl" as a Feature To-night—First Time in Canada

To-night's programme at the Empire Theatre is a real fine one. The special feature drama, "The Apple Tree Girl," an Edison production, is showing for the first time in Canada, and is an excellent picture.

Billie Burke will appear in "Gloria's Romance," chapter six, and entitled "Hidden Fires," and a comedy, "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," entitled "Outs and Ins," make up a finely balanced programme which you will enjoy. Matinees 5c and 10c. Evenings, 15c.

SOMETHING REAL

With so much contradictory newspaper talk, a person hardly knows what to believe these days. Advertising is in the same class, and it is refreshing to find a store giving everything it promises, and embracing astonishing values. B. Chesler, at 289 George Street, is advertising a lot of Saturday Bargains in his display advertisement that are certainly worth investigating, and he promises to make good on every item.

Mr. Penn.—"They say the streets in Boston are frightfully crooked."

Mr. Hubb—"They are. Why, do you know, when I first went there I could hardly find my way around."

"That must be embarassing."

"It is. The first week I was there I wanted to get rid of an old cat we had, and my wife got me to take it to the river, a mile away."

"And you lose the cat all right?"

"Lost nothing! I never would have found my way home if I hadn't followed the cat!"—Yonkers Statesman.

WEDDING BELLS

MONCRIEF—DOBBIN.

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon, 14th November, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Dobbin, when their eldest daughter, Leona Jane, became the bride of Mr. Sidney Earl Moncrief, all of North Monaghan, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson.

Promptly at one o'clock the bride entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by her cousin, Miss Genevieve Elmhirst, of Lindsay. She was most charmingly gowned in white Georgette crepe, with the conventional wedding veil and orange blossoms, and carried a lovely bouquet of bridal roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Clara Dobbin, very prettily dressed in pink silk, and carrying pink roses. Little Miss Mildred Dobbin, the tiny sister of the bride, dressed in pink, with touches of black velvet, and carrying a basket of pink and white carnations, acted as flower girl. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Norman Moncrief.

After the ceremony the bridal party adjourned to the dining-room, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to about eighty guests.

The young couple were the recipients of many costly presents, showing the high esteem in which they are held by the community. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid and the pianist, pearl pins, and to the dainty little flower girl, a gold locket.

The happy couple left on the four o'clock train for a short honeymoon in Toronto, the bride travelling in a suit of burgundy velour, with grey hat and white fox furs. On their return they will reside on Charlotte Street, Peterborough.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. P. Elmhirst, Miss Genevieve Elmhirst, Mrs. H. A. Heels, Miss Annie Anderson, Mrs. Geo. Dobbin, and Miss Wilma Dobbin, of Lindsay; Mr. Eric Lawrason and Mrs. Bert Sugden, of Toronto; and Mrs. James Elmhirst, of Winnipeg, Man.

SOME PICTURES AT THE ROYAL

We Think This Programme is the Best We Ever Put On

You will miss some picture if you do not see "The Jockey of Death" at the Royal Theatre to-night or to-morrow. It turned thousands away from Loew's Theatre, Toronto, last week. Be sure and see it. We have all our other regular pictures, making a great programme.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of John Halpin, who died 16th November, 1916:
Remember those dear Lord we pray,
Who from our sight have passed away,
That they may find sweet rest in thee,
With spirits of the blest made free.

Mrs. Ikeystein Tells Mrs. Mosestein How to Buy Victory Bonds, by Not Buying at the Peterboro Fish Trust

Hullo, Mrs. Ikeystein! How vas you this fine vet morning?

Oh, and vas it yourself, Mrs. Mosesstein? Oh, I vould be altogether right if it vas not for the vay things vas turned round. I vas used to be more comfortable ven I vas vet inside of me and dry outside of me. But now I vas not the same since I vas dry inside me and vet outside me.

Vell, vell! And that vas so. Things vas all upside round the other vay. And vere vas you goin', Mrs. Mosesstein?

Oh, Mrs. Ikeystein, I vas going to help vin the var by helpin' to buy some Victory Bonds.

My, that vas fine, Mrs. Mosesstein! And who vas you help to buy for?

Vell, I vas goin' to buy some fish from the Fishy Committee, and then they can use the profits to buy Victory Bonds.

Oh, Mrs. Mosesstein! Exkuse me laffin'! Te-he, he-he! But you vas silly. Vy don't you buy the fish and the Bonds as vell?

Vy, how vas that to be did, Mrs. Ikeystein?

Vy, I vill tell you. You go to Paskins' Store at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets, and buy your fish, and he is so much cheaper than the Fishy Committee (which should be called the Peterborough Fish Trust) that you will soon save enough to buy a Bond for yourself. Vy, he sells Herrings at 8c a lb., Cod Steaks at 13c a lb., Whole Cod at 12½ a lb., Fresh Salmon at 20c a lb., Finnan Haddie at 15c a lb., Salt Cod at 15c a lb., and everything else at similar low prices. Vy, if you buy everything there, you can buy two or three Bonds with vhat you save!

Vell! Vell! Vell! Mrs. Ikeystein, I vill myself go there together vith you, and ve vill both buy fish for four days a week and save enough moneys to vin the var ourselves.

All right, Mrs. Mosestein. I vill 'phone and tell them to save some fish for us.

Hullo, Central! Give me 317. Eh? I didn't say anything about heaven. I said 317. Hello, is that Paskins' Store? Vell, this is Mrs. Ikeystein, and I'm comin' with Mrs. Mosestein right now to buy some Victory Bonds. Eh? You don't sell 'em Oh, I mean some fish to make Victory Bonds, Eh? Vell, I iss comin'.

HOW DAVE MONTGOMERY "SHOT" THE BEAR

This is the season of hunting stories, but the best we have heard to date is how Mr. Dave Montgomery, of the Ketchesums Hunt Club, "shot" the bear. It seems Dave was sitting on "watch" when he dosed off into a quiet little sleep. He was awakened suddenly by a grunt at his side, and to his terror and amazement found himself confronted by a huge black bear that looked as big as a horse. Dave, like all good hunters, believing discretion the better part of valour, promptly took to a tree, followed by the bear, which almost had him by the seat of the trousers, when Dave reached the first crotch. Luckily, when he dropped his gun, his axe was tied on. Unfastening it quickly he turned and with one swift stroke buried it in the head of the bear. Then he fainted.

The authentity of the story seems to be verified by a couple of pictures now on exhibit in the windows of the Roy Studio. Mr. Fred Roy, with his "Ever Ready" camera, happened to be stationed at the next watch, and on hearing the cries for help, ran to give assistance. Realizing the situation he shot with his camera, instead of his gun, with the results as pictured.

Premier Kerensky Evaded Guards And Disappeared

Government Leader Was Deserted By Most of His Officers and Ordered to Surrender

FLED IN DISGUISE

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Nov. 17.— Deserted by most of his officers, and virtually ordered to surrender to Bolsheviki, Premier Kerensky evaded the guards sent for him and has disappeared. General Dukhoni has resumed the temporary post of commander-in-chief of the Kerensky forces recently defeated at Tsarkoe Selo. General Krasnoff, former commander, under Kerensky, and who was arrested with other members of the Premier's staff on the ground that he was only obeying the orders of his superior. General Krasnoff's report concerning the disappearance of Kerensky, confirms that he fled under disguise.

Premier Kerensky, when told that his officers were against him, and that his men were on the point of deserting, agreed to come to Petrograd, but while the guard was being arranged, he disappeared out of sight.

CANDIDATE WAS NOT SELECTED AT UNION MEETING

Meeting Broke up in Disorder— Four Prominent Men Nominated

The Union Convention, which was held in Victoria hall last evening did not result in the selection of a Union candidate. Disorderly scenes marked the close of the meeting and found the Burnhamites ready to break up the meeting unless their choice was sustained. Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the meeting, contended that the nomination vote was in favour of Mr. E. A. Peck. The latter, when seen this morning, said that he had no intention of accepting such a decision and would withdraw from the field.

CATTLE MARKET

A generally steady and firm tone has characterieed the week's trading in the local markets. For the better class of cattle the tendency towards slightly higher prices for the commoner stuff slightly easier. One extra choice load of heavy steers topped the market for the week at $12, but offerings of this class and quality were very scarce. Good to choice butcher held fairly steady all through the week at from $10 to $10.50, a few single and small lots of extra choice quality going a little higher, towards $11. Among the feeders the demand is stil active for anything good. One or two loads of extra choice feeders sold at $10 to $10.50, and one load at $10.75, but this was an exceptionally choice load. For the general run of good feeding steers the market held steady around $8.50 to $9.50, according to weight and quality. The medium and light stockers developed rather a slow market towards the end of the week, and prices eased off slightly. Among the fat butcher cows the market tended slightly lower towards the end of the week, while the common cows and canners went off fully 25 cents.

Small stock was generally firm and strong all through he week, lambs and good veal calves being especially strong.

Hogs were again in keen demand, the market steadily rising to $17.75 fed and watered, an advance for the week of 75c to $1.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 737 cars, with 9,620 cattle, 764 calves, 10,514 hogs, 8,509 sheep and lambs and 1,036 horses.

LABOUR-FARMER ALLIANCE.

For Win-the-War Purposes — Butter Attack on Millers.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 16.—A pledge from the farmers to join hands with union labour to help win the war was given at to-day's session of the American Federation of Labour by A. C. Townley, President of the Farmers' Non-Partisan League, and L. V. Strayer, second vice-president of the National Farmers' Congress.

In regard to the political aspect, Townley said: "Remember that this would be no mean coalition. The farmers of this country represent 37 per cent., labour 25 per cent., of the nation's voting strength."

Townley made a bitter attack on the milling interests, declaring that the farmers received only 80 cents a bushl for wheat under a low grading, while the standard wheat flour: No. 1 Northern, was selling at $1.80. "But," he added, "all of our 80 cent wheat finds its way into the flour mills and into your flour barrels.

"These fellows," he continued, "are strong for liberty and democracy. The farmers are a bit suspicious of the liberty that may come through the milling interests."

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

PART I.

CHAPTER I.

Ruth Morton finished her cup of coffee, brushed a microscopic crumb from her embroidered silk kimono, pushed back her loosely arranged brown hair, and resumed the task of opening her mail.

It was in truth a task, and one that consumed an inordinate amount of her valuable time. And her time was extremely valuable. Computed upon the basis of her weekly salary of one thousand dollars, it figured out just $142.85 per day, or very nearly $6 per hour, or 10 cents per minute, for each minute and hour of the 24. As a motion picture star, she had the satisfaction of knowing that she was paid a slightly larger salary than had been, until recently, received by the president of the United States.

The opening of the huge batch of letters that greeted her daily across her dainty breakfast table was very much of a duty. It was not that she felt any keen interest in the numberless notes from admirers, both male and female, from Portland, Me., to Los Angels, Cal., to say nothing of South Bend, Opeloosa and Kicking Horse between. These might readily have been consigned to the depths of the wastebasket unread. But there was always the chance that intermingled with the mass of adulation there might be a real letter from a real friend, or a business communication of importance from some picture company, possibly prepared to offer her two thousand dollars per week instead of one thousand, at the expiration of her present contract. So the mail had to be carefully opened, at least, even if the bulk of it was tossed aside unread.

Her mother usually assisted her in this daily task but to-day Mrs. Morton, oppressed by a slight attack of indigestion, slept late, and Ruth proceeded with the operation alone.

She was a singularly attractive girl, combining a wholesome and quite unassumed innocence with a certain measure of sophistication, gained by daily contact with the free and easy life of the studios. Her brown eyes were large and wondering as though she still found it difficult to realize that within four years she had stepped from comparative poverty to the possession of an income which a duke or a prince might readily have envied. Her features, pleasing, regular, somewhat large, gave to her that particularly type of beauty which lends itself best to the eccentricities of the camera. Her figure, graceful, well-modelled, with the soft roundness of youth, enabled her to wear with becoming grace almost any costume from the simple frock of the school girl to the costly gowns of the woman of fashion. Add to this a keen intelligence and a delightful vivacity of manner, and the reason for Ruth Morton's popularity among motion picture "fans" from coast to coast was at once apparent.

She sat in the handsomely appointed dining room of the apartment on Fifty-seventh street, which she and her mother had occupied for the past two years. The room, paneled in dull ivory, provided a perfect setting for the girl's unusual beauty. In her kimono of Nile green and gold, she presented a figure of such compelling charm that Nora, her maid, as she removed the empty coffee-cup, sighed to herself, if not with envy, at least with regret, that the good God had not made her along lines that would insure an income of over fifty thousand dollars a year.

Ruth sliced open half a dozen more letters with her ivory paper knife and prepared to drop them into the waste basket. One was from a manufacturer of cold cream, soliciting a testimonial. Two others were from ungrammatical school girls, asking her how they should proceed in order to become motion picture stars. Another was an advertisement of a new automobile. The fifth requested an autographed picture of herself. She swept the five over the edge of the table with a sigh of relief. How stupid of all these people, she thought, to take up their time, and her own, so uselessly.

The sixth letter, from its external appearance, might readily have been of no greater interest than the other five, and yet, something intangible about it, caused her to pause for a moment before inserting the point of the knife beneath the flap of the envelope. It was a large envelope, square, formal-looking. The address upon it was type-written. Unlike the majority of the other letters, forwarded from the studio, it bore the street and number of the apartment house in which she lived. The envelope was postmarked New York, and was sealed with a splotch of black sealing wax, which however contained the imprint of no monogram or seal, but was crossed both vertically and horizontally by a series of fine parallel lines, dividing its surface into minute squares.

Ruth observed these several peculiarities of the letter she was about to open, with growing interest. The usual run of her correspondence was so dull and uninteresting that anything out of the ordinary was apt to attract her attention. Slipping the ivory blade of the knife quickly beneath the flap of the envelope, she cut it open.

The letter within, written on the same heavy paper as that composing the envelope, contained but three type written lines. It was not these, however, that instantly attracted the attention of Ruth, but the signature appended to them. This signature did not consist of a name, but of an astonishing seal, imprinted upon a bit of the same black sealing wax with which the envelope had been fastened. And the device as Ruth bent over it to make out its clear cut but rather fine lines, filled her with a sudden and overwhelming dismay.

It was a grinning death's head, about half an inch in width, with eye-sockets staring vacantly, and grisly mouth gaping in a wide and horrible smile, made the more horrible by the two rows of protruding teeth. The girl almost dropped the letter, as full realization of the significance of the design swept over her.

Hastily she recovered herself, and with trembling fingers raised the letter from her lap. The three type-written lines upon the sheet were, if anything, more horrifying, than the device beneath them.

"Your beauty has made you rich and famous," the letter read. "Without it you could do nothing. Within thirty days it shall be destroyed, and you will be hideous."

For a long time Ruth sat gazing at the words before her. In spite of their ghastly significance she could with difficulty bring herself to believe that she had an enemy in the world sufficiently ruthless, sufficiently envious of her beauty and her success, to be capable of either threatening her in this brutal way or of carrying such a threat into execution. So far as she knew there was not a single person of all her acquaintance who wished her ill. Her own nature was too sweet, too sympathetic, too free from malice and bitterness, to conceive for a moment that the very charms which had brought her fame, success, might also be the means of bringing her envy and hatred in like proportion. She cast about in her mind, for some possible, some reasonable explanation of the matter, but try as she would, she was unable to think of anyone with whom she had ever come in contact, capable of threatening her in this terrible way. She had about decided that the whole thing must be some stupidly conceived practical joke when she saw her mother cross the hall and come into the room.

Mrs. Harriet Morton was a woman of fifty, handsome and youthful, in spite of her gray hair and her years. That she had once been extremely good looking could have been told at a glance anyone seeing mother and daughter together experienced no difficulty in determining the source of Ruth Morton's charms.

"Well, dear," said the older woman with a pleasant smile. "Haven't you finished your letters yet?" She glanced toward the clock on the mantel. "You'll have to leave for the studio in half an hour."

Ruth nodded, gazing at her mother rather uneasily.

"You'll have to open the rest of them, mother," she said, indicating the pile of letters. "I—I'm tired."

Mrs. Morton came up to her daughter and passed her hand over the girl's glossy hair.

"What's wrong, Ruth? You look as though something had frightened you." Then her eyes fell upon the letter lying in the girl's lap and she paused suddenly.

Ruth handed her mother the sheet of paper.

"I—I just got this," she said simply.

Mrs. Morton took the letter quickly from her daughter's hand, and proceeded to read it. A look of apprehension crept into her eyes, but she did her best to look unconcerned.

"Some crank," she said, after she had mastered the sudden fear that swept over her. "I shouldn't pay any attention to it, if I were you, my dear. There are a lot of people in the world that have nothing better to do, than play silly jokes like that."

"Then you don't think it amounts to anything?" Ruth asked, somewhat relieved.

"Certainly not. Just a stupid plan to frigthen you. Pay no attention to it. No."—she folded the letter as the girl put out her hand—"I'll take charge of this. Now, you'd better hurry and get ready. The car will be waiting for you at nine and Mr. Edwards expects to start that new picture to-day, doesn't he?"

"Yes." The girl rose. "It's a beautiful part. I'm the daughter of an old music teacher, who dies in Brooklyn and leaves me in poverty. And later on it turns out he was the heir to the throne of Moravia, and I'm a princess. Lots of adventures, and spies, and all that. Ralph Turner is the lover. He's awful good looking, don't you think?"

Mrs. Morton assented in rather a preoccupied way, as her daughter left the room. She was still thinking of the brutal threat which the girl had just received, and of the possible dangers to which she might as a result be exposed. Mrs. Morton by no means felt the matter to be a joke, in spite of the assurances she had given Ruth. The tone of the letter, the evident care which had been taken to prevent the identity of the writer from becoming known, filled her with the gravest alarm.

As she sat pondering the matter, Nora came into the room with Ruth's dust coat and parasol in her hands. Mrs. Morton beckoned to the girl, then spoke to her in a low voice.

"Nora," she said, "Miss Ruth received a letter this morning from somebody who is envious of her beauty and success. I pretended to make light of the matter but there may be something back of it. I want you to watch her carefully while you are away from the house. Be on your guard every moment of the time. Do not let anybody come near her. They might try to throw acid or something of the sort. I shan't feel safe until she is home again."

The maid's face lit up with a significant smile. From her manner it was clear that she fairly worshipped her young mistress.

"I'll not let anybody do her any harm, Mrs. Morton," she said earnestly. "You may be sure of that."

"And don't let her know," Mrs. Morton, added hastily, in a low voice, as she saw Ruth come to the door, "that I am at all worried. She must not have a threat like that on her mind."

The maid nodded, then turned toward the door where Ruth stood.

"Well, mother, good-bye," the latter exclaimed with a laugh. "You can open all the rest of the letters, and if you come across any more like that last one, please keep them. I think that I'll begin a collection."

Mrs. Morton forced herself to join in the girl's laughter.

"There won't be any more, dear," she said, kissing the girl fondly. "Don't bother your head about such things. They're not worth it. And come home as soon as you get through."

"All right, mother. We're going to the theatre to-night, aren't we? Don't forget to get the tickets." With a smile she left the room and a few minutes later Mrs. Morton heard the rumble of the descending elevator.

(To be Continued.)

The Kid was reading about recent polar exploration, and how Crocker land, after being marked on the maps, has been proved to have been a mirage. He looked up from his magazine, and applied himself to the fountain of wisdom.

Pa, he said, whats a mirage?

A what?

A mirage.

Spell it.

M-i-r-a-g-e.

Why, use your brain! A mirage is the act of getting stuck in the mud.

But as pa explained afterward, the boy didn't pronounce it right.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"This bulk tea is the best I could buy at the price, Mrs. Brown, but I believe you will like Red Rose better.

"We use Red Rose at home and like the rich flavor. My wife says it goes further."

Hundreds of grocers are making statements somewhat like this.

They have sold Red Rose Tea for many years and have found the quality so good that they use it in their homes.

Most grocers naturally like to make an extra profit on their bulk tea, but they cannot help recommending Red Rose Tea because they know it's worth the price.

They know it goes further because it consists chiefly of the teas from Assam in Northern India, the strongest, richest teas grown anywhere in the world.

Red Rose tastes better and goes further.

When these scrip certificates have been paid in full, and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer, or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of interim certificates and of definitive bonds will be made through the Chartered Banks.

Bearer bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $50., $100., $500., and $1,000. and may be registered as to principal only. Fully registered bonds, the interest on which is paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Subject to the payment of 25 cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons, will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons, at any time, on application to the Minister of Finance.

Surrender of Bonds

Holders of Dominion of Canada Debenture Stock, due October 1st, 1919, and of bonds of the three preceding Dominion of Canada War Loan Issues, have the privilege of surrendering their bonds in part payment for subscriptions to bonds of this issue, under the following conditions:—

Debenture Stock, due October 1st, 1919, at Par and Accrued Interest.
War Loan Bonds, due December 1st, 1925, at 97½ and Accrued Interest.

(The above will be accepted in part payment for bonds of any of the three maturities of this Issue.)

War Loan Bonds, due October 1st, 1931, at 97½ and Accrued Interest.
War Loan Bonds, due March 1st, 1937, at 96 and Accrued Interest.

(These will be accepted in part payment for bonds of the 1937 maturity ONLY of this Issue.)

Bonds of the various maturities of this issue will, in the event of future issues of like maturity, or longer, made by the Government, other than issues made abroad, be accepted at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to such issues.

Issue Price Par

Free from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

Payment to be made as follows:

10% on December 1st, 1917 — 20% on March 1st, 1918
10% on January 2nd, 1918 — 20% on April 1st, 1918
20% on February 1st, 1918 — 20% on May 1st, 1918

A full half year's interest will be paid on 1st June, 1918

The Bonds therefore give a net yield to the investor of about:

5.61% on the 20 year Bonds
5.68% on the 10 year Bonds
5.81% on the 5 year Bonds

All payments are to be made to a Chartered Bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and the allotment to cancellation. Subscriptions accompanied by a deposit of 10% of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a Chartered Bank. Any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank will forward subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied toward payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Subscriptions may be paid in full on January 2nd, 1918, or on any instalment due date thereafter under discount at the rate of 5½% per annum. Under this provision payments of the balance of subscriptions may be made as follows:

If paid on January 2nd, 1918, at the rate of 89.10795 per $100.
If paid on February 1st, 1918, at the rate of 79.46959 per $100.
If paid on March 1st, 1918, at the rate of 59.72274 per $100.
If paid on April 1st, 1918, at the rate of 39.90959 per $100.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank, or from any Victory Loan Committee, or member thereof.

The books of the Loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of this issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Subscription Lists will close on or before December 1st, 1917.

How Tanks Were Named

Related by the Inventor Of Unique War Machine

THE following are extracts from an article on the "tanks" in the Strand Magazine by Colonel E. D. Swinton, their inventor—

"Why 'tank'?" Why should a fighting automobile have been so inappropriately named? The reply can be given in two words—for secrecy. In its experimental stage the machine was known as a "land cruiser" or "landship." But it is a military platitude that the "element of surprise"—as it is always called in the text-books — has immense value in war; and it was naturally realized that the greatest results to be expected from the employment of this new weapon would be attained if it could be launched unexpectedly, so that the enemy might be caught unprepared to meet it.

Various rumors about the new machines were current amongst those who got wind of them. One was that they were intended to carry water for the troops across the deserts of Egypt and Mesopotamia. A second hinted at snowploughs for use on the Russian front.

One good point common to both the German home-made equivalent terms of "tank" is that they do not lend themselves to the making of lyrics, for neither "Panzerkraftwagen" nor "Schutzergrazenvernichtungsautomobil" is likely to be used as the refrain of a topical song in vaudeville.

The machines were yet otherwise miscalled. During the summer of 1916 an enemy agent, trying to tap the wires in England, might have been mystified to pick up some such messages as "Twelve Willies reach you to-day," or "Send tails for six females."

To help to conceal the destination of the tanks at the stage when any allusion as to their purpose was precluded, they were painted with the inscription: "With care; to Petrograd" in large Russian characters. This, of course, was merely following up the line suggested by the snow-plough fiction.

It is true that certain people who are not soldiers have played a very large and valuable part in creating the tank. It is also true that others who are soldiers have not done so. But the first to appreciate the necessity for it, to urge its provision, and to insist on the feasibility of its construction, were, in fact, soldiers.

So far as the writer is aware, the first definite proposal for a fighting machine on the lines of the existing tank was due to the appearance of the Hornsby-Ackroyd caterpillar tractor, which was tested for military traction purposes in England in 1906-1908. It was made by a military officer and was carried up to the stage of the preparation of sketch drawings, when the project died for want of support. Like Mr. Wells, he was ahead of his time.

The tanks are divided into males and females. The male is par excellence the machine-gun hunter and destroyer. He carries light, quick-firing guns capable of firing shell, and is intended to be to the machine gun with the torpedo boat destroyer was designed to be to the torpedo boat, or the ladybird is supposed to be to the aphis. The female, which, in accordance with the laws of nature, is the man-killer, carries nothing but machine guns for employment against the enemy personnel. Her special role is to keep down hostile rifle fire.

The tanks have supplied the touch of comic relief and excited the mirth of the British soldier, always blessed with a keen sense of the ridiculous. They acted as an antidote to the effect of the "Jack Johnsons," "Weary Willies," "Silent Susies," Whizz Bangs," "Sausages," "Rum Jars," tear shells, gas shells, and all the other frightfulnesses of the unspeakable Boche. They counteracted the weariness, the hunger and thirst, the dust, the mud, and all the squalor and filthy discomfort of war.

The Boomerang.

This curious weapon, peculiar to the native Australian, has often proved a puzzler to men of science. It is a piece of carved wood, nearly in the form of a crescent, from thirty to forty inches long, pointed at both ends, and the corner rather sharp. The mode of using it is quite as singular as the weapon. Ask a black to throw it so as to fall at his feet, and away it goes full forty yards before him, skimming along the surface at three or four feet from the ground, when it will suddenly rise in the air forty or sixty feet, describing a curve, and finally drop at the feet of the thrower. During its course it revolves with great rapidity, as on a pivot, with a whizzing noise. It is wonderful that a barbarous people should have invented so singular a weapon, which sets laws of progression at defiance. It is very dangerous for a European to try to project it at any object, as it may return and strike him.

Suspicious.

"Officer, why did you arrest this motorist?" "Suspicous actions, your honor. He was within the speed limits, sounding his horn properly, and trying to keep to the right side of the street."

Reviving the Jet Industry.

Since the Norman conquest considerable quantities of jet—a very hard kind of coal—have been mined and made into various kinds of ornaments at Whitby, but in the last decade or two the industry has waned, because of the competition of German imitations made out of glass.

Lately a marked revival, due to the cutting off of the German imitations and to the great demand for jet articles for mourning purposes, is noted. Most of the workers engaged are old men who learned the art of carving and finishing jet when the industry was at its zenith.—The Pathfinder.

Bathe Internally And Keep Well!

Nature has mightily equipped us all, old and young, to resist disease—but she requires that we give her a chance.

We give her no chance if we permit the Lower Intestine to be more or less clogged with accumulated waste. Yet that is a universal condition to-day as is proved by the number of laxative drugs that are consumed.

You can help Nature in Nature's most effectual way by Internal Bathing and in an easy, non-habit forming way keep the intestine as sweet and clean as Nature demands it to be for perfect health and surer defence against contagion. Over a half million keen, bright, healthy people testify to its result.

Mrs. C. G. M., (name on request) of Strathroy, Ont., writes:

I am pleased to have this opportunity of testifying to the merits of the J. B. L. Cascade. I have been using it now for a year with satisfactory results. I am an old woman but my health is so improved that I have a renewed lease of life. You are at liberty to give my address to anyone privately who may desire to write to me regarding the Cascade.

Just call at Warne's Drug Store and request free booklet, "Why Man of to-day is only 50 per cent. Efficient." The most efficient device for internal bathing. The "J.B.L. Cascade" will also be shown and explained to you if you so desire. If you prefer, write for Booklet to Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, 165 College Street, Toronto.

WHOOPING COUGH: Throughout the entire list of so-called minor ailments of children there is none more dangerous than whooping cough. Especially is this true of infants, more than a majority of the cases are fatal. It is one of the most highly contagious of all children's ailments, and may be carried by a third person.

The specific cause of whooping cough is as yet, so far as I have been able to learn, unknown. The technical name of the disease is Pertussis, and many remedies have been exploited for its relief but up to the present time I have found no medicine better or even as good, as a combination of the cell salts or tissue foods usually dispensed by Homeopathic physicians.

A combination of Kali. Mur., Kali. Sulph., Calc. Sulph., and Silicea in sugar of milk tablets carries the mucous accretion of the mouth and throat downward, and reduces the accumulation of that tough, stringy secretion which so aggravates the paroxysms of coughing and, in addition this simple, harmless remedy usually causes regular and complete evacuation of the bowels, so that one of the serious conditions, that of constipation, is also overcome.

Recently a new and safe home remedy has appeared, however, and I believe it is going to be the best method ever yet discovered for overcoming the diseases. Several months ago one of the oldest physicians in London was quoted in a prominent medical journal. He said that in some of the rural districts the good housewives used garlic for curing whooping cough and it seemed to work perfectly. He investigated, as a really great physician should do, instead of saying "Pooh, pooh and tut, tut," because the discovery was not made by some famous member of the profession. He found that the method of treatment was simplicity itself, although it is quite probable that no physican would have thought of using it as the mothers did.

Garlic is the remedy. The bulbs or cloves, as the little pieces of the bulbs are called, are chopped up into fine pieces and made into a poultice, and then bound into the soles of the feet when putting the child to bed at night.

I told you of the quotation from the London physician as soon as I learned of it and I have had many letters from various parts of the United States and Canada, telling of the relief that was almost magical.

It is only recently that I have had an opportunity to observe personally the practical application of the treatment and I must say for the benefit of all children that the claims of those that have written to me appear to be under rather than over the facts. Although the child under observation had been suffering every night with the terrible and terrifying coughing spells, the loss of meals, strangling, crying and all of the usual troubles, it slept peacefully through with but two spells of coughing during the first night after the poultice was applied. The second night he coughed a little along toward morning and played out doors all the next day. There seemed to be no more symptoms of whooping cough after the third day.

In making the poultice I believe it would be still more effective if sprinkled with vinegar before applying. Two good-sized bulbs are sufficient, one for each foot. Chop finely, sprinkle with vinegar, and apply the poultice directly on to the bottom of the feet, binding them on securely. If stockings are put on over the binding it will be more certain to stay in place.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents' postage.

I frequently find it necessary to give minute and detailed directions for the distetic treatment of specified cases. One of these that is especially interesting has had the co-operation of his family physician. Evidently a broad and up-to-date man who knows what part of his patient's case needs his medicine and what part requires expert dietetic directions. I would like to let you read several letters from the patient, showing the steady progress that he is making back to health, but one must do for this time. In answer to the question about the eyes, take your doctor's advice and go as soon as possible.

Dear Mr. Reader: I am still im- around more now. I have begun to proving gradually and am working practice more of the exercises. I am not using the raw carrots now more than once a day and have used about one pint of pure olive oil. I am eating peaches and oranges and drinking hot milk between meals. Have not used any nut meats yet. I suppose they will be all right with almost any food. The phosphates are in the urine yet at times.

There is a trouble which seems to be caused by eye strain that effects my head and eyes. If I do not read much the eyes seem to be better, but if reading even for a few minutes my eyes and head will get tired and pain will be felt in temples and over eyes, also in different parts of head,; will also notice it in left side and in fact feel it all over me for a short time after reading. Eyes also get itchy at corners when reading, sometimes dry. Doctor thinks it is strain and told me I would have to consult an oculist as soon as I was able. Would it be best for me to leave off reading entirely? — Mrs. R. J. B.

IF BABY COULD TALK IT MIGHT SAY THIS.

Do not kiss me on the mouth.

Do not let the sun shine in my eyes nor the wind fill them with dust.

Do not sneeze nor cough in my face for I might take cold, and that would be bad for me.

Do not expose me to whooping cough or measles or other catching diseases or I may get sick and die.

Do not pick me up by the arms. Be careful how you handle me and lay me down.

Do not give me candy or other things which are not good for me.

Do not give me a dirty pacifier to suck, nor allow me to suck my thumb, for it will spoil the shape of my mouth.

Do not rock me to sleep nor teach me other bad habits.

Do not take me to a motion picture show nor keep me up at nights, for it robs me of my sleep and makes me cross.

Do not give me wine, beer or whisky, coffee or tea, for I want to keep well.

Do not jolt me or trot me on your knee when I cry.

I want the right things to eat and I want my meals on time.

I want some pure, cold water to drink between meals, for I get very thirsty.

I want a bath every day and plenty of clean clothes.

I want my own bed, a comfortable room with the windows open and plenty of time for sleep, for I must have it in order to grow.

I want to be taken out of doors every day for the fresh air.

I want mother to love me and always be gentle with me.

I want to be a good baby.

Man has done wonders since he came before the public. He has navigated the ocean, he has penetrated the mysteries of the starry heavens, he has harnessed the lightning and made it pull street cars and light the great cities of the world. But he can't find a spool of red thread in his wife's work basket; he can't discover her pocket in a dress hanging in a closet; he can't hang out clothes, and get them on the line the right side up. He cannot hold clothespins in his mouth while he is doing it either. He cannot be polite to somebody that he hates. He cannot sit in a rocking chair without banging the rockers into the basement. He cannot put the tidy on the sofa pillow right side out. He cannot sew on a button. In short he cannot do a hundred things that women do almost instinctively.

The real pleasures of life are not to be bought. Amusement is for sale, but joy comes without price and without bargaining. There are no figures set upon happiness; it springs up in the pathway like a flower the seed of which has been wafted from some other world. The quiet, deep joys of life, benison like, fall from heaven upon our hearts. None can command them; none can corner them. You may purchase assitance and interest, but affection and love come unsought, unsolicited, unbought. What wealth have you greater, more worth to you than the tender kindness, the sympathy, the spirit of self-giving that goes to you from other lives? These assets are not on our office ledgers but on the great ledgers of life from which our final balances are struck they are writ large.

How great a beauty and blessing it is to hold the royal gifts of the soul, so that they shall be music to some, and fragrance to others, and life to all! Some women cling to their homes like the honeysuckle over the door; yet like it, sweeten all the region with the subtle fragrance of their goodness.

Boys and girls, what is it you can never catch, though you chase after it on the wings of the wind? You can never catch the word that has once left your lips. Once spoken it is out of your mouth; do your best you can never recall it. Therefore take care what you say. Never speak an unkind word, an impure word or a profane word.

Love is the great home-maker, that makes even the drudgery of housekeeping a pleasure, and home life a foretaste of the bliss of heaven. One cannot get too much love into one's home-making, but easily too little.

"FIGHTING SONS-OF-GUNS."

George Pattullo in Saturday Evening Post:

In common with a large portion of the American public, I long harboured a suspicion that the publicity Canadians were receiving for their achievements in France might possibly be explained on the ground of propaganda. That was doing them an injustice. Though certain crack British regiments are unsurpassed by any troops in the world, the fact remains that the Canadian Army as a whole consitutes the most formidable weapon of its size on any front. This statement does not represent my valueless personal prejudices, but the opinion of military experts.

The Canadians are always there with the punch. No matter how badly mauled they may be they come back with a kick like a Missouri mule—and you may have noticed how, often when there's a particularly hard nut to crack, they get the job.

Even the enemy tacitly confesses their worth. After torrents of rain had temporarily halted the attack at Lens in August, German military correspondents wrote gleefully to their newspapers: "Sir Douglas Haig has discovered that even his Canadians are not the equal of the German soldiers."

The men from the Dominion are wonders at making the best of circumstances. You could set down a bunch of Canadians on a desert island and in two weeks they'd have a football team, and the secretary would be sending challenges broadcast to the cannibals of all the adjacent territory. And there would be a tug-of-war team in kilts and a boxing bout between the light-weight champions of Winnipeg, Calgary, the Peace River Valley, Rouen, and Havre, and a rival claimant who had beaten everything of this class in Sorel, Three Rivers, Lachine, Calais and Etaples.

Some men attempt to practice what they preach, but they soon get out of the practice.

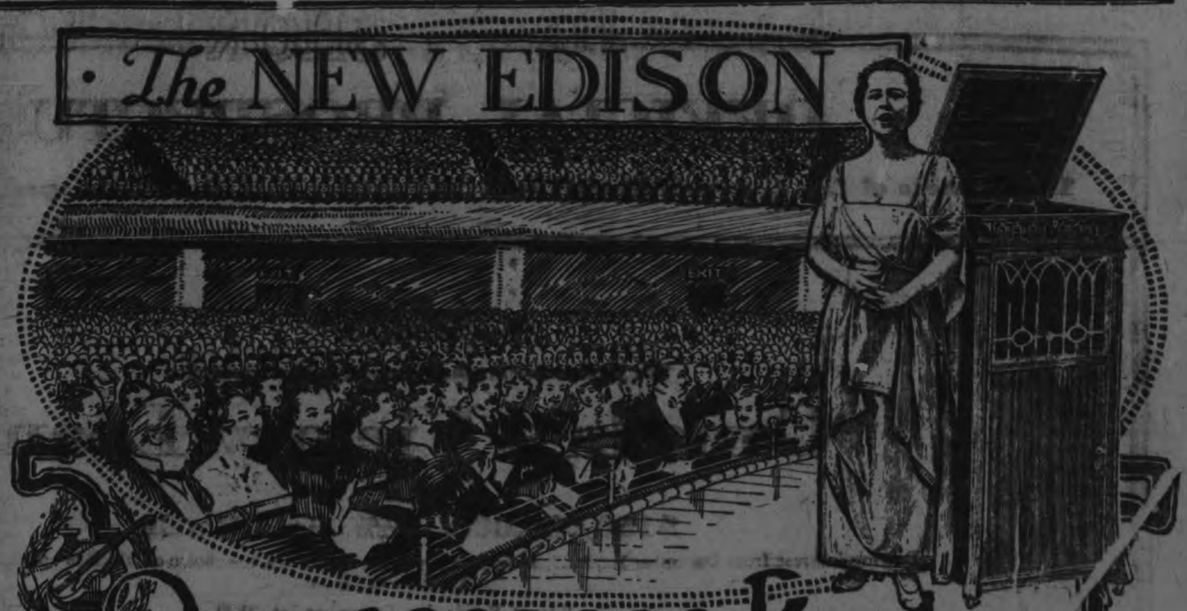
The NEW EDISON



Over 1,000,000 People have heard this test!

OVER one million music-lovers have attended "re-creation concerts" in practically every city on this continent, at which famous artists have sung or played in unison and direct comparison with their re-created voices on

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul."

This host of people went to these concerts critical, doubting and curious. They came away amazed, dumfounded and convinced—convinced that Thos. A. Edison had given to the world a new art—the re-creation of music so flawlessly that it is absolutely impossible to tell the real from the re-creation.

No "talking machine" ever dared make such a test. None but the NEW EDISON could successfully sustain such comparison and have over 500 music critics confess that one could not be distinguished from the other.

When you hear the NEW EDISON pouring forth real music, in all its original beauty and warmth, you too will realize the wonder of this marvelous invention and will long to add to your home the happiness, pleasure, inspiration and comfort that only good music can bring.

We cordially invite you to hear this, Mr. Edison's favorite invention, in our showrooms. A visit entails no obligation to purchase.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HE WON HIS BET

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

I was a reader for a prominent magazine. Perhaps I should explain to those who are not familiar with editorial work that a reader is one who reads manuscripts of unknown authors. A manuscript is brought in to the editor, who sits at a mahogany desk and listens with apparent intentness to a long account of the merits of the work submitted, smiles benignly on the author and as soon as he is gone tosses the manuscript to the reader without a word.

The magazine I was with being for women, most of the readers were women, I being one of the women.

At one time when the editor was ill those who insisted on seeing the editor were referred to me. One of those who left a manuscript with me was a man who seemed to me to be of such caliber that either he should be a successful writer or should not be a writer at all. But successful writers were not used to asking us to publish their works; we asked them to do us the honor to permit us to publish them. I was certainly impressed with Mr. Horatio Beardsley—the name on the title page of his story—and promised him that I would give his story a careful reading.

I did most of my work at home and took Mr. Beardsley's story, called "A Fool For His Pains," there to read it. But a great many manuscripts were crowding upon us at the time, and we were especially successful in getting recognized literary lights in the literary world to give us their works for publication. The consequence was that I omitted to read "A Fool For His Pains" for some time.

One day I looked in my closet for the manuscript, where I had left it, and did not find it there. I asked my mother what had become of it and learned that she had burned an accumulation of pasteboard boxes recently. The manuscript was in a pasteboard box, and it was apparent to me that it had gone up in smoke.

I was terror stricken. If through my carelessness a manuscript committed to my care were destroyed and there was no other copy in existence I would not only suffer a terrible mortification but would lose my position, on which I was dependent for a living for both my mother and myself.

When I went again to the office of the magazine a letter from Horatio Beardsley was handed me, stating that he had made arrangements for the publication of "A Fool For His Pains" and asking them to return the manuscript. I said nothing at the office about its destruction, for I had not sufficiently recovered from the shock to make up my mind what to do or say in the matter. I went home and tried to think out a way by which I might save myself from the loss of my position, though there was no possible way of escaping the mortification to which I would be subjected.

What I decided upon was this: I wrote a note to Mr. Beardsley, confessing that his manuscript had been burned and asking him if he had another copy and begging him for the present to say nothing about the matter. My note brought him to see me at my home, and it was plain that he was much chagrined at the loss of his manuscript. I told him I could raise $50, which I knew was more than any author unknown to the public could get for a story of the same length as the one he had submitted. He looked up at me with a curious expression when I said this, but made no reply. He left me, saying that he would think over what was best to do, but in the meanwhile I need give myself no uneasiness concerning it. This was very good of him, and I felt very grateful.

A few days later I received a note from him saying that he had decided to rewrite the lost story. Work he did over a second time was always better than his first effort. If I could spare the time to become his amanuensis for the work he would not only excuse me for the destruction of the original manuscript, but if he received a higher price for the second draft than he had been offered for the first he would divide the excess with me.

I was only too glad to escape with this penalty and accepted the proposition except as to any pecuniary interest in what he received for his story. I gave him a couple of hours every working day for a month, at the end of which time the story was finished. In the course of another week I received a note from the author containing a check for $250, which he said was my share of the excess over what he had been offered for the first draft of his story. And what was my consternation to see in his signature the name of one of the most gifted writers before the public.

He had made a bet with a friend that he would submit a story to our magazine under an assumed name and nothing would come of it. Something more than he expected did come of it; his story was burned. Time showed why he treated me so nicely. It seems that he had taken the same fancy to me that I had taken to him. That is why he wished me for his amanuensis. He desired to be with me, to become acquainted with me, and as it turned out he was afforded an opportunity to make love to me. I have been his wife several years and have not yet heard the last of the burning of his production. Indeed, I never expect to hear the last of it. What troubled me at the time was that I could not tell a gifted writer from a common scribbler.

Possibilities of Bad Verse.

No one has yet written any adequate appreciation of the possibilities of bad verse—the verse, I mean, that is composed at the crises of life, on the mountain tops of exultation and in the joyless valleys, by persons unskilled and ordinarily unpoetic; the verse that is hidden away in vases and bureau drawers, never to be shown and always produced in some moment of vanity. Only a true poet could write a just appreciation of bad verse, and from his pen the words come too much tainted with the implication of irony. The quality of bad verse is not strained. It is written to suit no magazine's policy. It is rewarded with no check. It is a brave denying of reality, a prayer that is its own answer. It is, to use Maeterlinck's phrase, "a making or involving of wings" by creatures that creep on their bellies.

Famous Men's Favorite Hymns.

Favorite hymns of famous men make an interesting catalogue. Gladstone's special choice was "Praise to the Holiest in the Height," and it was sung at his funeral. Tennyson's favorite was Heber's "Holy, Holy, Holy." One of Ruskin's preferences was "Jesus, Here From Sin Deliver," upon which he preached a sermon to some 200 school children, his guests one afternoon at Brantwood. Matthew Arnold's choice was "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" (Watt's masterpiece), the third verse of which M. A. was overheard reciting to himself only an hour before his quite unexpected fatal seizure. And Henry Ward Beecher declared, "I would rather have written 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul' than have the fame of all the kings that ever sat on the earth."—London Standard.

Russia's Parquetry Floors.

Most flooring put down in Russia is parquetry, and it is generally oak. Even in the unpretentious houses and flat buildings this parquetry is to be found. In some cases, of course, the finish is not so fine as in others, and in ordinary buildings the designs are not so elaborate. One of the most noticeable features of a Russian house is that rugs and carpets are used for wall decorations instead of floor coverings. Floor polishing by professionals, who come regularly once every week or ten days, is considered a part of the regular routine of running a house.

Churchyard Yew Trees.

One reason given why very old yew trees are so often found in country churchyards is that originally these trees were planted to supply the peasants with wood for their bows, for in lawless times it was soon discovered that the only place where trees would be safe from nightly marauders was the churchyard, where the most hardened thief dared not venture between darkness and dawn.

Cure For Winking.

Pa—At last I've found a way to make that young scamp of ours stop winking his eyes.

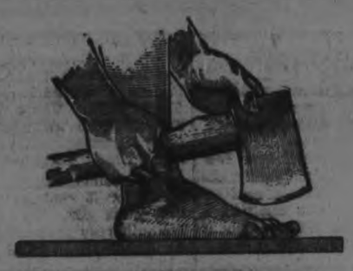
Ma—Really?

Pa—Yes; I'll show him the articles in this science magazine where it says that every time we wink we give the eye a bath.

Out of His Class.

"I hear your new son-in-law has brain fever," said the curious man.

"Brain fever, did you say?" chuckled the father-in-law. "The poor booby wouldn't have any such sickness. Imagine a jellyfish having a backache."—Puck.



Like Taking an Axe To a Corn

Some methods of removing corns suggest an axe. They are harsh. They attack live tissue as well as the corn. And soreness often follows.

Some are mussy. Some require frequent applications. All were uncertain, all unscientific, until Blue-jay came.

Now, with Blue-jay, you apply a thin protector, which stops the pain at once. In the center—acting on the corn alone—is a gentle, efficient wax. And a tape wraps the toe while it acts.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. When applied, you forget the corn. In two days you find it gone.

About one corn in ten needs a second application. But no corn can resist this new-day method.

At least a million corns a month are ended in this easy, gentle way. Users of Blue-jay apply it as soon as a corn is felt. And it never pains again.

Try it tonight—on any corn, old or new. What it does to that corn, it will do to all. And that means lifetime freedom. You will be amazed to know how easily this trouble can be ended.

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe to make the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

"Germany wants peace, but the Allies want pieces. In the beginning it was the other way about."

The speaker was a novelist.

"If the Allies win," he resumed, "I for one shall be in favour of their annexing considerable parts of Germany. I'll tell you why.

"I'll tell you with a story—a story about Red-faced Leary of Tin Can.

"'Red-faced Leary is a better man than he was a week ago,' said the bartender of the Tin Can Hostel.

"'Has he reformed,' asked the citizen.

"The bartender rubbed down the bar with a grey rag.

"'No,' he said; 'he had two fingers bit off in a fight. There's less of him now, you know.'"—Exchange.

On his eighty-fourth birthday, Paul Smith, the veteran Adirondack hotelkeeper, who started life as a guide and died recently owning a million dollars worth of forest land, was talking about boundary disputes with an old friend. "Didn't you hear of the lawsuit over a title that I had with Jones down in Malone last summer?" asked Paul, with a twinkle in his eyes. The friend had not heard. "Well," said Paul, "it was this way. I sat in the courtroom, before the case opened, with my witnesses around me. Jones bustled in, stopped, looked my witnesses over carefully, and said: 'Paul, are those your witnesses?' 'They are,' said I. 'Then you win,' said he. 'I've had them witnesses twice myself.'"

No wonder the way of the transgressor is hard when one considers the amount of travel thereon.

One day the youngest member of the staff came in with his report of a public meeting. The editor read it through and came to the sentence: "Three thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine eyes were fixed upon the speaker."

What do you mean by making a silly blunder like that?" he demanded, wrathfully.

SUNDAY SERMON

For Those Who Do Not Go to Church

"The captain of the Lord's host appeareth unto Joshua."—Joshua, 5th chap., 14th verse.

God often spoke to Joshua, but we read not till now of any appearance of God's glory to him; now that his difficulties increased, his encouragements were increased in proportion. He was favoured with this vision immediately after he had performed the great solemnities of circumcision and the passover. We may expect the discoveries of Divine grace when we are found in the way of our duty and are diligent and sincere in our attendance on the service of God. The place where Joshua had this vision was by Jericho; there it should seem he was all alone, fearless of danger because of the Divine protection. There he was, some think, meditating and praying, and to those who are so employed, God often graciously manifests himself. Joshua, as is usual with those who are full of thought and care, was looking downward, his eyes fixed on the ground, when on a sudden he was surprised with the appearance of some one who stood before him at some little distance. He appeared to Joshua as a man, but one to be taken notice of. Now this man was the Son of God, the Eternal Word, who, before he assumed the human nature, for a perpetuity, frequently appeared in a humble shape. Joshua gave him Divine honours, and he received them, which a created angel would not have done, and he is called Jehovah—Chap. 6-2. He here appeared as a soldier, with his sword drawn in his hand. To Abraham in his tent, he appeared as a traveller. To Joshua in the field as a man of war. Christ will be to his people what their faith expects and desires. Christ had his sword drawn in his hand, which served to justify the war Joshua was engaging in, to show him that it was of God, and to encourage him to carry it on with vigor. Christ's sword drawn in his hand denotes how ready he is for the defence and salvation of his people, who through him shall do valiently. His sword turns every way. Joshua was not at all intimidated. He demanded whether he was an ally or an enemy. So heartily has Joshua embarked in the interests of Israel that none shall stand by him with the face of a man, but he will know whether he be a friend or a foe. It would seem that he suspected him for an enemy. Thus apt are we to look upon that as against us, which is most for us. The question plainly implies, that the cause between the Israelites and Cananites would not admit of a neutrality. He that is not for us, is against us. Observe the answer, Nay, not for your adversaries, you may be sure that as captain of the host of the Lord am I now come, not only for you as a friend, but over you as Commander-in-Chief. They cannot be but victorious that have such a captain. Joshua recognized and worshipped him as his Lord, reverently, prostrating himself upon the earth; he waited and asked to know his will. This worship was not only received but he was commanded to show the same respect to the heavenly vision, as had been required when the Lord appeared to Moses in the bush; and then he received from him the orders respecting the siege of Jericho. All these circumstances establish beyond a doubt the conclusion that this was no other than the Son of God, the second person in the Sacred Trinity, the captain of our salvation, assuring Joshua of success in this war. It is to the Divine manifestations of Himself in the ancient church, there is reason to believe St. Paul refers, when contrasting the pre-existent state of Christ with his appearance while on earth, he attributes to him the form of God, who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God. Phil., 2, 6. Notice the relation Joshua owns between himself and Christ; that Christ was his Lord, and himself his servant, and under his command; Christ, his captain, and himself a soldier under him, to do as he is bidden. Matt., 8, 9. The foundation of all acceptable obedience is laid in a sincere dedication of ourselves as servants to Jesus Christ, as our Lord. Psalm 116, 16. The inquiry Joshua makes pursuant to this relation is, What saith my Lord? which implies an earnest desire to know the will of Christ, and a cheerful readiness and resolution to do it. Joshua owns himself an inferior officer, and stands to receive orders; this temper of mind shows him fit for the post he was in, for those know best how to command, that know how to obey. Every true Christian must fight under Christ's banner, and he will conquer by his presence and assistance. Jericho resolves that Israel shall not be its master. It shut up itself, being strongly fortified, both by art and nature. None went out as deserters, or to treat for peace, neither were any admitted to offer peace. Thus were they infatuated and their hearts hardened to their own destruction; they were in the miserable condition of all those that set up their will against the Almighty. Job 15, 25. God resolves that Israel shall be its master, and that quickly. The captain of the Lord's host gave him all the assurance he could desire of success, saying, See I have given into thine hand Jericho; it is all thine own, as sure as if it were already in thy possession. Further, gives him directions how the city should be besieged. No military preparations were to be made, but the ark of God must be carried by the priests round the city once a day for six days together, and seven times the seventh day, attended by the men of war in silence, the priests blowing with trumpets of rams' horns. This was all that they were to do. God assures them that on the seventh day, they should be masters of the town. Upon a signal given, they must all shout and immediately the walls would fall down, which would not only expose the inhabitants, but so dispirit them that they would not be able to offer any resistance. By this extraordinary method of besieging the city, the Lord was pleased to put honour upon the ark, as the symbol of his presence; and to manifest that all their victories were from him. The faith and patience of the people were thereby proved and increased. The nature and utility of divinely appointed means were also illustrated, which must not be neglected, though utterly ineffectual in themselves. Thus by faith, not by force, the walls of Jericho fell down. An account is given of the manner in which the people passed around the city. Seven priests preceded the ark, blowing their trumpets. The priests were God's ministers, and proclaimed God's purposes concerning the issue of the war.

According, as God had said, and of their obedience to the commands of God, the walls fell down. This was a shout of faith. It was a shout of prayer, along with the sound of the trumpets, which proclaimed the promise that God would remember them with one accord; as one man, they cry to heaven for help, and help comes accordingly. All this magnified Joshua and raised his reputation as a leader. It showed that God was with him. Nothing can more raise a man's reputation, nor make him appear more truly great, than to have the manifest evidence of God's presence with him.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

How the Vicious Circle of Neurasthenia is Formed

WHEN the nerves are overstrained by mental exertion, by accident or by shock the irritation makes rest or sleep impossible, and consequently there is no restoration of the wasted nerve force.

In its turn digestion fails, because there is lack of nervous energy to control the flow of gastric juices in the stomach and to operate the other organs of digestion.

Failing to obtain the necessary nourishment, the blood becomes thin and watery, and as a result the nerves are further starved and rendered less capable of standing the strain put upon them.

In this way is formed the vicious circle of neurasthenia or nervous prostration, and there is no magical way in which the circle may be broken up.

Overstrained Nerves, Loss of Sleep, Indigestion

The Food Cure

Mrs. George Ross, Augusta street, Cornwall, Ont., writes: "Some two years ago I was attacked with neurasthenia, or nervous prostration. I doctored with different doctors without any good results, and even took a trip to a distant city to see if I could not recuperate. But upon returning I found I was no better — in fact, I kept getting worse all the time. I had no appetite, could not sleep, and had to be helped up and down stairs. I also had terrible headaches. One day a book was left at the door telling about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I decided to try it. My folks derided the idea, but I went ahead and secured a box, and before finishing that first box I could see that I was getting better. You may be sure I was delighted to find a remedy that would give me relief. I continued taking them, and recovered so thoroughly that I was able to help with the housecleaning that spring. During my nervous collapse I had failed from 115 pounds to 90, and since my recovery have weighed as much as 110 pounds. I still keep Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house, and use them when I feel the need of them. I have recommended them to a great many people around Cornwall, as I feel that I cannot speak too highly of them."

The nerve cells are starved and must have nourishment. The blood fails to supply this want, so you must give to the blood in condensed and easily assimilated form the elements from which Nature forms new blood and new nervous energy.

This is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does, and it does it so well that no treatment for the nerves has ever met with the enormous success of this great food cure.

You can scarcely take up a newspaper without reading of someone who has been restored to health and vigor and happiness by means of this reconstructive treatment. This is Nature's way of effecting cure, and is, therefore, both certain and lasting. A little patience is required, but once the building-up processs is under way you will find daily evidence that you are regaining health and the joy of living.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE.

Tennyson or Longfellow could take a worthless sheet of paper and write a poem on it and make it worth $65,000. That's genius. There are some men who can write a few words on a sheet of paper and make it worth $5,000,000. That's capital. The Dominion of Canada can take a half-ounce of silver and stamp upon it a crowned head and make it worth 50 cents. That's money. A mechanic can take material worth $5 and make it into watch springs worth $1,000. That's skill. There is a man in Toronto who can take a 50-cent piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth several thousand dollars. That's art. A lady can buy a hat for 75 cents, but prefers one that costs $27. That's foolishness. The author of this could write a cheque for $90,000,000, but it wouldn't be worth a cent. That's tough. Joseph Flavelle can rise in the morning at 6.30, have family prayer, take breakfast, order his $12,000 car go to his office, whistle a hymn, place his thumbs in his vest pockets, and get a rake-off of $3,000 a day. That's gall and bacon.—Contributed.

Italian Line Aided By British Monitors Is Holding Strongly Against The Enemy

British Monitors in Action in the Vecchia Marshes--Italians Fighting Desperately in the Mountains to Prevent Turning of the Piave River Line--British Troops Make Successful Advance on Passchandale Ridge

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 17.—British artillery is in action against the Austro-Germans to-day, and has caused havoc to the enemy's plans for an advance. Observers reported great gaps torn in the Austro-German lines by the deadly rain of shells. At many points the British fire has paralyzed the enemy's offensive scheme. The Teutonic artillery is outranged by these British guns. A wilderness of mud along the front, coupled with lack of adequate bridges across the Livensa and Taslamento, has forced the enemy for the most part to rely on five inch field guns. Many of these have been silenced by the British batteries.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Nov. 17.—British Monitors are in action against the German-Austrian troops in the marshes of Vecchia, striving to hold back the Teutonic invaders from Venice. This announcement of the first British co-operating forces to aid Italy, came from Rome to-day with additional encouraging news that everywhere the Italian line was holding strongly. A fierce artillery duel is sweeping along the whole fifty-mile front to the River Piave and the northern fringe of the Alps. In the mountains the Italians are holding desperately.

Despatches from Rome to-day reported this army literally battling inch for inch with the Austrians holding them sufficiently to give evidence of the ultimate defeat of the enemy's attempt at turning the Piave River line.

Here in London it was declared if the present line could be maintained for a few more days the worst danger to the line will have been passed. By that time it was estimated here the British and French troops and guns would be at the front making their strength felt. Overtopping the sentimental fear for Venice were the cold military facts of the situation at the other end of the line. The desperation of the Italian defence there has made the battle a costly one for the Austrians. They have only succeeded in advancing four miles into Italian territory. The real trial of strength against the main part of the Piave line has not yet come. The artillery duel is approaching its maxim of intensity, but infantry actions so far have been in the nature of sparring for positions in this main line fighting, it was evident, awaiting the outcome of the fighting to the north. The London press to-day was more optimistic over the Italian situation, although frankly prepared for the worst.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Further progress was made yesterday by the British troops on the main ridge in the vicinity of Passchendaele, on the Belgian battlefront, the British War Office announced to-day.

The communication follows: A successful operation was carried out late yesterday evening by detachments from Highland, Berkshire and Lancashire Battalions in the vicinity of Passchendaele. Further portions of the enemy's defences on the main ridge north of the Village, including a strongly fortified farm, were captured by us. We also tok a number of prisoners. West of this locality also we have advanced our lines slightly at certain points. The enemy's artillery has been active throughout the night on the battlefront. German shelling has been particularly severe in the Passchendaele sector.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Nov. 17.—The military correspondent of the Times, referring to Premier Lloyd George's recent speech in Paris, says: "When the Premier narrates the follies of the British and Foreign colleagues and lays responsibility for Allied misfortune on them, while forgetting his own share in these transactions, it becomes necessary to speak out. The writer then examines separately the Premier's assertions to show that the Government of which Premier Lloyd George is a member is responsible for the failures which he pilloried in Paris. After commenting adversely on the Premier's references to the Russian and Italian campaigns, the writer says: "It would have been better had Lloyd George adhered to facts."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 17.—There were active artillery engagements last night, north of Courteoon, says to-day's official communication. We repulsed an enemy detachment which attempted to approach our lines in this region and inflicted serious losses on it. Raids on German trenches southeast of St. Quentin in Champagne, east of Telon and in Woevre enabled us to bring back prisoners, including one officer and war materials. In Upper Alsace the artillery fighting was rather heavy at Schonlez. Everywhere else the night passed in quiet.

A Fire At Havelock

Store, Houses and a Garage Burned in Early Morning Blaze

HAVELOCK, Nov. 17.—The village was visited by a disastrous fire, or rather two fires, this morning, by which Mr. Fred Squire's store house, a building owned by the C.P.R., and Mr. A. McIntyre's garage were practically destroyed.

The blaze broke out about three o'clock this morning from an unknown cause in the Squires store house, in which there was stored a quantity of coal, flour, and other commodities. The C.P.R. sheds next caught fire, and during the progress of the conflagration the garage of Mr. McIntyre was seen to be in flames, and the building was badly damaged.

HERO OF BERLIN INCIDENT MEETS DEATH AT FRONT

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Nov. 17. — Pte. John Alexander Ferguson, who became famous at the beginning of the war when he tied a rope around the bust of Kaiser Wilhelm at Berlin, now Kitchener, Ont., and dragged it into a pond, was killed in action October 30th. Ferguson enlisted in Guelph. He was to have had a furlough at Christmas, and had planned to wed an English girl.

Syracuse Post-Standard: The new covenant means a great deal more than added power to the allied cause. It means a better understanding between Japan and the United States, brought about by a well-defined statement of their particular and common rights in China and by the elimination of the misapprehensions which Germany has so sedulously fed.

THOUSANDS FACE STARVATION IN STRICKEN RUSSIA

Lack of Food and Supplies in Both Petrograd and Moscow and Railway Strike Will Result in Death For Many People

KERENSKY DISAPPEARS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Russian internal strife has already cost probably 5,000 lives—and thousands more in the crowded centres of Petrograd and Moscow now face death by starvation unless the coalition government to-day reported forming, takes immediate steps. Russia has not a strong man now. Judging from the first direct news from Petrograd in several days arriving to-day Premier Kerensky has dropped out of sight. One report had him a refugee in disguise fleeing from Bolsheviki wrath. General Korniloff's whereabouts were not stated. In Moscow the latest news indicated a great force of Bolsheviki troops attacking the Provisional government forces barricaded in the Kremlin. This was exactly the reverse of the Moscow reports of a few days ago, when Kerensky's men were reported to have bottled up the Bolsheviki in the Kremlin. Lack of food and supplies in both Petrograd and Moscow was believed likely to force an early truce between the factions.

All of Russia's railway workers have been on the verge of a strike for more than a week. If the strike comes, with its stopping of all traffic, thousands will starve, there will be no means of transporting munitions to the troops, and there may result scenes of anarchy beside which street fighting and bloodshed of even the darkest months of Russia will be nothing.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KILLED IN ACTION.

Corp. Richard Wedlock, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. Daniel Birdgenaw, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. James Morris, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Harry Kershaw, formerly of the 39th Battalion, Peterborough.

Lance-Sergt. Bert Williams, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Havelock.

Pte. W. B. Elliott, Canadian Army Medical Corps, Cavan.

Lieut. Geoffrey Hilliard, Infantry, Lakefield.

Corp. A. Charman, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 463 Homewood Ave.

CORP. RICHARD WEDLOCK.

Corp. Richard Wedlock, formerly of the machine gun section of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported killed in action. A message from Ottawa to his wife living at 80 Ware Street, announced the sad intelligence. Corp. Wedlock, who was a son of Mr. Thomas Wedlock, of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company, was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas as a member of the machine gun section of that unit, afterwards transferring to another Canadian battalion at the Front.

PTE. DANIEL BIRDGENAW.

An official message from Ottawa this morning brought the tragic news that Pte. Daniel Birdgenaw, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, had been killed in action on 27th October.

Pte. Birdgenaw, who was the son of Mr. John Birdgenaw, 231 Perry Street, enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion in company with his brother, Pte. Frank Birdgenaw, in September, 1915. The brother was killed on 17th January of this year, and now Mr. Birdgenaw's other son has made the supreme sacrifice. Pte. Dan. Birdgenaw was married, and his wife survives him.

PTE. JAMES MORRIS.

Pte. James Morris, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here shortly before the battalion left Peterborough for Barriefield Camp, is officially reported killed in action. Pte. Morris went over with the 93rd, and was transferred to another Canadian infantry battalion at the Front. His relatives live in England.

LIEUT. GEOFFREY HILLIARD.

Lieut. Geoffrey Hilliard, son of Mr. George Hilliard, of Lakefield, is officially reported seriously wounded in the face and arms, and admitted to the British Red Cross Hospital at Le Tourquet.

Lieut. Hilliard went overseas with the Royal Canadian Dragoons and was transferred to the 19th Battalion. Another brother, Lieut. George Hilliard, is at the Front.

PTE. HARRY KERSHAW.

Pte. Harry Kershaw who enlisted here with the 57th quota to the 39th Battalion on 7th January, 1915, and went overseas with that unit, is officially reported wounded. Pte. Kershaw's relatives live in England, but he had been a resident of the district for some time before donning the khaki.

LANCE-SERGT. BERT WILLIAMS.

Lance-Sergt. Bert Williams, a member of the Havelock platoon of the 93rd Battalion, has been added to the long list of casualties among the former members of the Peterborough Battalion. Lance-Sergt. Williams

Convention in Victoria Hall last Evening Broke up in Disorder Without a Candidate Being Finally Decided Upon by the Gathering

SCENES OF DISORDER

The fusion meeting at Victoria Hall last night, called to choose a Unionist candidate, wound up in a confusion meeting. In fact it ended in a battle royal, with the winner still undecided, and the convention failed to place a candidate in the field.

Looking at it from a neutral standpoint, it would seem that Capt. J. H. Burnham out-manoeuvred his opposition. He was not on hand himself, but his lieutenants had rallied a solid contingent of that section of the Conservative party which had supported him through thick and thin, and his organization broke loose at the proper moment and stampeded the meeting, aided by a strong delegation of members of the Great War Veterans' Association, who occupied seats in the gallery. The Burnham squad were numerically about as strong as the Liberal and Conservative citizens who had sunk their party differences in their effort to secure a candidate and vocally had the Fusionists beaten a city block.

An Illogical Position.

The Burnham faction were rather illogical in their action, inasmuch as at one moment they were clamoring that the convention was not a properly constituted one, "only a meeting of scoreheads" one man termed it, and at the next they were demanding that Capt. Burnham's name should go before the meeting as a candidate. Chairman Dobbin tried to rule that as Capt. Burnham had already been nominated by the Conservative Association he could not be a candidate before last night's convention, but the Burnham rooters refused to accept that ruling, and finally his name was submitted. The others nominated were Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mayor Duffus and Mr. E. A. Peck. Mr. Gordon withdrew, but the other two allowed their names to go before the meeting, and an attempt was made to take a vote by a show of hands. Mayor Duffus was first voted upon, but received little support from the gathering.

Pandemonium Reigned.

Then came Mr. Peck's name, and finally Capt. Burnham's, the attempt at obtaining an expression of the meeting's sentiment being made amidst the greatest excitement. Pandemonium reigned with the organized noise of the Burnham faction predominating, and it was impossible to definitely give the result. From the press table there did not seem to be much choice as far as the showing of hands went, but there was a decidedly Burnham sound to the noise, especially from the gallery, where the War Veterans whooped long and lustily for the candidate whom they had endorsed. There was a large attendance of ladies. All was calm and peaceful during the early stages, although low rumblings from the centre of the hall, where George Helson, Dawson Kennedy and others of the Burnham staff had the faithful herded, ready for action when the time came for going over the top, indicated that there was trouble in the air.

Liberals and Conservatives were well represented on the platform. Ald. Dobbin was elected chairman, and in the circle behind him were Mayor Duffus, W. H. Bradburn, G. Walter Green, Lieut.-Col. Jos. Mills, R. B. Rogers, J. A. Aylmer, Basil D. Hall, Robt. Fair, W. C. Austin, G. N. Gordon, Jos. Wearing, R. J. Sisden, C. E. Coleman and the speakers of the evening, Mr. Jas. Hales, K.C., of Toronto, and Mayor Geo. D. Conant, of Oshawa.

The Victory Loan.

Ald. Dobbin after briefly referring to the fact that it was the first time in sixty-seven years that Liberals and Conservatives had come together in Peterborough, to attempt to choose a candidate gave way to Mr. W. H. Bradburn, chairman of the Peterborough County Victory Loan committee who made a stirring plea to the audience to buy Victory Loan bonds. He pointed out that the British Empire needed money to carry on the war and

MR. PECK ANNOUNCES THAT HE IS NOT IN THE CONTEST

Would Have Required a Very Much Stronger Expression of Opinion Than Was Shown in His Favor to Have Persuaded Him It Was His Duty to Enter

EXPLAINS HIS POSITION

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As one of those whose names were somewhat prominent at last night's meeting in Victoria Hall, a few further words from me may not seem out of place. With many others, I had felt that in view of the formation of a Union Government, composed of Liberals and Conservatives, a practically new party, to be designated.

The Union Party has come into existence and that Union Party was entitled to be assembled in each Riding for the purpose of selecting a candidate to represent its views. If this were not done the result would follow that many Liberals who have broken (temporarily at any rate) from their party, for the purpose of supporting a Union Government, would have no opportunity of expressing their views on the question of the candidate to represent them.

How such conventions should be called would depend upon circumstances, as no recognized precedent exists. It might be, as has been suggested, that the Executives of the two old parties might get together and arrange for such a convention, but if the Executives do not act, are the men I have referred to to be absolutely debarred from getting together in such an important matter.

In this Riding, no action having been taken by the Executives, the only other course was followed.

A number of old Liberals and Conservatives met together and arranged for the calling of a public and open meting. I consider that the meeting last night was quite justified in selecting and endorsing a Union Candidate, if those present had seen fit to do so. That no definite decision was come to, I consider, a great pity. So far as I am concerned, and as I stated, I only wished to obtain the views of the meeting and to be guided by what it might desire.

Discussion as to what the result would have been, if an accurate expression of view could have obtained from each individual present, is of no importance. It would have required a very much stronger expression of opinion than was shown in my favour to have persuaded me it was my duty to enter into the contest.

POILUS LEAVING FOR ITALY HAPPY AS SCHOOL BOYS

Glad of an Opportunity to Get Out of the Trenches After Three Years and Meet the Enemy in the Open—French Troops Had Battle of Marne Spirit

GREAT ENTHUSIASM

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By W. S. Forrest.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 17.—Afire with enthusiasm, glad of an opportunity to get out of three years in the trenches to fight an enemy almost in the open, France's troops left for Italy with a Battle of the Marne spirit. Now that this tangible evidence of France's aid to her ally has departed, permission was granted to-day for a United Press staff correspondent to tell something of the ardor with which the French troops started. They were like schoolboys on a holiday. I saw them arriving at a village of the main line railway after long marches that tested even their war tried legs. They swept into the streets, halted, threw off their heavy marching kits, and with never a stop for rest, began working like beavers to stow their kitchens, horses, tents and other impediments into the waiting trains. They sang and chatted and whooped. The Poilus were anxious to get away. One detachment outspeeded the others. They got aboard first, the engine chuckled with stentorian whuffs and the train sailed out on the first lap of a sixty mile journey with its human burden happily aboard. Not one minute was lost in backing a second train and it too was loaded and started with vim and enthusiasm. Then came a third, and the process went on, and the most interested spectators were a large group of German prisoners working on a nearby side track. They very soon learned from the shouting French soldiers where the loaded trains were bound. If any evidence was needed of France's morale and how her fighters regard the war, the scene to-day was sufficient. The troops had the morale of the early months of the war. It was a chance to fight—and to fight, not from the rat-ridden, vermin-infested, stinking trenches, but this time probably in the open. Officers and men alike hailed the chance.

FRANK JENNE Says :

I have some new overcoats that will surely make the boys "come to me." My rivals say that Semi-ready tailoring is ultra-conservative and only appeals to men of mature years. A look as these new coats will captivate the younger young men. "Come to me."

MACHINE POLITICS AND MOB LAW.

It seems that the Union Government does not fulfill the promises of its organization, if, in other places, as in Peterborough, machine politics and mob law are given their way and used as means of promoting political unity of action.

In the Union Government it is assumed that party politics are eliminated and that the Government is to lead the country in a solid, undivided endeavour to help Canada do her only politics is, win the war.

Liberals and Conservatives all over the country have laid aside party differences and co-operated with the object of obtaining candidates whose only politics was, win the war.

In Peterborough this object was complicated by the presence in the field, under a two-years'-old nomination, of a candidate who claimed, without any other warrant than his own assertion, that he was the real Union candidne.

A very respectable element of the Conservative party did not regard him as a Union candidate or even a party candidate; and, of course, many Liberals in favour of Union were desirous of co-operating with their Conservative fellow-citizens to secure a Union candidate who would represent solid and legitimate Union sentiments.

Accordingly, a meeting of citizens, irrespective of party, was convened last night to select a bona-fide candidate. But the purpose of these patriotic citizens was defeated by an exhibition and combination of machine politics and mob rule. The meeting was "packed;" and, no doubt at the instance of Mr. Burnham. Though he was absent from the city, as was ostentatiously made known, the "machine" by which Mr. Burnham packed a nominating convention was kept in such good working order even in his absence that last night it did its work, and to the machine was added the element of mob rule, and the object was gained to disrupt the meeting and convert honest attempt at fusion into confusion.

Mr. Burnham may have succeeded, but his victory was in the spirit of Germany's victory—intrigue and violence.

If Mr. Burnham is an honourable man he should feel humiliated and ashamed at the outrage he has committed upon the most rudimentary conventions of decency. This conduct can only be excused upon the grounds that Germany uses to justify her outrages and the violation of all the laws of civilised warfare, the necessity of succeeding—by hook or by crook.

A great many persons have rather shrewd doubts of the bona-fides and genuineness of the Union Government. They hold that it is only the Borden Government in another form; that the partisan spirit is still a ruling element; and we have in the exhibition of last night a fairly good proof of this contention.

The Union Government was formed to bind together the two great parties in war winning administration. Liberals and Conservatives were supposed for the purpose to have put aside their party preferences and convictions to permit of united effort.

In Peterborough there were many Liberals working in honest unity of endeavour with the most respected element of the Conservative party; and it was rather scurvy treatment of these Liberals, honestly, we assume, trying to co-operate with their opponents in the interests of Union Government, to run them down by a party machine operated in the interests of a machine candidate whose selfish obstinacy has shown less interest in a Union Government than in promoting personal advantage and party interests by Prussian methods, crookedness, intrigue, and cunning.

We are fighting against Hun methods, but we are called upon to fight in West Peterborough under leadership — procured by machine politics and Hun methods.

MANY WAYS FOR MONEY.

There are many ways, and many good ways, for the use of money; and, perhaps, there are none better than those which contribute to the comfort or cheer of our war-worn soldiers. Money is well spent for Red Cross work to provide healing and convalescent comforts. But our soldiers are not altogether animals; they need some other form of relief—a chance to stretch their legs, so to speak.

There is a strong and very proper demand for giving our soldiers who have been on the ground from the beginning a little holiday at home. But this it seems can't be done. There are no other, or not enough, Canadian soldiers available to take their place.

And it is a hard place to take, and that should appeal to the potential soldiers at home—if any place is hard to take the Canadians are put at the job, and they take it—Vimy Ridge and Paschendaele.

If we can't give our soldiers a home furlough, it is possible to give them a holiday in France—to permit them to visit Paris. Many soldiers at the front, a few at a time, go on leave to Paris. There a club for British soldiers and sailors from all parts of the Empire, has been established—at the Hotel Moderne. The club is designed to meet the needs of British (and Canadian) soldiers on leave in Paris. It is a home during their stay and a guide to seeing the wonders of Paris with safety and to advantage.

Of the 6,000 men on leave who have registered at the hotel during the past two months, 3,600 have been Canadians. It would be a great comfort to Canadain women to see the charming home-like welcome, the good beds and good meals at moderate prices, their husbands and sons receive at the Army and Navy Club in Paris, carried on by the ladies of the British colony.

Of course the machinery of such a club means money, and a small contribution to keep up the club in the interests of our boys, would be welcome. Shouldn't we feel interested?

The calculating, hard-headed and —hard-hearted—patriot may argue that we send soldiers to France to fight, not to take holidays in Paris. But, think a moment. In spite of all this war, you have your "on leave" hours. You go to theatres, picture shows, "bridges," and all that sort of thing, and you don't need the "leave" like the boys at the front; you have good homes and pleasant conditions.

If you under such circumstances, feel the need of relaxation, what must the need of the Canadian soldier be? Week after week, in muddy, water-soaked trenches, sleeping in wet clothing, facing danger and death every moment for weeks on end. They certainly need a "leave" more than you do.

If they go to Paris they will find a home during their stay at the Army and Navy Club. Your contribution would help make a trench-worn, battle-wearied Canadian soldier enjoy a few days' happiness in Paris.

Anyone who wants to help can send a draft or cheque made to the order of the British Army and Navy Club, to Phillipe Roy, General Commissioner for Canada, 8 Place de la Republique, Paris, France.

Leaden bullets win battles; "silver bullets" of the Victory Bond brand, win wars.

No Coloring To Be Used In New Oleomarjarine

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Additional regulations to govern the manufacture of oleomargarine in Canada and its importation into this country have been issued by the Food Controller. Many applications for licenses have been received and the latter will be issued from the office of the Veterinary Director-General, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, so as to be effective on and after December 10. Persons who desire licenses and who have not already applied should make application to the Veterinary Director-General's Office.

The new regulations require that "no substance intended for the coloring of oleomargarine shall be imported into Canada in packages containing oleomargarine, and no manufacturer, wholesale dealer or retailer dealing in oleomargarine shall deal in, sell or give away any substance intended for coloring oleomargarine.

Oleomargarine may be sold only in original packages. Small packages must be wrapped separately, and on each label or wrapper "oleomargarine" must be printed or marked as the most conspicuous word. The name and address of the manufacturer, together with the official inspection mark of all labels, wrappers and packages.

Strict provisions are made to ensure official inspection of all materials entering into the composition of oleomargarine. No oleomargarine may be manufactured in Canada except under the supervision of inspectors appointed by the Minister of Agriculture, while imported oleomargarine must be accompanied by the export certificate of government inspection in the country of origin.

R. R. Hall Emphasizes The Need Of Supplying Allies With Food

Every one in this city and county are anxious to see the war won. Every one is anxious to serve to the best of his ability. The only question is how can we serve so as to do our part in the winning of this war.

The British government sent Lord Northcliffe, as the head of the British War Commission, to the United States and Canada for the purpose of pointing out the Allies' greatest needs. His sober, sane words, speaking recently in the City of Toronto, should be listended to and acted upon. He says:

"The question of the food supply of the army was, with the solitary exception of trans-atlantic shipping, the vital question of the war."

Lord Northcliffe, speaking in Chicago on October 24th, 1917, stated:

"I do not see the signs of that bridge across the Atlantic without which all this recruiting, all this enthusiasm, all this manufacturing will be null and void. Therefore, I urge you, entreat you, to believe that your army without transports will be valueless. In this matter of shipping you strike at a vital point in the waging of the war. If you cannot get the supplies to the men it seems to me almost idle to add to your already vast army."

Lord Rhondda, the British Food Controller, has also informed the Canadian people as follows:

"The information I have is that during the forthcoming twelve months our minimum requirements in food stuffs from the United States and Canada will amount to over $10,000,000 tons and will represent the expenditure, without freight charges, exceeding $1,250,000,000 or, roughly speaking, between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 a day. Most of this will be for the purchase of cereals, hog products, sugar and meat."

It is to be regretted that neither the Borden government nor the so-called Union government have announced any constructive policy whatever to increase food production.

In fact our Canadian farmers are being discouraged to produce foodstuffs by the Borden-Rowell government. The Borden-Rowell government are treating with contempt the advice and the appeals issued by the special agents of the British government who know and appreciate the need for food to supply Great Britain, France and Italy.

A shortage in food would be the greatest disaster that could fall to our noble Allies and would give Germany a tremendous advantage in the winning of this war. There never was a time when the Canadian people should exercise their well known faculty of common sense. I state in all earnestness to the electors of West Peterborough that the situation is too serious for claptrap and cheap skate politics. Canada must do her share in the supplying of men to assist our noble boys at the front and Canada must do her share in supplying our Allies ...h food. If we do not produce food we cannot supply our Allies with it unless we live on half rations at home and are placed at the mercy of the union of profiteers and privilege, who have surrounded and still surround Sir Robert Borden.

Yours respectfully,
R. R. HALL.

Peterborough, Nov. 17th, 1917.

FUTURISTS.

Imagination may be either a joy or a sorrow. Two small girls had such vivid fancies that the consequences were nearly as serious as if the event had occurred in real life. They were talking about their dream for the future.

"When I grow up," said Mary, "I am going to be a school teacher."

"Well, I'm going to be a mother with four children," said Stella.

"Well, when they come to my school I'm going to whip them, whip them, whip them"

"You mean thing" said Stella, as the tears came into her eyes. "What have my poor children ever done to you"

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

Has Not Had An Hour's Sickness Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT

78 Lees Ave., Ottawa, Ont., August 9th, 1915.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 2½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

WALTER J. MARRIOTT.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

PEACE PROPAGANDA TO BE STAMPED OUT

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Home Secretary anonunced in the House of Commons that the Government would seek power under the Defence of the Realm Act to compel all pamphlets relating to the war or the conclusion of peace to bear the authors' and printers' names and be submitted to the press bureau for approval.

Philip Snowden, Socialist, sought to move the adjournment of the House to debate what he called an attempt to suppress advocacy of the peace propaganda, but was unable to secure sufficient members to support his motion.

To Stop a Persistent, Hacking Cough

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

TORY MACHINE AIDED BY THE

the Canadian people were asked to subscribe $150,000,000. Peterborough's allotment of this was $750,000 and the committee were confident that they could make it a million. He was glad to inform the audience that over $300,000 had already been subscribed.

Mr. Jas. Hales, K.C.

Mr. Jas. Hales, K.C., in a vigorous address, advocated support of the Union government. At such a crisis as this when the country was engaged in a fight for its life, for the liberty handed down to the people, it was not a time for fighting one another along party lines. After discussing the developments of the war and paying a warm tribute to the gallant work of the Canadians at the front, Mr. Hales remarked that the question was now, 'Shall we support the boys at the front or shall we think about it and wait to take a referendum upon it.' The winning of the war was the supreme issue, said Mr. Hales before briefly discussing and endorsing the planks of the Union government manifesto.

Mayor Conant, of Oshawa.

Mr. Geo. D. Conant, Mayor of Oshawa, who introduced himself as a lifelong Liberal, and said that he had come to the meeting at the request of his friend, Mr. N. W. Rowell, was the next speaker, and strongly supported the Union government. He had always admired, even loved Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but he could no longer follow him in the course that the Liberal leader had adopted in regard to conscription. "The supreme issue is not whether Canada is to be governed by Liberal or Conservative," remarked the speaker. "It is whether we are to be governed by the British or by the Germans." Supporters of the Laurier party may talk about profiteers, food control and other matters, but the great issue was the winning of the war. The Liberals who had joined with Sir Robert Borden had done so from a sense of duty.

The speaker made a strong plea for unity of action in this riding.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer,

Mr. J. A. Aylmer, the first of the local speakers, told the audience something about the Win-the-War League and explained its organization and aims. It was time, the speaker thought, for people to bury their politics and bring all the strength of the country to bear upon the problem of winning the war.

Mr. Robt Harstone.

Mr. Robt. Harstone, who said that he had always been a Liberal, felt that the question was to get support for the boys at the front. "Put politics at one side," said Mr. Harstone. "People shouldnt be foolish at a time like this. Politics are not worth a cent."

Mr. Harstone pointed out that the Union government could not have been accomplished if it had not been for the Liberals who joined in the movement. Discussing Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attitude towards conscription, the speaker said that his scheme was not fast enough for him.

Mr. R. J. Soden.

Mr. R. J. Soden made a strong plea for unity of action and for the support of the Union government. His position was that he was prepared to support the candidate chosen at the convention provided that he be endorsed by Sir Robert Borden. If, however, Sir Robert endorsed somebody else, the speaker was ready to support that choice.

Col. Mills.

Lieut.-Col. Mills pointed out that the object of the meeting was to choose a Unionist candidate. He remarked that Capt. Burnham had been nominated over two years ago as a Conservative candidate at a time when there was no question of Union government in the air.

Mr. Jos. Wearing.

Mr. Wearing, who said that he had been born a Liberal, achieved Liberalism and had Liberalism thrust upon him, remarked that although he had always had a great respect for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he could not support him in the position he had taken in regard to the Military Service Act.

Dealing with the local situation, Mr. Wearing said that Mr. Burnham, nominated two years ago by a party convention, should have resigned as the Conservative nominee and cleared the decks for the selection of a Unionist candidate. "Premier Borden must endorse the candidate chosen by to-night's convention," said the speaker.

The Nominations.

Nominations were then called for, with the following names placed before the meeting:

G. N. Gordon—Nominated by F. Wyman and J. Creighton.

E. A. Peck—Nominated by G. Walter Green and B. D. Hall.

Mayor J. J. Duffus—Nominated by Robt. Fair and R. B. Rogers.

The chairman was about to declare nominations closed when the first storm signals began to fly.

George Helson nominated Capt. J. H. Burnham amidst considerable noise and the nomination was seconded by Dawson Kennedy.

Mr. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, the first of the candidates nominated, made his position clear in a characteristically eloquent speech. Speaking to the Labour men who had nominated him, Mr. Gordon pointed out the peculiar nature of the present election with the larger soldier vote that would be polled, and remarked that he did not believe that the present was the proper time for a Labour candidate. Mr. Gordon endorsed the Military Service Act. It was the law of the land and Mr. Gordon could not, he said, support an issue in regard to the Military Service Act that had a referendum attached to it. There had been serious mistakes, he said. He instanced the profits of Sir Joseph Flavelle as one of these, and remarked emphatically that it was a mistake to allow Bourassa to spread his seditious talk. "He should be interned," said the speaker, who wound up his address by asking permission of his mover and seconder to withdraw and support the choice of the convention.

Mr. E. A. Peck.

Mr. Peck spoke briefly. He said he had no ambition to re-enter public life, as he felt that he had done his bit as a member of the Provincial House. However, as he was most strongly in favour of conscription, it would be illogical for him to refuse to be conscripted, and if the convention wanted him he was prepared to accept the candidature.

Mayor Duffus.

His Worship Mayor Duffus also expressed his willingness to accept the nomination if it were the wish of the meeting. His Worship, after making a strong appeal to the audience to support the Victory Loan, reviewed his municipal career and remarked that he was prepared to carry out the responsibilities of a member of parliament along the same lines.

A Stormy Petrel.

The chairman was about to put the names to the meeting when a stormy petrel hove on the scene in the person of Mr. J. Guise-Bagley, who got to his feet at the front of the hall.

"As Mr. Burnham is not here in person to speak for himself," Mr. Guise-Bagley commenced, when he was interrupted by Chairman Dobbin.

"I don't think Mr. Burnham's name should go before this convention," said Ald. Dobbin. "He was nominated as a Conservative candidate and is in the same position as Mr. Hall, who was nominated by a Liberal convention."

This was as far as the chairman got when the storm broke loose.

"Play the game. Play it fair," shouted the Burnham machine, and the War Veterans, with cries of "Platform" and "give him a chance," encouraged J. Guise Bagley as he maintained his position in the front line trenches.

"I have had a lot to do with arranging this convention," Mr. Jos. Wearing said, as he attempted to address the meeting. "Too much" came back from the crowd, and then a sustained shout of "sit down" drove Mr. Wearing back to his dugout.

"Was this convention arranged by the Liberal and Conservative executives?" asked Mr. Wm. Kemp from the front of the hall.

"It was not," replied Chairman Dobbin.

"Then it's just a gathering of soreheads," returned Mr. Kemp amid Burnham cheers.

Finally, after five minutes of lung exercise by the crowd, Mr. J. Guise-Bagley climbed up on to the platform. The gentleman who wears his name parted in the middle with a hyphen, added a new angle to the discussion when he at last had a chance to speak.

After referring to Capt. Burnham's work on behalf of the soldiers and the fact that he had given his military pay to the Red Cross, the speaker warned the crowd that the whole affair might be a scheme on the part of the Liberals to split up the Conservative vote.

The voting on the candidates followed, and as already described, the Burnham machine succeeded in effectually crushing the union effort and breaking up the meeting.

As one eye-witness at the front remarked, "some one took the dove of peace over into the corner and strangled it" at this stage of the proceedings.

Altogether it was a big night—a good imitation of a Russian gathering at the present time, with the Burnhamites representing the Maximalists.

HUGE MUNITION ORDERS

New York, November 16. — The War Department has distributed orders for about 21,000,000 shells for 75-millimetre field pieces and anti-aircraft guns. Total inquiry for this size projectile, part of the government 50,000,000 shell programme, was 33,000,000, of which 25,000,000 were to be for field pieces and 800,000 for anti-aircraft guns. Because of lack of capacity only about two-thirds of the business could be placed now, and part of this, about 7,000,000 shells, was awarded to Canadian companies.

Some of the contracts were let at agreed prices while on others payment will be made on a cost and percentage basis. The total involved in the orders placed is estimated at a minimum of $330,000,000.

Ouch ! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow and simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops the soreness at once and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Mil- this announcement since the inaugurlions of American women will welcome ation of the high heels.

America's Position In The War

Will Insist That the Struggle be Run on a Broad Gauge Line

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—America is destined to take an ever growing direction of the war, but she has no desire to "boss" the job and she will not attempt to dictate such vast problems as the disposition of tremendous bodies of troops. Her control will lie in the fact that she is more and more storehouse and paymaster for the struggle, and she will insist in the present Paris conference— and constantly—that there be no "pulling and hauling," that the whole war be run on a broad gauge line instead of with petty bickerings, self interests and narrowness of the past. This summarizes to-day the American position in the European problem as obtained by the United Press through sufficient channels. This Government has already subtlely informed the Allies that they must get together and keep together. This was accomplished through Lansing's reported statement saying that American supplies are not limitless — in other words that the countries must know what they want for the best interests of the whole war, must stop bidding against each other and must subordinate their own national interest to the interest of all. Lord Northcliffe's warning to England that this country may take over control of a great part of the struggle if England does not waken, is regarded in official quarters as chiefly an attempt to stir Britain to fresh initiative. Moreover he apparently was prepared that country for losing its own grasp on many phases of war control, which necessarily must come to the United States.

The GREAT MOVIE MYSTERY!

TWO MAGNIFICENT 1918 MOTOR CARS and $373.00 in Cash Prizes for Best Replies

Here's a problem that kept an entire audience puzzled a whole evening. Can you solve it?

IT'S so interesting that you will get an hour's stimulating mental excercise from it and no end of amusement. You see the owner of this particular Movie Theatre was very proud of the excellent character of the plays he produced and each night would flash on the screen the names of the famous players who would soon be appearing in his pictures. But on this particular night the operator, wanting to play a little joke on his audience, took the names of the players and so mixed up the letters in each name that they spelt out the funny sentences you see above. Time and time again this film was flashed on the screen only to be demanded back. Many of the audience are still trying to solve the mysterious names. Can you help them?

WHY WE ARE AWARDING THESE MAGNIFICENT PRIZES

This great contest is being conducted by the Continental Publishing Co., Limited, one of the largest and best known publishing houses in Canada. That is your guarantee that the prizes will be awarded with absolute fairness and squareness to you and every other contestant.

Frankly, it is intended to further introduce EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's Great Home Magazine. You may enter and win one of the fine Motor Cars or the $100.00 cash prize whether you are a subscriber to EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD or not, and moreover you will neither be asked nor expected to take the magazine or spend a single penny of your money in order to compete. Here's the idea:

EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD is so popular everywhere that it now has the vast circulation of over 125,000 copies a month; but our motto is "EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD in Every Woman's Home." We want all Canadian women to become better acquainted with Canada's great home magazine, knowing that when they are they will be glad to have it every month. Therefore, when we acknowledge your entry to this contest and you know your standing for the prizes, we shall send you without cost a special copy of the very latest issue and a review of many of the fine stories, fashions, house-keeping and money-making features, soon to appear. Then, in order to qualify your entry to be sent on for the judging and awarding of the grand prizes, you will be asked to assist us in carrying on this big introduction plan by showing your sample copy to just four of your friends or neighbors who will appreciate this really worth-while All-Canadian magazine and want it to come to them every month. You will easily fulfill this simple condition in a few minutes of your spare time and we will even send sample copies for you to leave with each of your friends if you would like to have them.

9 RULES FOR SENDING YOUR ENTRY

1. Write on one side of the paper only. Your solutions of the names should appear on one sheet with your full name (stating Mr., Mrs. or Miss) and address in the upper right hand corner. Use a separate sheet of paper if you wish to write anything else.

2. Employees of this company and their relatives are absolutely debarred from competing.

3. Boys and girls under 12 years of age will be given special consideration.

4. Three independent judges, having no connection with the firm, will judge the qualified entries and award the prizes according to the number of points gained on each entry, the answer gaining 100 points, which is the maximum, taking first prize. 10 points will be awarded for the correct solution of each of the names from No. 1 to No. 9 inclusive (No. 10 being given as a "Key" will not count), 20 points will be given for general neatness, style, spelling, punctuation, etc., 10 for handwriting and 40 for originality of the letter accompanying the solution.

5. Contestants may send as many as three sets of answers to the puzzle, but only one set may be awarded a prize.

6. In the event of different members of a family competing, only one prize will be awarded in any one household or family. Address your reply to Movie Contest Editor, Everywoman's World, Continental Publishing Co., Ltd. 48 Continental Bldg., Toronto, Ont.

7. Your solution must be received before the contest will close at 12 noon, April 20th, immediately after which the prizes will be awarded. The names and addresses of the judges will be published in due course and contestants must agree to abide by the judges' decisions.

8. Contestants may send in their solutions at any time before the contest closes, but all must be received by that time.

9. Everywoman's World reserves the right to withhold any prize if the contestant is found fulfilling the condition of the contest.

"Seven Days Leave"

A Frohman Production

Quite the most welcome news of the season theatrically is that of "Seven Days Leave," the big London military comedy, now in its tenth month at the Lyceum Theatre, London, to be seen here at The Grand on Saturday next, Nov. 24, for an engagment of two performances, matinee and night.

Everybody familiar with the theatre of the other side since the beginning of the war, knows the place in theatre-going affection in London of this novel reflex of life as it is in London and its environs to-day. Since its first production at the Lyceum last January, seats for the London performances have been at a premium. Box office receipts exceeding $20,000 weekly have been the rule rather than the exception. Even the phenomenal receipts in London of "Ben Hur," one of the most successful productions ever offered there have been exceeded, week for week, and month for month, since the play's advent.

Daniel Frohman is sponsor for the special Canadian company organized for the presentation of "Seven Days' Leave" on this side.

A comedy, yet background with the present conflict, with scenes that take the observer to war shot London of the moment, with its courage high, spirits confident, but with sinews stiffened and expectant, the play has room for romance that lightens its tense thrills.

Principally observant in its action is young Major Fielding, an English officer on a week's furlough from the Aisne front. Love attacks him fairly but fairly plighted her troth when she is beset with sinister misgivings as a certain rival looms large upon the scene, who makes her fiancée out a non-exclusive philanderer.

And so it looks to the audience for a while until it is seen that the sinuous feminine who is receiving the adoration of the young officer is, in reality, a petticoat spy of the sort that France has just shot. And then it further develops that young Fielding's seven days' leave must be spent in greater part in defeating the destructive machinations of the new enchantress.

Among spectacular scenes of the play is one of the blowing up of a submarine at night.

The company offering the comedy here will tour the principal cities of the Canadas and the provinces.

Distinguished players to be found in the company include Grace Hayle, W. F. Meehan, Daniel Hamilton, John Morton, M. J. Harriman, Maud Williams, John Withrop and Alfred Britton.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

BEAUTIES! That's what one patron called our New Fall Waists. She could not resist choosing several because they were so coaxingly attractive---so original in style and trimming conception.

THE SILK WAISTS of georgette and crepe de chine are plainer than usual but their distinction lies in their new collars and the quality of the embroideries and needlework. The Voile and Organdy Waists are effectively decorated with touches of pretty embroideries and laces which make them just the waists to wear with the New Tailored Suits. RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

The Hawaiin Singers and Players in "The Bird Of Paradise"

The only play on the American stage to-day that deals with life on the Hawaiian Islands, those beautiful Pacific Ocean possessions of Uncle Sam, namely: "The Bird of Paradise," comes to "The Grand" next Wednesday, Nov. 21, for matinee and evening performances.

It was produced seven years ago by Oliver Morosco. The story is by Richard Walton Tully, the author of "The Rose of the Rancho," "Omar, the Tentmaker," and "The Flame," his latest effort. Mr. Tully lived for many years on the islands, and in "The Bird of Paradise" he has brought his audience in close touch with matters pertaining to them just before the annexation. He tells a story of love and intrigue, and although he brings the note of tragedy into the life of the little Hawaiian girl, Luana, who makes her mistake like many others of her sisters before her, yet redeems her error by her own self-sacrifice, also he shows many flashes of humour both native and American.

Laurette Taylor, Bessie Bariscale, Lenore Ulrich, Carlotta Monterey, and Muriel Starr have been seen as Luana, and Mr. Morosco will now offer Miss Celette Scudder, his most recent "find," whose personality and talent fit her admirably for this famous role. She is considered the equal to any who have been seen in the part before. She is surrounded with a carefully selected cast of over twenty acting people, including a quintette of native Hawaiian singers and players, whose music is one of the chief charms of the piece. The stage settings are lavish in the tropical settings and colourings, especially the last act, showing Mt. Kilouea, Hawaii's dreaded volcano, in violent eruption.

The Box Office seat sale opens Monday at 10 a.m.

Mr. Hall's Address

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of West Peterborough in the House of Commons.

MASSES REQUIRE JUSTICE.

Now is the time in the history of this Country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles, and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people, who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

WAR POLICY.

To-day we are engaged in a great war with the Germanic powers in defence of Canada and the Empire. In the great struggle is involved the very existence of the freedom and liberty of mankind.

Our duty is plain. Our course is clear. We must prepare for any sacrifice of blood and treasure. We must fight Germany until we secure a just and lasting peace. In this resolve all Canadians are united from Lake Champlain to the North Pole, and from our furthest east to our furthest West.

Such being our Nation's resolution I pledge myself to support any effective war measure no matter from what source it may come. We must give immediate and constant support to our noble Canadian armies, who have covered themselves with glory. We must support them with men. We must feed them. The rich and poor alike must serve. Our only difference is in how to serve, but serve we will.

FOOD PRODUCTION.

Great Britain has appealed to Canada to send her 300,000,000 bushels of wheat to feed her teeming millions and those of Italy and of France.

This enormous quantity of wheat would feed 40,000,000 people for a whole year. This shows our Allies want food.

To this appeal the Borden-Rowell Government only answers, eat less, slay and eat the calf and the lamb and prepare for meatless days.

Let the Government encourage the Farmer to produce more. Give him agricultural implements duty free. Supply him with suitable labour on fair terms to till the soil. Use our Banks and Loan Companies to lend him money on fair and easy terms of payment to assist in every possible way to plant and produce foodstuffs. Supply the Farmer with steam or gasoline Tractors to enable one man to do the work of five. Shield us from the profiteer who plunders the farmer and robs the consumer, makes profit of a million a year and supports Sir Robert Borden and his hypnotizer, Sir Joseph Flavelle.

A forward policy on these lines would be a double blessing. It would reduce the cost of living at home and would help supply the necessities of our Allies overseas.

Remember one single North West farmer produces 2,000 bushels of wheat per year when well directed and equipped. 100,000 men would produce 200,000,000 bushels of wheat. Those already on the ground in the North West, properly equipped and manned, could produce 200,000,000 bushels more.

I pledge myself, if elected, to support prompt and immediate efforts to reduce the high cost of living.

BORDEN DISCRIMINATES AGAINST ENGLAND.

Since the War began the Borden Government imposed an increased duty of 5 per cent. on British-made goods entering Canada. This should be removed at once. Our great Mother of Nations has troubles enough without the Borden Government thus increasing them.

PROFITEERS AND SOLDIERS.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers and to increase the pensions or allowances to our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of "cold charity" by this grateful Nation, on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

NO CONFIDENCE IN BORDEN.

Sir Robert Borden has been for six years, and is now, the Prime Minister of this Country. Its chief head and front, with full power to choose and remove his Ministers. He is appealing to this Country under an assumed name, but the policies and methods of his Government remain.

I cannot stop to repeat the well-known charges of grafting proved on sworn testimony from the mouths of unwilling witnesses, respecting the purchase of motors, of horses, of binoculars, of bandages, of drugs, of boots, of shells, of gauze fuse and of all the implements of war.

These unseemly transactions have taken place under the nose of Sir Robert Borden, who now seeks to stifle and conceal further investigation with the hollow pretense of so-called Union Government, which in no sense whatever represents true believers in the principles of justice, truth and Liberalism.

BORDEN CONDEMNED FOR SUPPLYING DEFECTIVE AMMUNITION.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden, who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross Rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian Boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross Rifle was used by our troops at the six battles of St. Julien, of Givenchy, of Festubert, of St. Eloi, of Zillebeke and of Sanctuary Wood. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed or wounded and some of them to-day languish in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Government without a chance of voting against it.

GRAFTERS.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

TO OUR NOBLE WOMEN.

I appeal to the women of this riding who are casting their vote for the first time to act on the pure impulse of your heart alone and vote according to the dictates of your own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for you in these anxious times. I know your "beloved is white and rudy"; the chiefest among ten thousand. His countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars," and by him and his I pledge myself to stand.

UNITY OF ACTION AND SENTIMENT.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side, the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

"With firmness in the right as God gives us to 'see the right'" I appeal to you, fellow electors, to press on to finish the great war in which we are engaged "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, his widow and the orphan, to do all which we may achieve and cherish a just and a lasting peace with all nations."

For these reasons I appeal to you, my fellow electors, for your vote and influence in the pending election.

Your Obedient Servant,

R. R. HALL.

EVERY HEADACHE HAS A MEANING

If there is one practice more dangerous than neglecting a headache altogether, it is taking drugs simply to numb the pain. Headaches are nature's warnings and serve a useful purpose. They tell of a function overtaxed or deranged and the wise man or woman takes steps accordingly.

When the Kidneys are not performing their natural function the blood stream becomes clogged with impurities—a fruitful cause of headaches, constant headaches, and more serious complaints if nature's warning is not heeded.

The sufferer feels sluggish, unwilling to work, the backaches and there is a dizzy sensation on stooping. If the cause of the trouble is unchecked, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Swollen Joints and Ankles follow, until Gin Pills are resorted to and the Kidney action restored to normal.

The beauty of the Gin Pill treatment is that first it will in all probability remove both headaches and cause; second, if there is no cure, the simple remedy can do absolutely no harm, and you have only to write the manufacturers and your money will be refunded.

Gin Pills are sold at 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50 on the money-back guarantee. If you have any difficulty in securing Gin Pills write for a free sample to the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, or to the U. S address, Na-Dru-Co Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 26

American Congressmen Under Fire

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Wm. Philip Simms.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Nov. 17.—Five members of the American Congressional delegation were under fire during their recent visit in the front line trenches in Belgium, it developed to-day. German watchers, noting a stir in the Allied lines, figured on something unusual and sprayed an opening in the breast works with machine gun fire, the bullets splashing about the heads of the quintet of American legislators. The five Congress men, who frankly admitted after they had emerged unharmed from Boche fire, that it was just plain luck that saved them, were Representatives Dale, Johnson, Miller, Timberlake and Hicks. With Representatives Goodwin, Dale, Taylor, Stevens and Carter, these five were being shown the trenches south of Dixmude. The five were separated from the remainder of the party at one point and stepped into the lines a bare thirty yards from the Germans. Enemy watchfulness centred on a gap in the breastwork of the lines here, breastworks being made necessary at this point because of the floods. When the Americans got to this point they were greeted with a perfect fury of machine gun fire. The bullets spat wickedly all about their heads. Then a German battery somewhere to the rear flung a screaming shell close by. The visitors hurriedly ducked and escaped. When they got out again all solemnly resolved that "it was very interesting but very foolish" to visit the front line trenches unless one was obliged to do so.

Whitby Publishes Clever Paper

"Soft Diet," a Sheet For Convalescent Soldiers, Will Appear Every Fortnight

"Soft Diet," published by the boys of the Whitby Military Convalescent Hospital, was served to its patient-public for the first time in October.

Written and edited entirely by the men themselves it proves that the only apology which they need advance is the one they hit upon in the leading editorial, the pity they had not done it months before.

Inspired by the shoe-shop arguments where "the weighty problems settled daily, if rolled out flat and placed end to end would stretch from Pay and Records Office, London, to No. 1 Queen's Park," it seems to be a chop-licking mixture of wit and wisdom, calculated to tickle a Tired Business Man and Frayed Veteran in the same spots.

It has no political affiliations. "It does not owe allegiance to any clique or party and it subscribes to no creed except the faith of the men who gave up their lives in Flanders, that freedom might not perish from off the face of the earth."

The fact noted that in the month of September 68 per cent. of the total available hospital strength attended the vocational training classes, and in the first week of October the percentage rose to 77.

"It should be a matter of pride with us to see that our records are never passed by any other hospital, declares the editor, "but there is a wider and more serious truth to be taught by these figures."

"It is a silent and contemptuous answer flung in the teeth of those who preach that the returned soldier expects to be a drone in the hive and drag on the country.

"It is no exaggeration to state that every man—never mind what his disability may be—will be given opportunity to fit himself to become a self-supporting citizen."

Tool Making Popular Course With Veterans

Toolmaking is making as great a claim on the interest of the returning Canadian soldier who must learn a new trade as motor mechanics, and courses are being instituted in all the vocational centres of the Military Hospitals Commission across the country.

The most advanced preparation for this work to-day is at Halifax, where in the Nova Scotia Technical College a returned soldier by the name of Wilson, who was a master mechanic at toolmaking in Winnipeg before he joined the Belgian Army in advance of even Britain's participation in the war, is in charge of the work.

The classes have opened, and it is figured that before long great numbers of disabled men will have been drawn from different portions of Eastern Canada who desire to take that trade up as a means of livelihood. In a year it is figured a man can become as competent under this intensive system as the man who spent a much longer period in apprenticeship under the old one.

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN

CURED BY

MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchestgr, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The CRESSMAN Emporium Limited

TRIBUNAL No. 276
CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS
W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members
Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

"I can't see how any Christian man can push the keen point of a steel bayonet through the quivering flesh of a fellow-creature, many of whom have also been reared in homes of prayer," wrote William Robt. Stevenson, 294 Aylmer Street, in a long letter appealing for exemption. "War," he continued, "is the judgment of God poured out in terrible form against the sin and ungodliness of all the nations engaged, even our own fair land."

The applicant was not a member of any recognized sect of conscientious objectors, and his claim was disallowed.

A Mattress Maker.

John Patrick Sloan said his labour was important to the Peterborough Mattress Company.

"They don't need mattresses in the trenches," Mr. Moore commented, and Mr. Aylmer remarked that the industry was not of national importance.

The claim was disallowed.

J. L. Killingbeck, 22 Park Street, was employed with the Henry Hope Co. until a recent cut in wages, he said, practically forced him out. He intended to go to Toronto to get a job at either the Fairbanks Morse shops or at the Russel Motor factory.

Mayor Duffus remarked that the absence of the Metal Products Co. was being felt by more than the men employed there. The demands of the men for higher and still higher wages had forced the company out of town.

Mr. Killingbeck asked for exemption on the ground of domestic support.

Decision reserved.

Shell Inspector Needed.

Alfred John Lawrence, a shell inspector with the Imperial Munitions Board, was represented by Mr. F. M. Davison, a district inspector, who stated that Mr. Lawrence was needed as an expert inspector.

Exemption allowed until he ceases to be employed as an inspector of munitions.

John Knox, R.R. No. 7, Otonabee, appeared for his son, John Roland Knox, who, he said, was too ill with pleurisy to go before the Medical Board. He is the only son left at home on a farm of 200 acres. One brother has been in the West for some years, and another enlisted in Hamilton a few days ago. The remaining son at home has been ill for some time, and receiving a doctor's attention. The case doesn't come up until Wednesday next.

Sole Support of Mother.

John James Howley, 23 Rogers Street, 23 years old, whose father lost his life in the Quaker Oats fire, was easily the finest specimen of young manhood in the week's procession before this Tribunal. Tall, broad-shouldered, deep of chest, and finely proportioned in his physique, he certainly would make a splendid figure in a khaki uniform. He asked for exemption as his mother's only support. He has two young brothers of ten and thirteen years respectively, and two sisters, aged fifteen and seventeen years. Howley is employed as a C.P.R. brakesman at Havelock, and told the Tribunal that he understood the company intended to support the claims of their men.

"We're all 'A2' men at Havelock," he said.

His mother, who accompanied him, requested the Tribunal to consider her trouble.

"We sympathize with everybody," Mr. Aylmer replied, "but there are women in Peterborough who have lost their only sons. It isn't fair that one family should get behind another in this war."

Decision reserved.

Young Farmer Exempted.

James Alfred Cooney, a young farmer, who lives on the 10th Concession of Otonabee, was accompanied by his widowed mother and his sister. His application was based on the importance of his continuing as a farmer, and the fact that he is the sole support of his mother.

"I am the only man to work our land. Last summer the only help I had was a sixteen-year-old boy for a month to take off the harvest," Mr. Cooney told the Board.

Exemption granted as long as he is employed as a farmer.

Army Needs Chauffeurs.

Alfred Henry Graham, chauffeur for Mr. John Thompson, claimed exemption on the importance of his employment in shipping pulpwood from Peterborough timber limits. Five cars a day of this product, so essential to the paper industry, are being exported.

Mr. Aylmer reminded him of the need of chauffeurs at the front.

"Can you get me in the mechanical transport service?" the former star of the junior hockey team asked.

"No, we simply get the men for general service," Mr. Aylmer answered, but Mayor Duffus promised to recommend him for that branch.

His claim was disallowed.

George Watson Connell, 328 Charlotte Street, appealed as the only support of his mother. He has four half-brothers.

Exemption disallowed.

The claim of W. H. Dennie, 272 Concession Street, was also disallowed.

"Honour System" At The Grand

"The Honour System" at the Grand Opera House, last night, proved one of the most thrilling and interesting film stories that has been seen on the screen here for some time. It is a Fox production, and handled in that master producer's style. "The Honour System" deals largely with the abuses of the old prison system and the horrors of such institutions were vividly displayed.

Springfield Republican: It may be doubted whether the Allies in fact desire such of these nations as are still intact to depart from their neutrality. That it would help the Allies is problematical, while there could be no question as to the catastrophe threatened to the small countries concerned. This being the case, it is not only discourteous but foolish to denounce these neutrals for their neutrality, and unfortunately the American press is showing less tact in this matter than the carefully censored press of Germany.

Sir,—In Tuesday's issue of the Examiner I read the suggestion that the 93rd Battalion instruments be given the G.W.V.A. This is a very good plan. But considering there are men discharged who took those same instruments over and gave a good account of themselves as bandsmen, would it not be proper and only fair to these men to be presented with the instruments they played while overseas? Something like this was suggested at the Opera House when the band gave a concert and when the presentation took place. Then again, these men would only be too willing to use them as veterans. If it would serve a double purpose. They would certainly be valued by such men, considering there is little or nothing being done for returned men. Such an act would be appreciated.—Yours, etc.,

Peterborough.

Peterborough, 16th Nov., 1917.

Sir,—I should very much like to thank you for your kindly appreciation of my efforts at the Shelter. Still, as a public-paid servant, like the soldier at the Front, I have only done my duty. Canada expects every woman this day to do her duty.

"To serve the present age,
My calling to fulfil,
O, may it all my powers engage
To do my Master's will."

I should like, whilst I have pen in hand, to publicly thank the Board for all the words of appreciation that they have given me from time to time. Still hoping to continue doing my duty.—I remain, yours to serve at the Shelter, ... E. Read.

VENICE BUT A SKELETON.

Only 20,000 People Are Left of the Normal Population of 160,000.

VENICE, Nov. 16.—Venice is now almost empty, the population having been reduced from the usual 160,000 to 20,000. The remnant of the population is calm. The Mayor, who is a descendant of the Doges and a Chamberlain to the Queen of Italy, announced to-day that he would remain at his post.

To the Electors of West Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,
Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM,

Six Men Had A Narrow Escape
C. G. E. Truck Will be Recovered Some Time To-Day

One of the big motor lorries of the Canadian General Electric Company which yesterday plunged into the river at the Waterworks pumping station has not yet been recovered from its precarious position. The car will not be severely damaged.

The six men and the driver who were on the truck at the time had a narrow escape. As it was, several of the men were thrown into the water, and five minutes elapsed before the last man was dragged out. The spot where the truck broke through was directly over one of the wheel pits on the north side of the pumping station. The wheel pits are covered with planks which are set into the cement at each end of the pit.

The big car, carrying six men and a couple of casings, got over the first pit safely, and was negotiating the second pit when the planks broke through, letting the truck down into twenty feet of water. The front end of the truck had gained a footing on the cement and the rear portion of the truck was still on the planks when the crash came. Driver Hill threw on more speed and jumped clear of the truck just as the rear wheels of the machine sank and the big truck rolled back into the wheel pit, which is twenty feet deep and full of water.

This morning the men had the tackle in shape for lifting the truck out of the water. Stop logs have been placed in position and the water will be run off to facilitate hoisting operations. The truck should be recovered to-day.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS
If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

$451,594 PAID FOR CHEESE AT THE LOCAL BOARD

Cheese Branch of the Dairy Business Has Thoroughly Come Back According to the Figures

The sales made on the Peterborough Chese Board during the past summer returned the patrons of the factories the huge sum of $451,594.00, almost half a million dollars. At eleven meetings of the Board 26,502 boxes were sold for an aggregate of 2,120,160 pounds, allowing eighty pounds per box. The average price per box was 21.3 cents, the lowest price being 20 7-8 cents, and the highest 21 13-16 cents.

A comparison of the war-time cheese market with that of 1914 indicates the increased revenue the dairy farmers have received in spite of all the financial and trade difficulties that have prevailed this year.

In 1914 the Board registered 18,465 boxes, for 1,477,200 pounds, which, at the average price of 13.38 cents, brought $200,000 to the patrons of the factories in this district.

The figures tell the story, as follows:

In 1914:
1,477,200 pounds of cheese, at 13.98 cents, were worth $200,000.00.

In 1917:—
2,120,160 pounds at 21.3 cents, were worth $451,594.00.

Industry Comes Back.

The figures prove conclusively that the cheese branch of the dairy industry has been rehabilitated. There has not only been an increased production of 642,960 pounds of cheese, but the revenue shows a greater proportional advance of about 125 per cent. The $200,000 realized in 1914, has grown to $451,594 in 1907. Farmers have demanded their price, and have obtained it, and in their prosperity this district has shared to the general advantage of the community. But it would be interesting to present the increased percentage of the cost of manufacturing cheese to compare it with the percentage of increase in the gross revenue. It surely doesn't approach 125 per cent.

Cheese in Canada Yet.

Capt. Oke, at the Victory Loan meeting on Saturday night, stated that Canada's output of cheese this year had been purchased by the British Commission at a price favorable to the farmers, and to-day it chokes the warehouses of the country until shipping space gradually transports it to the Old Country owners.

Mr. McKinnon declared that the Victory Loan should commend itself to farmers and factory employees. The dairymen of Peterborough district will doubtless transfer a large portion of their net profits from this year's cheese sales to the Victory Loan.

The following figures disclose the effect of wartime prices on the production of cheese in the townships around this city:

Boxes—
1908	41,429
1912	27,082
1913	21,191
1914	18,465
1917	26,502

The prices in 1908 ranged from 10 to 12 cents a pound, as compared with 21 3-10 cents, the average during the past summer. Dairymen have not been slow to return to cheese-making under the impetus of high prices. The results appear highly satisfactory in their statistical estimation, and the dairymen undoubtedly appreciate the influence of the British market in maintaining the high prices that could not have been expected from a purely home demand. Fuarthermore, the price of cheese governed, to a large extent, the prices of milk and butter. In short, the entire dairy industry has apparently profited handsomely from the British public's preference for Canadian cheese.

It is unnecessary to add that the great demand and the high prices would not have been felt but for Britain's control of the sea and the dairy farmers while responding to the ned of greater production of cheese, must be aware of their indebtedness to the navy and the sailors, whose sacrifices keep the trans-Atlantic lanes open to commerce in spite of the menace of German submarines.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

The following cases have been disposed of at Tribunal No. 275:

Claude Moore, 133 Sophia Street, an "E" man, and W. S. Sindon, Y.M.C.A., a "C" man, were both exempted until their classes are called out.

G. A. Would, Indian River, an "A" man, was exempted so long as he continues to be a farmer.

Similar judgments were rendered in the case of Robert Cook and W. V. Hunter, both Peterborough County farmers.

E. H. Chesney, 354 Stewart Street, is a "C" man, and he was exempted until his class is called.

J. M. White, 311 Rubidge Street, was exempted until July the first next.

The exemption claim of Burritt Bell, of Harwood, was disallowed.

Threats Against Tribunal Members In Havelock

Squad of Police Dept. Left For Havelock This Afternoon—The Situation is Serious

The three incendiary fires reported in Havelock last evening are attributed to objectors of the Military Service Act. F. J. Squires, a member of the Havelock tribunal, was the most seriously effected. The fire started in a shed on Squires' property and spread to the C.P.R. sheds, while a third fire broke out on the property of A. McIntyre. During the past week several threats have been directed against members of the Havelock tribunal.

Following the first last night the authorities have been notified, and this afternoon Chief of Police Thompson, Constable A. Blade and Detective Newhall left for the railway town, where an investigation will be held. A case of sedition may develop as a result, and if the culprits are caught a heavy penalty may be expected.

LADIES' AUXILIARY FOR THE G.W.V.A.

All ladies interested in the formation of an Auxiliary for the Great War Veterans are again reminded of the meeting in the City Council Chamber on Tuesday night, when Secretary W. E. Tully, provincial organizer, and others will give an address. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at this meeting.

To-night the joint committee to discuss the club room question, will meet at the City Council Chamber at 8 o'clock.

TORONTO FAT STOCK SHOW

The entries for the Eighth Annual Fat Stock Show, which will be held at the Union Stock Yards, Toronto, on Friday and Saturday, December 7th and 8th, will positively close on Monday, November 26th. Mail your entry to-day to C. F. Topping, Secretary, Union Stock Yards, Toronto. He will be glad to mail you the premium list and give you any necessary information regarding the show. The entries so far are very large and promise to be more than ever before in the history of the show, which promises to be a very great success.

Police Ordered Man To The Armouries

Fred Laroche, 174 Lake street, was ordered to report at the Military Service Depot at the Armouries this afternoon by Chief Thompson. He claimed that he was 35 years of age, but the police had information that led them to believe he came within the Act. He was intercepted on the street this afternoon.

WILL GIVE ADDRESSES

In connection with the Patriotic Recital in the Collegiate Assembly Hall on Friday night, Nov. 23rd, arranged by Miss Etta Kempt and Miss Succee, the public will be interested in knowing that Lieut. J. A. McNabb and Mr. Percy Parrington have consented to give addresses. The latter is just back from the United States, where he visited several American military camps. The proceeds are for the purpose of buying a Victrola for a Canadian Convalescent Hospital.

THE WRONG ORDER.

Illustrated Sunday Magazine:—"Ma'am here's a man at the door with a parcel for you."

"What is it, Bridget?"

"It's a fish, ma'am, and its marked C. O. D."

"Then make the man take it straight back to the dealer. I ordered trout."

After President Poincare had reviewed the United States forces American officers formed a circle about him. He addressed them briefly, speaking in French.

"Who did he say" was the question asked of one non-commissioned officer, who stood near the party during the speech, when he rejoined his command.

"I don't know, exactly," was the reply "But I think he said to give 'em hell."

"That's the stuff!" yelled a number of privates in chorus and the word ran all up and down the long khaki lines amid another outburst of cheering.

Kitchener Club Extend Thanks

"We are now on the fourth year of war and again appeal to all those who have so generousiy responded to our request for knitters during the past three years to again respond, and not relax their efforts in providing comforts for our heroes over there.

"We feel that socks are one great essential to the winning of this terrible war.

"The applications from the boys in the trenches and from fathers and mothers whose boys are there, increase instead of diminish and an unlimited number of socks are needed if the Canadian Kitchener League meets the demands made upon it.

"We wish to take this opportunity on behalf of the officers and members of our League to thank all those who have worked so hard in helping to make the splendid total of nine thousand and seventy one pairs of socks and eight hundred and thirty-two other knitted articles.

"There may be some women yet who have a little spare time on their hands that could do a little knitting, and thus render some assistance. Remember we supply the yarn free; all you need is a set of needles, and the League would welcome you in this work.

"Trusting every woman who reads this will give it their most sincere attention and by her aid give a little more comfort to the noble boys, who are fighting tirelessly for our freedom.

"Thanking you again on behalf of the League, I remain,

"Yours truly,

"M. D. Knox, Pres."

Thursday	108,500
Friday	98,750
Total	$419,850

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto Ont.

MAXWELL

We Announce the New Winter Maxwell

The car that makes winter motoring in Canada practical—economical—comfortable.

And motoring, to-day, is an all-the-year-round passenger-transportation NECESSITY.

The Maxwell "all weather top" meets this vital modern transportation need in the most practical way.

The cars are the famous Maxwell touring car and roadster—economical, efficient, durable.

The new thing—the big, progressive thing—is the enclosed top, which gives snappy appearance and closed car comfort at much less than closed car prices.

This is just what you have wanted. Come to our salesrooms and see the cars.

Touring car with all-weather top $1200
Roadster with all-weather top - $1165

MR. PECK ANNOUNCES THAT HE IS NOT

In the result the fight is evidently going to be between Mr. Hall and Mr. Burnham. As to which of these gentlemen, those interested in Union Government, and what it stands for, should support, there is no room for doubt. Mr. Hall's position is antagonistic to the Union Government and to Conscription. It is unthinkable that we Unionists should support a man who is desirous of the return of Laurier to power. And our only other course is to fall in line behind Mr. Burnham and endeavour to roll up for him an overwhelming majority. In view of the tremendous importance of the issues before us, no personal difference should permit us to deviate from what, as I have endeavoured feebly to point out, is our paramount duty.

Yours truly,
E. A. PECK.

BOB ARMSTRONG GOING OVERSEAS

Signaller Clarence Hicks, the former local O.H.A. hockey player, who has been located at Ottawa with his company, is in the city to-day, on short leave, and says that R. C. Armstrong, the clever 247th Battalion player of last season, will not be available for hockey this winter, as he is leaving shortly for overseas. A number of other well known hockey players are also on their last leave. —Toronto Star.

Drunk With $100 Police Save Man From "Dips" In Tow

Two strangers with a bottle of whiskey in a dark lane smoothed the descent of a little old man to the Police Court this morning. With one hundred dollars in his pocket, he was deliberately tempting the few ghouls who ply the vanishing trade of "rolling" intoxicated men.

"He can thank us for the ninety dollars we returned him this morning," said one of the policemen. "When he was arrested he was being followed by a "dip" who would have had the whole hundred."

The other ten dollars was collected as a Police Court fine for being drunk in a public place.

Flag Flying At Half Mast

Mrs. W. G. Morrow, 382 Water Street, has received the following letter from the manager of the Bank of Ottawa at Sudbury in regard to the death of Mrs. Morrow's son, Pte. Orland Morrow:

My dear Mrs. Morrow,

I have learned with keen regret that your son Orland has been killed in action. He was not in my office very long, but he enlisted from here, and for that reason I have followed his career in the Army with a great deal of interest. It was a great shock to me to hear the news from Mrs. Rowatt, as the last time I heard from Orland he was in the Pay Office in England, and did not expect that he would be allowed to go to the Front.

I am enclosing a clipping from yesterday's Sudbury Star, in which your son's name appears on the Honour Roll, with other Sudbury boys. We who knew him best feel a keen sense of loss. He was of a bright, happy nature, which he carried with him to the office, but which he never allowed to interfere with the conscientious discharge of his duties.

Our flag is flying at half-mast in his honour, and shall continue to fly for the remainder of the week, as a tribute to his bravery.

There is only one word of comfort that I can offer you, Mrs. Morrow. Being a father myself, I can appreciate what it must mean to lose a son, but if my boy had to die in early manhood, I could not ask for him a nobler death. What a contrast between those brave fellows who offered their services voluntarily and are now laying down their lives for their country, and the pitiful slackers who are seeking exemption from service, for no reason but that they are afraid to go. Is it not some comfort to know that your son is remembered among the heroes of the great war, and not among the slackers who would not go?

Again assuring you of my sincere sympathy and that of the young ladies of my staff who know him.

I am, very truly yours,
C. M. Brunton.

Wrinkles Disappear "As If By Magic"

"In the removal of wrinkles I have discarded cosmetics entirely," writes Mme. Corsan, the celebrated beauty expert. "The results they produce are deceptive and never permanent. Massaging is only partially successful and it is too slow a method.

"I've never seen anything work such wonders as a simple, harmless solution any woman can prepare and use at home without the least trouble. A half pint of witch hazel and an ounce of good powdered saxolite are all you'll need. Mix the two and apply this refreshing solution to your face daily. The effect is marvellous—instantaneous. The skin becomes firmer, 'tighter,'—every wrinkle and sag is affected. You feel so refreshed after using the wash; you look refreshed, too; soon you'll look ten years younger."

CURRENT COMMENT.

New York Times: It may be as Kerensky says, that "the disorganized state of life in general has had a psychological effect on the people so that they doubt the possibility of attaining their hopes;" but the fit of black depression will pass, new leaders will rise to compose differences, and soldiers will come to the front to inspir the army and restore discipline. The behaviour of the Russian people in this war justifies that hope.

New York Journal of Commerce: Briefly "no glut of steel should be apprehended in the saner, soberer and chastened world which will emerge from the stern ordeal of the awful struggle by which it is now convulsed, because what we call the process of reconstruction will simply be the beginning of an unexampled development of the productive energy of the newly enfranchised nations."

The funeral will be held on Monday at 9 o'clock from Belleghem's undertaking establishment to the Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. WM. THEOBALD.

Word has been received from Mr. Wm. Theobald, of the Peterborough Show Case Company, who was called to Berlin by the death of his mother, Mrs. Wm. Theobald, that his mother passed away yesterday. Further particulars will be given on Monday.

JAMES LEAHY.

James Leahy, lot 6, concession 7 Douro, died yesterday at St. Joseph Hospital, after an illness of about 6 months' duration.

Mr. Leahy was born at the home where he died, 62 years ago. Throughout his long residence in Douro he was greatly respected, and his death will be regretted amongst all who knew him.

He leaves of the immediate family two sisters, Mrs. John Allen and Miss Julia residing at home.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock from the family residence, to St. Martin's church and cemetery.

Columbia State: The reserves of the Italians should and will have the effect of solidifying American opinion. The Germans have won nothing in the west since they were turned back at the Marne. They have revealed impotence to defeat French and British. Will the British and French the Americans will fight, are fighting, and they will do deeds that will rival those of the heroic Canadians.

ORGAN RECITAL A GREAT SUCCESS

At the Murray Street Baptist Church last night music lovers of Peterborough enjoyed a rare treat in the organ recital given by Miss Ida Sanderson, assisted by the talented basso cantante, Mr. Asa Huycke.

The programme, which included selections rendered by talent difficult to excel in Canada, featured Mr. Huycke's latest composition, Patrol Characteristique, a march, being of such true imitation of a band, of which the first faint notes are approaching, gradually developing into the quick succession of all instruments, next livened by a piccolo, later the reed instruments, and gradually fading to an occasional thump of a big drum, that an audience not seeing the instruments upon which the selection was rendered would have found it difficult to believe they were not listening to a high-class band. This selection, rendered as it was with Miss Sanderson's inimitable talent and Mr. Huycke's knowledge of music, was enthusiastically encored by the hundreds who heard it.

Other Selections.

Miss Sanderson's other selections were received enthusiastically, especially the sixth number, "Evensong," in which she was never heard to better advantage, and her rendition of the difficult selection a revelation of Peterborough talent.

Mr. Huycke's solos were as usual received with great applause, the combination of the piano and organ bringing out all the finer points of his magnificent voice. Especially fine was his solo, "Ah, so pure," sung in Italian.

Miss Winnifred Parker delighted the audience by two recitations, the first from Dickens and an encore of a poem by Dr. Drummond, given in dialect.

Funds for Red Cross.

A gratifying sum was received at the door in silver collection. This will be devoted to Red Cross.

The Programme.

Organ—(a) Fanfare, Lemmons, (b) Impromptu, Gibson.

Organ—(a) Andantino, Lemare, (b) Le Secret, Gauthier.

Soldier Farmers New Model In Homesteaders

Technical Training For Agriculture Given to Returned Soldiers a Boon to Western Canada

The vocational training centres of the Military Hospitals Commission are turning out a new model in homesteaders, experts instead of novices who, according to the authorities, will advance the development of the western provinces fully fifty years in the next decade.

Returned soldiers, who because of their inability to follow their pre-war trades, are taking up farming as a vocation, are going after the agricultural business with a vim and thoroughness that insures not only their own success but that of Canada, declare the teachers in charge.

Scientific Pioneering.

Scientific training is stripping pioneering of its picturesqueness, but with the passing of the man with the hoe comes the man with the motor, and a new impetus for agriculture, in the infusion of young enthusiasm.

Introducing big business methods on the farm has attracted the interest of the soldiers. The world wide call for production has brought the importance of the farmer to the attention of city men, and agriculture as a profession is drawing some of the finest and ablest of the returned soldiers to its standard, especially in the west.

College Courses.

In the Institute of Technology at Calgary and the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon there are large classes of convalescent soldiers absorbed in the arts of tilling the soil. The fields are the classrooms in many courses, and to see a big thresher or traction engine halted mid-field and surrounded by an intent body of soldier students is a familiar sight to motorists in the vicinity.

A course in motor mechanics is of invaluable worth to the future farmer who will do most of his field work with motor power, and therefore must be able to handle all parts of the machine. He will do his own repair work, and run a tractor economically as a result, and save much valuable time in harvesting season, as well as money.

Opportunity for Cripples.

Men trained in such mechanical work, even though their legs may have been sacrificed in France, can earn good salaries running machines and repairing them. Not only can such a man be valuable in this way, but in the new era of electrical devices for the farm, a man of such knowledge is essential.

Poultry, dairying, and stock breeding are other branches which attract many men to the open country. The long years of experience which were thought necessary in the old days to bring a man to success in these businesses have been reduced in scientific instruction to the matter of a few months intensive study. The courses for students who go about learning in a leisurely fashion in the agricultural colleges, have been condensed to eliminate all but the essentials.

New Interest in Books.

The men are eager to learn, and anxious to get to work at their new profession. Not a minute is lost and discipline is a thing unheard of. The man who scorned "book learning" finds that, coupled with practical illustration such as he receives in the fields, it speeds success, and his new interest in text books promises to take the theory into farm life as years of propaganda would never have done.

Social and Personal

The friends of Mr. Geo. E. Chandler will be glad to learn that he is rapidly progressing towards good health again.

Pte. Cecil Fallis of the Forestry Battalion, Brockville, formerly of Peterborough, was here making his farewell call on his many friends. Pte. Fallis, before enlisting, was engaged as a munition worker in the Peterborough Machine Company.

Miss Agnes Rudkins is visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Quinlan of St. Catharines.

Mrs. (Dr.) Bell returned yesterday from service overseas in the Military Hospitals, and is visiting at her sisters', the Misses Denne, George George street.

Mr. Frank and Mr. George Mills are visiting Col. and Mrs. Joseph Mills.

Miss Olive M. Gooding of Kenora is visiting Mrs. J. R. Stratton, at Strathormond.

Mrs. Pendrick and Mrs. Foster and Master William Foster, of Ottawa are visiting Colonel and Mrs. Mills Hunter street.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stuart, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo MacDonald, London street, return today to their home in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hendren, Miss Hunter and Mrs. Richardson, Lakefield, were in the city yesterday to attend Miss Ida Sanderson's organ recital.

The many friends of Mr. George Chandler, who recently underwent an operation, will be glad to learn that he is progressing favourably.

All the members of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., are asked to meet at the home of Mrs. Dr. Eastwood, Brock street, on Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock to sew for the bazaar.

Messrs. B. F. McNeely and Master Melville McNeely, Stewart Street have returned home from Toronto, after spending the past few weeks as guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ivory, Patterson Ave., and Mrs. J. F. Davis, Church St.

Jack Canuck Wins On Home Battlefields

Will Power Big Factor in the Success of Disabled Men at Trade Schools

Where there's a will, there's a way!"

The vocational training officers of the Military Hospitals Commission have run up the frayed old banner of achievement, and the Canadian boys, remnants of the stalwart youths which the Domniion sent over seas, are testing the caliber of Canada anew on the home battlefields.

Jack Canuck is proving that he can fight adversity with one arm tied behind him, legless, even blind, if need be. Given the will, he makes good under any handicap, declare the men who are engaged in teaching the boys who come back disabled for their old work in life, new trades by which to earn a livelihood.

Pte. Ginder, a Toronto lad who fought with one of the first battalions, was a facer for the instructors when he returned from the front. He had lost one leg, the sight of one eye, and his remaining leg was badly injured, but there was no break in his morale. Indomitable spirit set him to learn sanitary engineering while he was still convalescent, but he found that study made him dizzy and had to give up book work.

This was a bad blow, but Ginder did not go to the mat. He took up cut glass grinding and polishing in a factory where the employer had offered to train soldiers to his trade, and to-day he is applying the sparkle for banquet tables barred to Burgundy by war time prohibition, and toning up the whole work room with his extra good cheer.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

YOU SEE BOTH WAYS

With Dr. Fowler's bi-focal or double vision lenses, you see things clearly at a distance as well as near by. They are really two lenses in one with the two parts so focused together that the junction is invisible. The two purpose lens is a very popular style of eye-glass and gives perfect satisfaction.

"HOG-TIE" DISLOYAL, HANG THE TRAITORS, MR. GERARD URGES.

Pittsburg, Pa. — "The time for repentance of disloyal Americans and pro-German sympathisers has passed, and the day is at hand when every person must decide whether he is for or against America," said James W. Gerard, formerly American Ambassador to Germany, in an address at a food conservation mass meeting here to-day.

"We should 'hog tie' every disloyal German-American, feed every pacifist raw meat, and hang every traitor to a lamppost to insure success in this war," said Mr. Gerard. "And our traitors are not all German-Americans, but some men high in public life are aiding the Prussian cause. There is no dirtier chapter in American politics than the crusade of these men, whose names you know."

Turks Falling Back Before British Forces

City of Jaffa Has Been Occupied by Gen. Allenby's Troops

PRISONERS TAKEN

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 19.—City of Jaffa occupied by New Zealand and Australian troops without opposition. The Turks apparently are continuing their withdrawal northward.

FALLING BACK.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Turkish forces are falling back in Palestine and are apparently preparing to make a stand four miles north of Jaffa. General Allenby reports on Thursday that the British took three hundred and sixty prisoners and counted 431 dead Turks on the ground. A Geneva report says Turkey is panic stricken over General Allenby's swift advance. Great unrest in Constantinople.

Russian Debacle And Italy's Reverses Have Prolonged The War Two Years Says Marcosson

Celebrated Magazine Writer and Author Returns From Fourth Trip to European Battle Fronts—England Has Mobilized Her Man Power Almost to the Limit.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17. — Returning from his fourth trip to the European war fronts, Isaac F. Marcosson, the writer, said that he came back with more feelings of pessimism than at any other time since the war began. In the Russian crisis and the Italian reverses he saw the postponement of the victory of the Allies until at least after another two years of war. There were two things needed to be done, he said—one was a greater unification of the efforts of the Allies, and the second was to arouse America to the job ahead of her.

Mr. Marcosson visited the American Headquarters in Paris, and brought back this message to the American people from General Pershing:

"The American troops in France must be made to realize that the whole country is behind them. This is a war of the real fighting spirit, and the best way to keep up that spirit is to have a united nation stimulating and encouraging its army at the front."

It was the belief of Mr. Marcosson that German propaganda, more than anything else, caused the reverses to the Italian Army. He said he was in Turin in September at the time of the so-called food riots, when the troops had to be called out and machine guns were used on the crowds, killing 150 persons. He said that these were not real food riots, that there was no scarcity of food such as to justify or even cause riots, but that the disturbances were caused by Italians in the employ of German spies, who hoped that the riots would precipitate a crisis in Italy.

"When the young Italians who led the riots were arrested and searched," he said, "their pockets were filled with German gold."

He told of how extensive and intensive the German propaganda was in Italy, helped largely by the fact that there are many Italians of pro-German sympathies, either honest or bought. He said that at the time of the German advance the propaganda had worked havoc in the Italian army.

Not Due to Lack of Supplies.

Mr. Marcosson said he saw the Italians take Mount Gabriel, and from what he saw at that time he could not believe that it was any scarcity of supplies which caused the Italian retreat.

"I saw the Italians swarm up Mount Gabriel under a terrible fire and take the Austrian positions one by one," he said. "It was magnificent.

Mr. Marcosson also thought that the Italian soldiers felt differently about fighting Germans and Austrians.

"The Italian has a profound hatred for the Austrian and a profound contempt," he said. "He despises an Austrian and is not afraid of him. But the Italian has a profound respect for the German as a fighter. It may not be a popular opinion, but I am inclined to believe that when the Italians found themselves confronted by large German forces some of them got 'cold feet'."

He added that there was no food crisis at this time in Italy; that the food he got there was excellent.

"But," said Mr. Marcosson, "a prominent Italian told me that Italy could not fight through another year unless she got coal, wheat and supplies. She must have them, and so the question of ship tonnage is at the front again."

He said that the submarine menace was far from past, and incidentally told of the gunners on the ship on which he returned firing at one when one day out from an English port.

Mr. Marcosson said he found the American troops in the best of spirits, despite the fact that they were quartered in one of the coldest regions in France and were wearing canvas leggings. It was cold in Paris when he was there several weeks ago.

He said that England had mobilized her man power almost to the limit, as, he declared, America must do, and in this connection said that one day he visited a Colonel in charge of an English Quartermaster depot and found the Colonel's father, 71 years old, on duty as a subaltern.

Lenine Avowedly Pro-German.

On his last trip, Mr. Marcosson visited Petrograd, and he was deeply concerned over the recent developments in Russia, which he termed "The tragedy of Russia." He said that he could find no epithet vile enough to fit Lenine.

"If the fate of Russia is in the hands of Lenine, then God help Russia," he said.

Lenine, Mr. Morcosson declared, was avowedly pro-German. When the radical returned to Russia from exile, Mr. Marcosson said, he was permitted to travel through Germany in a sealed car. He said that the anti-American demonstration, in which the American Embassy was stoned, was led by Lenine, who hates all things American. He believed that Kerensky was the one man who could save the nation. He said that had Kerensky and Korniloff been able to agree they would have solidified the nation. It was his belief that Kerensky had erred in playing too much the conciliator and in not using the mailed fist, with which Korniloff stood ready. He hoped that it was not too late for these two men to rescue the nation from the fate he saw awaiting if Lenine and his associates retained a free hand.

"The whole situation," said Mr. Marcosson, "as I see it from having been in all of the important warring nations, is that Germany is stronger to-day than ever before, and that while the victory of the Allies is inevitable, it is a long way off, at least two years. The United States has got to buckle down to its job, and all of the Allies must get together to hold a battle line running from the North Sea across Europe. This is something that is coming, as is shown by the war conferences now going on.

"Germany is a tough nut to crack, and the people of America might as well realize it—the sooner the better."

American Ships Will Win War But Output Must Be Speeded, Declares Secretary Daniels

"Unless We Have the Requisite Ships" He Tells Naval Architects, "We Cannot Get Our Cargoes of Crops 'Over There' to Our Soldiers Nor [to Our Allies"—Nation's Shipbuilders Now Constructing More Destroyers Than in Last 25 Years.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Speaking before the twenty-fifth annual dinner of the Naval Architects and Marine Engineers' Association, at the Waldorf-Astoria, Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, declared that on the output of American vessels depends the outcome of the great war. Mr. Daniels said:

"Gentlemen, you and I know that it is ships that will win this war. Unless we have the requisite ships we cannot get our cargoes of crops 'over there' to our own soldiers, nor to our allies. So, after all, it is you men, you naval architects, shipbuilders, marine engineers, who are charged with the most gigantic undertaking ever placed upon our shoulders in the history of America."

"We have agreed to build in a year and a half a greater number of destroyers than we had built previously in twenty-five years. We know that this would be impossible without the co-operation of skilled labour.

"It is a burden to be carried by every man and woman in America."

Simon Lake, inventor and builder of submarines, warned the members not to be misled into the illusion that Germany's submarine menace has been eliminated, because only a single large merchantman had been sunk within a week. He said: "I believe a bombardment of New York or other American ports by German submarines to be entirely possible, because such craft have already demonstrated their ability to cross the Atlantic, and cause havoc among shipping on this side of the ocean."

Three Men Were Arrested In Havelock

Chief Thompson and His Men Lost No Time Once They Arrived in the Railway Town

SERIOUS CHARGE

Chief of Police Thompson and his men did not journey to Havelock on Saturday afternoon for nothing. Early Sunday morning they returned to the city with three prisoners whose baptismal names are Walter Varty, of Belmont township, and William and Earl McMullen, of Havelock. The three men spent Sunday in the cells, and this morning will appear in Police Court. Varty will be charged with arson, while the McMullen brothers will be charged with evading the Military Service Act, it being alleged that they have not registered, according to the law.

Varty is accused of setting fire to the property of J. L. Squires, of Havelock. Mr. Squires is a member of the Havelock Exemption Tribunal, which originally exempted Varty, but reversed its decision when it was alleged that Varty had made false statements to the Tribunal. Following the reversal of the Board's decision, Varty is alleged to have made threats to reduce the property of Mr. Squires to ashes. Early Saturday morning, three fires occurred in Havelock, and, following instructions given by Judge Huycke, Chief Thompson took a couple of sleuths to Havelock. Within four or five hours of their arrival in the railway town, the three men were under arrest.

Situation On Italian Front Is Unchanged

Italians Aided By British and French Forces Are Still Holding the Line

HEAVY FIGHTING

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 19. —Italians still holding Austro-Germans on the Piave river and have taken twelve hundred prisoners. Italian navy rendering effective service. British and French troops now on the front line.

ROME, Nov. 19.—(Official.) — Two more crossings of the Piave were effected Saturday by the Germans. At Follina, German troops were destroyed or captured. At Fagaro they were driven back to the embankment and their return hindered by Italian infantry. The Italians took about a thousand prisoners.

ROME, Nov. 19.—Further attempts of the enemy to cross the Piave river were frustrated. Austro-Germans completely swept out of the Fagaro zone. Italian line on the Asiago Plateau is withstanding extremely violent attacks.

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

She sat in silence for a long time, thinking, a great fear clutching at her heart. Her life, she reflected, had held until recently, but little of happiness. The long weary days of poverty, when her husband, incapacitated by a paralytic stroke, had seen his savings slowly dwindle away; the death of her son, and then of Mr. Morton himself, passed before her mental vision. Only Ruth had been left to her, and in the girl's happiness and success lay Mrs. Morton's whole life and being. Now, that things had at last taken a turn, and the future seemed clear and assured ahead of her, was some dreadful tragedy to change all her joy to sorrow? She turned to the pile of still unopened letters with a sigh, afraid, almost, to proceed with the task of reading them. Yet an hour later when they had all been disposed off without further threats against Ruth being discovered she breathed more easily. Perhaps after all the horrible letter was merely a joke. She took it out and examined it again with the greatest care, but no clue to the identity of the writer rewarded her scrutiny. The message remained clear, terrible, full of sinister meaning.—"Within thirty days it shall be destroyed, and you will be hideous!" The grinning death's head seal stared up at her, fascinatingly horrible. Mrs. Morton quickly placed the letter in her bosom.

Rising, she left the room, and proceeded to that occupied by Ruth. It pleased her, notwithstanding the servants, to take care of it herself. Mrs. Morton was passionately devoted to her beautiful daughter. In her, the sun rose and set.

She glanced about the daintily furnished room with a smile. The appointments were simple, almost girlish, in spite of their owner's large salary. Mrs. Morton began to set the room to rights.

She had finished making the bed, and had gone over to the dressing table to arrange the articles upon it, when a square of white upon the floor attracted her attention.

It lay upon the rug in front of the dressing table, and appeared to be a letter of some sort.

Supposing it to be something that the girl had dropped in the hurry of leaving, Mrs. Morton stooped and picked it up. Then a queer feeling of dismay came over her. The large square white envelope, the typewritten address, bore a singular and disquieting resemblance to the one in which the threatening letter had been received so short a time before.

With trembling hands, Mrs. Morton tore the envelope open and removed the folded sheet of paper within. When her eyes fell upon the contents of the latter, she shuddered, and stood white with fear.

There was a message in typewritten characters upon the sheet, and Mrs. Morton read it with a groan of despair.

"Only twenty-nine days more!" the message said. "We shall not fail." Below the words grinned the frightful death's head seal.

CHAPTER II.

Mrs. Harriet Morton was a courageous woman, but when she read the second threat against her daughter, she was filled with instant indignation and horror. The thing was so appallingly mysterious, so utterly without reasonable explanation.

Ruth had left the room but a few moments before. Certainly the letter was not upon the floor then. The maid, Nora, had gone with her. That removed her from any suspicion, even had such a thought been reasonable or possible, and Mrs. Morton felt it was not. The only other person in the apartment was Mary, their old cook, a negro from the south, who had been a faithful and patient member of the Morton household for over ten years. That she could have had a hand in placing this mysterious message in Ruth's bedroom seemed incredible, not to be entertained for a moment. And yet, there was the message, appallingly simple, direct, threatening. "Only twenty-nine days more!" Mrs. Morton shuddered.

She glanced about the room. How had the letter come there? Certainly not by means of the door. Yet it seemed equally out of the question that it could have been brought in through one of the windows.

There were two in the room, one facin gto the front, and opening upon a court, the other in the rear, overlooking the yards of the houses on the next street. She went to the front window, which was raised only a few inches, and gazed out.

Below her stretched the wide court, flanked one one hand by the side of the apartment building, on the other by the blank wall of an adjoining house. The latter was some ten feet from where she stood, and there were no windows in it! She turned to the window at the other side of the room.

Here a fire escape led down to an alley at the rear of the building. Could it have been in this way that the letter had been delivered? The thing seemed impossible. Not only was the window closed, but she knew that the ladders did not reach all the way to the ground, the last section being pulled up, to be dropped only in case of fire. With a mystified look she returned to the centre of the room.

The letter grinned at her from the dresser, on which she had left it. Ruth must never hear of the matter, she knew. Taking it up, she placed it in the bosom of her dress along with the one which had arrived earlier in the day. Then she sat down to decide what she had been do next.

To trifle with so dangerous a situation was no longer to be thought of. One message, the first, might have been a foolish joke. The second proved that the danger threatening her daughter was real, imminent.

At first she thought of placing the matter in the hands of the postal authorities, but would they, she wondered, concern themselves with threats delivered in other ways than by mail? This second message had not come through any such channels. In desperation she put on her hat, placed the two letters in her handbag and set out to seek the advice of one of her oldest and best friends.

Her purpose took her to a private banking house in Broad Street, upon the wide entrance doors of which was inscribed the name John Stapleton & Co. She asked to see Mr. Stapleton.

John Stapleton was a man of wealth and influence in the financial world, and Mrs. Morton's husband had at one time been one of his most trusted employees. Now that Ruth had become to some extent a capitalist, it was to Mr. Stapleton that the care of her savings had been entrusted. Mrs. Morton felt the utmost confidence in both his sincerity and his judgment.

Mr. Stapleton received her almost at once, in his simply yet richly furnished private office, and rising from his huge flat-topped rosewood desk, welcomed her warmly, and asked what he could do for her.

Mrs. Morton felt confused. Her mission seemed, after all, a strange one with which to come to a leader of finance.

"I—I am in great trouble, Mr. Stapleton," she began.

"Yes?" He took her hand in his and led her to a chair. "Tell me all about it."

Mrs. Morton explained the circumstances surrounding the receiving of the two letters in detail, and then handed the documents to Mr. Stapleton.

"Do you think I had better place the matter in the hands of the postal authorities?" she said.

Mr. Stapleton examined the two letters carefully then he shook his head.

"No. At least not at present. It seems to me that your daughter may be in grave danger, and under those circumstances, I think your wisest course would be to employ a private detective, an investigator of matters of this character, not only to ferret out those who are responsible for these threats, but to take steps to protect your daughter from harm."

"You think, then, that she is really in danger?" Mrs. Morton gasped.

"I do not wish to alarm you, but I very much fear that she is."

"But I don't know any private detectives," Mrs. Morton began.

Stapleton looked up from the letter. "When I spoke," he said, "I had a certain man in mind. He is not a detective, in the usual sense of the word. You can find plenty of those, of course but, while they are useful enough in the detection of criminals of the ordinary sort, they would probably have little success in an affair such as this. The man I had in mind is a brilliant criminal investigator, one whose services I have more than once been obliged to make use of in matters of a personal nature. Some two years ago, for instance, my child was kidnapped, in Paris, and held for ransom. The entire police force of the French capital seemed powerless to discover his whereabouts. At last I called in Richard Duvall, and within a few days my boy was returned to me, and the criminals who had abducted him placed under arrest. It was a marvellous, a brilliant piece of work. I am not likely to forget very soon the mystery of the changing lights." He paused, and Mrs. Morton spoke up eagerly.

"Give me Mr. Duvall's address," she said, "and I will see him at once."

"That," Mr. Stapleton smiled, "is, of course, the great difficulty. Duvall, who is married, lives with his wife on their farm near Washington. They both have plenty of money, and he has practically retired from professional work."

"Then of what use it is to suggest his name?" asked Mrs. Morton, quickly.

"He had already retired," Stapleton rejoined, "at the time of my boy's kidnapping, but I prevailed on him to take up the case. His retirement merely means that he is not in the active practice of his profession. But exceptional cases, cases which by reason of their novelty interest him, he may be persuaded to undertake. I fancy this matter of your daughter's would prove attractive to him. It is unusual—bizarre. I strongly advise you to see him."

"To do that, I must go to Washington?"

"Yes. I will give you a letter which will insure you an interview, and, I hope, enlist his services in your behalf." He pressed a button on his desk, summoning a stenographer. "I sincerely hope that you will be successful."

Mr. Morton sat in silence while the letter of introduction to Richard Duvall was being written. Then she rose to go.

"I will leave for Washington this afternoon," she announced. "I feel that there is no time to waste."

"You are quite right. And be sure to tell Mr. Duvall that you are a close personal friend of mine, and that anything he can do for you I shall appreciate to the utmost."

SUFFERED WITH NERVES COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Nourishing, Laxative Food for Growing Children

It solves mother's food problem. Roman Meal is much more nourishing than wheat or oats used alone, and is twice as nourishing as corn; it is so thoroughly and easily digestible that even a baby of eight months or over thrives upon it. It keeps the liver active, prevents indigestion and relieves constipation.

Dr. Jackson's

is nothing but a simple, absolutely drugless combination of entire berries of wheat (30%), whole berries of rye (35%), flaxseed rendered tasteless and odorless by electricity (25%), and 10% wheat bran. That's all. This simple mixture is porous because it is granulated, thus letting the digestive juices reach every particle and preventing indigestion.

Flaxseed is the most nourishing seed known. In Roman Meal it prevents the irritating effect of bran on the lining of the bowel, and lubricates the digestive tract. It is laxative and keeps the skin clear.

The bran in Roman Meal provides the natural waste without which the muscles of the digestive tract positively will not act. The digestive system was fashioned for the express purpose of dealing with coarse, waste-containing food. Roman Meal is such a food; it relieves constipation, or money refunded. Ask your doctor.

You notice that entire berries of wheat and rye are used—important. Modern cereal foods are light in color because they are mostly starches, which so often ferment and cause trouble. Roman Meal retains the dark parts of the grains because they build up muscle, brain, nerves, organs and blood. These dark parts also contain the salines which keep the blood non-acid. They contain the flavor, too—the sweet, nutty flavor of the grains!

Roman Meal is an ideal food for children; it takes the place of drugs, keeping little folks healthy and strong. What delightful porridge it makes; when you follow directions it is delicious, but when you stir it while cooking you spoil it. Do not stir except while mixing meal and water. It also makes all kinds of delicious baked products. At all grocers.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

If there is any peculiarity in your case requiring special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for free advice.

TURK SOLDIERS SWEEP ARMENIA WITH MASSACRE

NEW YORK.—The slaughter with axes of all the Armenian faculty members of Anatolia College, Marsovan, Northern Asia Minor, together with 1,900 others by Turkish peasants whose pay for the work was the privilege of stripping the clothing off their victims' bodies, was described here by the Rev. George E. White, president of the college, recently returned to this country. The massacres were committed at night by order of the Turkish government, he said, the Armenians being sent out in lots of a hundred or two to their doom and their bodies rolled into prepared burial trenches.

"One group of our college boys asked permission to sing before they died and they sang 'Nearer, My God to Thee,' then they were struck down," Dr. White said.

"The situation for Amernia became excessively acute in the spring of 1915 when the Turks determined to eliminate the Armenian question by eliminating the Armenians. The Armenian question arises from political and religious causes.

KILLED BY TRENCH GRAVES.

"On the pretext of searching for deserting soldiers, concealed bombs, weapons, seditious literature, or revolutionists, the Turkish officers arrested about 1,200 Armenian men at Marsovan, accompanying their investigations by horrible brutalities. There was no revolutionary activity in our region whatever.

"The men were sent out in lots of 100 or 200 in night 'deportations' to the mountains, where trenches had been prepared. Coarse peasants, who were employed to do what was done, said it was a pity to waste bullets' and they used clubs.

"Then the Turks turned on the women and children, the old men and little boys. Scores of exearts were gathered and in the early dawn as they passed the squeaking of their wheels left memories that make the blood curdle even now. Thousands of women and children were swept away. Where? Nowhere. No destination was stated or intended. Why? Simply because they were Armenians and Christians and were in the hands of the Turks.

GIRLS SOLD AS SLAVES.

"Girls and young women were snatched away at every turn on the journey. The girls sold at Marsovan for from $2 to $4 each. I know, because I heard the conversation of men engaged in the traffic—I know because I was able to ransom three girls at the price of $4.40!

"The misery, the agony, the suffering were beyond power of words to express—almost beyond the power of hearts to conceive. In bereavement, thirst, hunger, loneliness, hopelessness, the groups were swept on and on along roads which had no destination.

"I received word from Ambassador Morgenthau that our premises would not be interfered with. Next morning the Chief of Police came with armed men and demanded surrender of all Armenians connected with the college, girls' school, and hospital. We claimed the right to control our grounds as American citizens.

"More than two hours we held them at bay. They brought more armed men. They again demanded surrender of the Armenians. I refused. They challenged me for resisting the Turkish government. They said any one who did so was liable to immediate execution.

"They broke open our gates, brought in exearts, and asked where the Armenians were. I refused to tell. They went through the buildings smashing down the doors. Then our Armenian friends, feeling that further attempt on our part to save them would bring more harm probably than good, came forth, professed themselves loyal Turkish subjects, and offered to do what was required.

"An exearrt was assigned each family with a meager supply of food, bedding, and clothing. The mother sat on the load with her children about her, the father prepared to walk beside the cart. I offered prayer and then the sad procession carrying seventy-two persons from the college and hospital moved away.

CANADIAN CITY FOUNDED BY A NEW ZEALANDER

KASLO, one of the most beautiful little cities in Canada, the centre of a prosperous mining and fruit growing district in the Kootenays, B.C., owes its origin some twenty years ago to a New Zealander, Mr. D. P. Kane, who with a fellow prospector saw the possibilities of the promontory on which it is located and decided to clear the brush and establish a townsite. Originally it was called Kane's Landing, but as the community grew, a picturesque Indian name signifying "the place where the blackberries grew," was adopted. Fifteen years ago the early residents began to plant fruit trees, and to-day there is no more successful orchard country in Canada, cherries being particularly plentiful. For this the mild climate is largely responsible, the Kootenay Lake never freezing over.

The war has brought new prosperity to Kaslo, and the mining industry has never been so busy. The city is surrounded by mining camps providing lead, zinc, copper, silver, and gold. Over sixty million pounds of lead have been produced in the Ainsworth mining division since records were kept, and a goodly proportion of this has, no doubt, been transferred into munitions of war.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Kane, the founder of Kaslo, enlisted at the outbreak of hostilities, and is now a sergeant with the overseas Expeditionary Forces. Kaslo has sent half its original male population to the front, but is prouder of no man more than Sergeant D. P. Kane.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Farewell to the Mountains

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Jerry Whitcomb, a young American, had a hobby—mountain climbing. On several successive summers he went to some one of the principal mountain regions of the world and scaled a peak. But his favorite location was Switzerland. Indeed, that is the favorite mountain country of most persons. Whether or not it is finer than the others is a question, but there is one thing about it that gives it superior attraction. It is in the heart of Europe and in the line of tourists.

Whitcomb had a favorite guide who lived at Scheidegg, a point from which climbers have been long used to start to ascend the Jungfrau. This was before a railroad was projected to carry tourists to the top of the mountain, and Schmitt, the guide referred to, had a chalet not far above Scheidegg.

One day when Whitcomb had passed the crest of middle age he appeared at Scheidegg and found his old guide smoking his pipe in front of his chalet.

"My old friend," said the American, "I have come for a last climb. I will soon be old and not able to make these ascents. I wish you to pilot me once more."

"Ah, herr," replied the guide, "don't talk that way. I am several years older than you, and yet I must go on climbing, else I and my family will starve."

There was a sadness in this reply that made Whitcomb sorry for what he had said. "Ah, well, Schmitt, you have been used to climbing all your life. You will always be at home in the mountains."

Schmitt's little daughter was playing near and at the moment she called out:

"Papa, who is that woman over there?"

"What woman, my child?"

"The woman on the glacier."

Schmitt turned to Whitcomb and asked him if he could see a woman on the glacier, his own eyes being not so good as they had been. Whitcomb peered in the direction of the glacier, but said he could see no woman.

Schmitt turned pale.

"Something troubles you," said Whitcomb.

"It is the spirit of the mountains. She appears only to children and never even to a child except she is going to claim a victim."

The fact that the two men were to climb the Jungfrau made this statement a matter of concern to them. Whitcomb could not bring himself to believe that the child saw what she claimed to have seen. Some one of the cracks in the ice or a rock must have appeared like a woman's figure. He said as much to Schmitt, but the latter shook his head.

"Many children," said the guide, "have seen the Jungfrau and never except that one or more persons have been killed on the mountain within a short time after the appearance of the specter."

They set out about 3 o'clock in the morning intending to make the climb during a single day. Whitcomb had forgotten the vision of Schmitt's little daughter and was very cheery. His guide was quite the reverse, seemingly being much cast down. On the way they picked up another guide, making a party of three, and when they came to the dangerous part of their climb they joined their bodies by a rope, Schmitt in the lead, Whitcomb in the center, the other guide, whom Schmitt addressed as Hans, in the rear.

They climbed till noon before reaching the summit; then, looking out on the expansive field of snow peaks, Whitcomb gave way to rhapsody.

"Goodby, old friends," he said. "It's many a day's companionship we've had, but now we must part. You who have existed for ages in your present form doubtless will exist for ages to come. Your snow covered rocks will endure for millions of years after my puny body has mingled with the dust. Ty friends, farewell."

"Ach! Herr, do not talk that way. There is something prophetic in what you say."

"I don't mean," replied Whitcomb, "that I am going to leave this world immediately. I expect to live to be an old man. But I'll do no more climbing."

"No, herr, you'll do no more climbing," replied Schmitt, with a solemnity that passed through the other like a chill mountain breeze.

They spent an hour on the summit, then turned to descend. They had not gone far before one of those sudden snow squalls that come on so frequently out of a fine day enveloped them. Schmitt was in the advance and halted, as though he had lost his bearings. Then he moved on, but staggered. Presently the snow gave way beneath him, and he went down, dragging Whitcomb with him. Hans threw himself in the opposite direction. The rope snapped. Schmitt and Whitcomb slid out of sight with the snow. Hans fell into a snowbank not a dozen feet below.

The storm soon passed, and Hans, making his way back to Scheidegg, reported the accident and the disappearance of his companions. A searching party went out to look for the bodies and found that the two men had gone over a precipice a thousand feet deep. Descending, the searchers saw that they had doubtless fallen into a crevasse. The American sleeps among the mountains he loved and to which he had bidden farewell.

Woman and Her Beauty.

Woman is the master stroke of beauty. Woman is the jewel in the crown. No chisel ever carved such lines of softness; no painter ever put such luster in the eye. Nature molded cliffs and gave us twilights, gave us the horizon in the east and west; gave us the flowing, shimmering river that travels toward the sea; let the noonbeams glimmer on the tranquil ocean; gave us flowers with their fluffy petals, some soft and snowy white, others tinted all the colors of the rainbow. Yet when all has been looked upon, when all the landscapes have been viewed with wonder, man turns back to something stronger, turns back to that which soothes and heals, back to that which satisfies the eye and heartstrings—woman, the crowning glory of all reveals!

Wanted to Help Him.

His kindness to his men once placed Dr. William H. Nichols in a predicament which caused him the worst mortification in his whole life, says a writer in Leslie's. The head of one of the concern's largest customers came to him and complained that he had been systematically cheated by short weighing of carboys containing acid. Dr. Nichols could not believe the allegation, but on going to the consumer's plant fifty carboys were weighed, and each was found ten pounds short. He promised to make an immediate investigation.

One employee was pointed out to Dr. Nichols as the man responsible for seeing that every carboy contained the proper quantity of acid. This employee Dr. Nichols would have trusted with his own money. But when questioned he colored up and stammered. Finally he blurted out:

"Mr. Nichols, the boys is very fond of you, and we wanted to help you."

The Diphthong.

Answering the question, "Why was the diphthong devised and why has it disappeared from general use?" the New York Sun says:

A diphthong is any two vowels that come together in the spelling of a word. Diphthongs were not deliberately devised any more than English spelling was deliberately invented. They have not disappeared from general use except in a few instances. In a "proper diphthong" the sounds of both vowels are retained, though merged in one syllable, as in "noise." An "improper diphthong" is one in which the sound of only one of the vowels is heard. "Eo" in "people" is an illustration. Such changes as have been made in diphthongs have aimed at keeping the vowel sounded. That is why some prefer to write "maneuver" in place of "manoeuvre." Then there is the simplified speller's favorite "thru."

VINOL MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG

Positive—Convincing Proof

We publish the formula of Vinol to prove convincingly that it has the power to create strength.

Beef Cod Liver and Beef Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascara.

Any woman who buys a bottle of Vinol for a weak, run-down, nervous condition and finds after giving it a fair trial it did not help her, will have her money returned.

You see, there is no guess work about Vinol. Its formula proves there is nothing like it for all weak, run-down, overworked, nervous men and women and for feeble old people and delicate children. Try it once and be convinced.

STRICKEN IN THE STREET

Completely Restored To Health By "Fruit-a-tives"

382 St. Valier St., Montreal.

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years, and my weight dropped from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Then several of my friends advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I began to improve almost with the first dose, and by using them, I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble—and all pain and Constipation were cured. Now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough". H. WHITMAN.

LOVING THE BEST

He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me. I was just thinking on this text one day, when it gradually dawned upon me what Jesus really meant. He meant to convey to our minds that if there was presented to us something that was best and also a second best, and we chose the latter, we would by that choice prove ourselves not yet worthy of the best. Is it not a sad fact how many of us miss the best because we will not sacrifice the lesser for the greater, which indeed is no sacrifice at all, but on the other hand a much greater possession? The man who found the pearl of great price and went and sold all that he had and bought the field the treasure was in, was not a loser, but a gainer. The individual who, in the choice of earthly love, sacrifices the many lesser loves (and which, mind, must be done in order to gain the greater) is not in reality a sacrifice at all, but by his wisdom has made himself a supremely happy man, for a whole-hearted love given to a worthy creature secures for itself a wholehearted love in return, and they are infinitely more blessed than the one who flirts with many, and in the end is loved by none because he has not the confidence of any one of them. So in the Divine sense. As Dr. Alexander McLaren puts it, that love to One who has done for us what Christ has done must by its very nature be an exclusive love, and he goes on to say: It is the joy of the betrothed that her duty is to love and to keep her heart clear from all competing affections. But it is none the less her duty because it is her joy. Further, he says: I do not mean that we are to love nothing but Him, but I mean we are to love all things in Him, and that if any creature so delays or deflects our love so that it does not pass by means of the creature into the presence of Christ, or is turned away from Christ by the creature, then we have fallen beneath the sweet level of our privileges, and won for ourselves the misery due to distracted, idolatrous hearts. In conclusion I ask, how will this love manifest itself? I cannot do better than quote Dr. McLaren again when he says that anything short of a faith that rests on Him alone, of a love that knits itself to His single, all-sufficient heart, and an obedience that bows the whole being to the sweet yoke of His commandments is an unworthy answer to the love that died and lives for us all. And, dear reader, you to whom these lines may appeal, if we so yield ourselves in joyous response to Him whose great love so appeals to us as to cause us to answer back in this wholehearted fashion, not considering even what we may have to suffer by listening to and obeying this inward call, which often does not accord with the call of some of our teachers if we then obey and are willing to suffer because we love and are beloved, then let us rest assured that what the Apostle Paul said will be true in our experience that as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ. (See 2nd Cor., I. 5).—Yours,

Mrs. A. S.

EVERYDAY READING

THIS AWFUL WAR.

What is the cause of this terrible war? Can we learn anything concerning the same from past history? What are the judgments of God? What shall become of nations that forget God? What is the truest and highest loyalty? Will men, money and armaments win the war for us, if we as an empire fail to recognize our helplessness without God? Will an acknowledgment by the allied nations, of their sin, and a true repentance made cause God to turn back the enemy and bring victory? Are not the British Empire and the United States, the English-speaking peoples of the world, the governments who have stood for the eternal principles of justice and right? While justice and righteousness are the foundation stones of these governments, and who have a standing recognition of the Supreme Being; is it not a fact that we people have drifted more or less into the sin of drunkness, immorality, greed, formalism and a forgetting of God? Is there any move on the part of the British Empire and her allies towards confessing sin and calling upon God for victory? Would it not be the truest and highest loyalty for each individual belonging to the allied nations to cry mightily unto God and turn every one from his evil way as the people of Nineveh did? Will God hear and give victory to the allied nations if as nations and individuals we thus turn to Him? Is not now the time to act? Will the reader seriously consider his part thus to do and act at once? VICTOR.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musey mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Menin's Bid For Fame.

"It is barely possible that had there been no Menin there might have been no world war, for it was at the siege of this little Belgian city in 1794 that the Hanoverian army officer, Scharnhorst, won his first distinction. Subsequently he wrote a military paper on the escape of the Menin garrison, and this brought him to the attention of staff officers of various German states and he was offered several commissions. He accepted service under the king of Prussia, and from this time dates the beginning of activities that eventually resulted in the establishment of the Prussian military system which was the genesis of the holocaust of nations. It was Scharnhorst the hero of Menin, who induced his sovereign to put aside the Prussian professional long service army which had been shattered at the battle of Jena and to inaugurate the policy of universal service. This was not ordered, however, until after the originator's death from a wound inflicted at the battle of Lutzeu in 1813.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

"So you have succeeded in tracing back my ancestors? What is your fee?"

"Forty pounds."

"Isn't that high?" objected the patron. "What's it for?"

"Principally," responded the genealogist, "for keeping quiet about them."

THE ITALIAN LINE IS HOLDING FIRM

DEATH OF GENERAL MAUDE ANNOUNCED

THE PIAVE RIVER LINE HOLDS FIRM AGAINST THE ENEMY

Italian Positions Are Maintained in the Face of the Most Desperate Pressure the Austro-Germans Have Yet Exerted---Violent Artillery Duel is Interspersed With Attacks and Counter Attacks.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, November 19.—The Piave River line holds. To-day with what seemed to be the most desperate pressure the enemy has yet exerted, the Italian lines held firm. Intense fighting was in progress along the whole front, a violent artillery duel interspersed with attacks and counter attacks. It was reported to-day that at the few points where the Austro-German forces succeeded in forcing a crossing a few days ago, Italian attacks had constricted their positions so that they were menaced with imminent annihilation.

The two greatest centres of the fighting to-day were on the Asiago Plateau, far to the north, and in the middle of the Piave line.

Momentary breaches in the Piave front have been plugged at every point except at Fagare. The enemy suffered terrible losses from this plugging progress, because under enfilading fire which annihilated whole units closely packed from the slowly constricting Italian pressure.

At Fagare the enemy still retained a toe-hold to-day. They were clinging desperately to a few hundred feet of the river bank and under terrific fire. At Folina, where the Austrians had succeeded in a crossing, Italian troops swept them back on the far side of the stream.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, November 19.—If D'Annunzio is dead his friends will regard his sacrifice as a fitting climax to his career. They pointed out that D'Annunzio, always the poet, the artist and lover of the beautiful, has been fighting to save Venice, the art jewel of the world. They believe that he would have prefered this as his end. Venice's fate still hung in the balance to-day, according to front despatches. The enemy has hit a stone wall in the Piave line. But they have pressed this wall back a few yards to the point of grave danger. To-day the Italians centred their efforts to relieve these points of the tremendous pressure applied to them, and were reported to have strengthened them.

Thwarted of a break in the line by his first assault, the enemy to-day is bringing bigger guns into action. More Austrian and German airplanes have been called. Some of these swooped over the Italian lines to-day dropping proclamations announcing the exact schedule on which the invading army proposed to travel. The civilian and art evacuation of Venice was reported as almost complete to-day. The Water City has been stripped of its movable art possessions. Only a few hundred residents remain.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 19.—Heavy artillery fighting is still in progress on the Verdun front east of the Meuse, says to-day's official report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Sunday—Emperor William of Germany has refused to treat for peace with the new Soldiers' and Workmen's government, in response to the recent proposal, according to the newspapers here which publish this news as coming from a well authenticated source. It is stated that Emperor William announced in his reply that he would treat only with the legal successor to the Imperial government, or with the constituent assembly. In this connection the Volia Noroda says it has information that the Soldiers' and Workmen's government in the event of its failure to receive replies from belligerents by November 23, reserves the right to make peace on its own account, after which if the war continues, Russia will occupy a neutral position.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, November 19.—Further attempts of Austro-German troops to cross the Piave have been stopped. On the front west of the Piave south of Quero, great numbers of Austro-German troops are attacking Monte Monfenera and Monte Tomba lines.

D'ANNUNZIO IS MISSING

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, November 19. — Gabriel D'Annunzio, Italy's famous author, dramatist and writer, was reported to-day to have failed to return from a recent flight over the enemy lines in Northern Italy. D'Annunzio has been known as one of Italy's greatest fighting aviators.

"A Wolf In Sheep's Clothing" Will Be Mr. Gordon's Subject

Mr. Gordon stated in an interview to-day that he expects to give an address in the near future on the subject of "A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing," and that he will prove beyond any question that the real wolf in sheep's clothing" inhabits the office of the Peterborough Review, and is seeking to make people believe that he is a vastly different man from what he truly is.

Mr. Gordon went on further to say that the Review in its attack upon him on Saturday night had invited the letting of the spotlight on certain activities of the Review's "Wolf in Sheep's Clothing."

PETERBORO'S PRICE FOR PASSCHENDAELE VICTORY CONTINUES TO INCREASE

Another Heavy List of Casualties Over the Week-end--Pte. Tony Skarrizi and Gunner Harry Gregory Have Been Killed in Action--Serg. Bert. Williams Dies of Wounds --Others on the Wounded List--To day's Military News

KILLED IN ACTION.

Pte. Tony Skarrizi, formerly of the 80th Battalion, 656 Reid street.

Pte. Harry W. Gregory, 21st Battalion, 137 Lake street.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Lance Sergt. Bert Williams, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Havelock.

WOUNDED.

Pte. John Playford, formerly co.-sergeant major of the 93rd Battalion, Burnham street.

Pte. Fred Meeks, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 129 Hazlitt street.

Pte. David Wheeler, formerly of the 139th Battalion, Browntown.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Pte. Harold Lebarr, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Charlotte street.

Pte. Ernest Gibson, formerly of the 59th Battalion, Peterborough.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Quartermaster-Sergt. D. E. Bradshaw, Infantry, formerly of Peterborough.

PTE. TONY SKARRIZI.

Official word was received this morning that Pte. Tony Skarrizi, a plucky little Italian resident of Peterborough, who enlisted in the 80th Battalion in the early autumn of 1915 and went overseas with that unit has been killed in action in the recent fighting. Pte. Skarrizi was only fifteen years of age when he donned the uniform to go out and fight for Canada and the Empire. His relatives, who live at 656 Reid street, will have the sympathy of the community.

PTE. HARRY WM. GREGORY.

Mrs. Alice Gregory, 137 Lake Street, received official word from Ottawa this morning that her son, Pte. Harry William Gregory, is officially reported killed in action.

Pte. Gregory enlisted last April at Kingston in a reinforcing draft for the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion. The family formerly lived near Jackson Park, and only last week moved to their present address on Lake Street. They will have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

LANCE-SERGT. BERT WILLIAMS.

Lance-Sergt. Bert Williams, a Havelock member of the 93rd Battalion, who was reported wounded a couple of days ago, is now officially reported dead, according to to-day's official list. Sergt. Williams enlisted with the Havelock platoon of the 93rd. His relatives are in England.

PTE. JOHN PLAYFORD.

Pte. John Playford, formerly Co. Sergeant-Major with the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded in the recent fighting around Passchendaele, according to an official message received from Ottawa. A veteran of the South African war, wearing both King's and Queen's ribbons, Pte. Playford was one of the party of reservists of the Imperial Army who answered the call to the colours in August, 1914. He was in France with the Army Service Corps in September of that year, and after serving a year, was discharged and sent home to Canada. Not satisfied that he had done his bit, Pte. Playford re-enlisted within a couple of weeks with the 93rd Battalion and was a company sergeant-major when the Peterborough unit went overseas. He reverted to the ranks to go back to France. Pte. Playford was colour-sergeant in the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, for nine years.

PTE. FRED MEEKS.

Mrs. Maud Alice Meeks, 129 Hazlitt street, has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Pte. Fred Meeks, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to the 6th Field Ambulance Depot on Nov. 6th, suffering from gunshot wounds in the right arm and left thigh. Pte. Meeks enlisted with the 93rd early in 1916 and after going overseas with the Peterborough County unit, was transferred to the 2nd Battalion at the front.

PTE. DAVID WHEELER.

Mrs. John Beaver, Brownton, has received official word from the Director of Records, Ottawa, stating that her son, Pte. David Wheeler, was admitted to hospital on 3rd November, suffering from a gunshot wound in the left thigh.

Pte. Wheeler enlisted with the 139th Battalion at Cobourg, and went overseas with that unit later being transferred in a draft to another Canadian unit in France.

PTE. HAROLD LEBARR.

A second message to Mrs. Lebarr, Charlotte street, conveys the news that Pte. Harold Lebarr, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, and who was with the 5th C.M.R. in France, is seriously ill. Pte. Lebarr was last week reported wounded.

The official message states that Pte. Lebarr is dangerously ill, and that

CRITICAL MOMENT OF HIS CAREER FACES THE PREMIER

Unprecedented Interest in the Debate in the British House of Commons To-day Over the Supreme Inter-Allied War Council Plan.

PUBLIC IS EXCITED

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).
(By Ed. L. Keen).

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Premier Lloyd George faced the critical moment of his career to-day unperturbed and in his best fighting form. His supporters were completely confident he would demolish the Opposition in the House of Commons to his plan for a supreme Inter-Allied War Council, and that he would justify the lack of camouflage in his recent Paris speech. President Wilson's plea for unity, as sent to Colonel House, was generally regarded as clinching Lloyd George's certainty of victory over all his opponents. A revision of the British Cabinet was expected to result from to-day's debate in the Commons. Lloyd George expects a strengthening of his position, a sufficient strengthening to permit him to get rid of some of the dead wood in the Ministries. It was this sort of a weeding out process that Lord Northcliffe so pungently demanded in his recent bomb shell letter. It developed to-day that this letter, which was intended to help, rather than hinder, Lloyd George, was published with the Premier's approval.

Unprecedented demand for seats in the galleries attested to the public's interest in the Commons' procedure.

The fact was plain, however, that the general public seemed to regard the situation more because of its interest in a brilliant forensic struggle, than because of its political possibilities. The politicians were more wrought up over the situation than the plain citizens.

Former Premier Asquith presumably will open the debate. There was much guessing as to the scope of his remarks.

KEEN INTEREST.

(Canadian Press Despatch).

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Notwithstanding that there has been considerable subsidence as compared with a few days ago of excitement, awakened by the Paris speech of Premier Lloyd George, keenest interest is shown in to-day's debate in the House of Commons on the creation of the Allied War Council and the Premier's recent utterances, an interest which has been heightened by conspicuous publication in all the morning newspapers of President Wilson's statement, through Colonel House, concerning the necessity for unity of plan and control between the Allies and the United States.

An unusual big muster of members has been certain ever since the debate was fixed, while an extraordinary number of applications for admission to the restricted gallery space available to the general public testifies how intensely popular interest is focussed on the important subjects of the debate. Immediately after daily questions are answered to-day the Government will move the adjournment of the House in order to give free opportunity to discuss the momentous issues raised. Herbert H. Asquith, the former Premier, will then open the debate, and Premier Lloyd George will reply.

The Times editorially describes the statement made by President Wilson, through Colonel House, as "Incomparably the most important development for the Allied Council."

CHIEF THOMPSON'S DEPARTMENT MADE RAID IN HAVELOCK

Walter Varty Arrested on Charge of Arson and Wm. McMullen For a Breach of Military Service Act

RAID COMPLETE SUCCESS

Walter Varty, a young Belmont township man, residing about two miles from Havelock, appeared before Mr. Harry Rush in Police Court this morning on a charge of setting fire, on Saturday morning, to a dwelling in Havelock owned by Mr. J. B. Pearse. Through his solicitor, Mr. G. N. Gordon, he neither pleaded nor elected, was remanded for a week and bail was fixed by Crown Attorney Hatton at $5,000.

William McMullen, also of Havelock, was charged with a breach of the Military Service Act, that he had failed to either report for service or apply for exemption within the prescribed period that expired on November 10th. He was remanded until to-morrow morning.

Earl McMullen, a brother of Wm. McMullen, surrendered himself to the police as a defaulter under the Military Service Act, and was handed over to Major Scott at the Armouries this morning.

Such are the official, concrete results of as smooth and clever a piece of work the Peterborough police department has ever accomplished. Three fires of suspected incendiary origin, following closely upon more or less open threats, and anonymous "black hand" letters to the Havelock Tribunal were reported to Judge Huycke early Saturday afternoon. He immediately conferred with Crown Attorney Hatton and Chief Thompson, and by five o'clock the Chief was leading an expeditionary force eastward.

He was accompanied by Detective Newhall and Constable Blade. To elude whatever watch might have been posted on the Peterborough side of the village, the party drove several miles past Havelock and entered from the east. In a short time they had arranged a meeting with some of the prominent citizens of the town, and from the information obtained, Chief Thompson quickly formulated his plans. Shortly after eight o'clock the McMullen brothers had been rounded up, but Varty wasn't arrested until two o'clock Sunday morning, after a vigilant chase and careful, cautious manoeuvring.

Village Turned Out.

In the meantime the village seethed with excitement that had been aroused to fever heat by the three fires breaking out simultaneously about three o'clock on Saturday morning. All day there had been endless rumours and conversation that swung round the fire, and antecedent threats to the members of the Military Tribunal.

It was a memorable day, closing an eventful week, but the Peterborough police provided a climax the Havelock people will not soon forget.

The Saturday Fires.

The suspicions that attached to the three fires were reflected from recent decisions of the Military Tribunal and of certain opposition to the

IS THE UNION GOVERNMENT GENUINE?

Those who had any doubts that the Union Government enterprise was a partizan and a political, instead of a patriotic movement, had their doubts very largely removed by the actions at the meeting in Victoria Hall on Friday night.

A meeting of assumedly honest and patriotic Liberals and Conservatives was called to consider the nomination of a Union candidate.

It was "packed" by a party candidate and his name attemtped to be foisted upon a meeting that was called to select a union candidate, without reference to party or party interest.

The party candidate's representative showed the animus by asserting that the meeting was called to "nominate a third condidate for the purpose of spliting the Conservative vote"

If the union government is what it purports to be—non-partizan and patriotic—what difference what Conservative vote was split—the selection and election of a unionist candidate was the point, not the protection of a party candidate.

The partizan idea of advantage is not only predominant in Peterborough, but elsewhere in Ontario, but colours all the comment of the partizan press upon the situation.

The Mail and Empire, the chief organ of Conservatives in Ontario, for instance, voices the generality of the partizan press. It magnanimously exhibits the spirit of unity by pointing out that of two union candidates in a constituency, "it will generally happen that one is insincere." That insincere one is, of course, a Liberal. . . "These heroes must not have to deepnd upon a House with rotten spots in it"—of course the "rotten spots" will be the Liberal supporters of a union government.

The Mail and Empire shows the way to protecting party interests by pleading priority of claim as candidates for Conservative ex-members. It says:

> "Such of these ex-members as can point to the support of the Borden government war measures are Unionists of record."

What claim but one of condemnation attaches to a candidate who has supported the Borden Government's administration? The Borden Government had mode such a mess of war administration from the beginning; it had demonstrated its uselessness, and for that reason it was set aside and a win-the-war administration organised for the purpose of war-winning—a union government.

It is theoretically composed of Liberals and Conservatives who have laid aside their party proclivities and peculiar convictions and are merged into a union party, with no politics but winning the war.

But there is no u ion government—in the numerical sense. The old members of the Borden Government outnumber the Liberal members. Premier Borden has seen to it that in the matter of party strength and the predominance of party strength and the predominance of party spirit, and interests, he holds the whip hand, and that, if "it comes to a "show down"—in a contest of patriotism and partizan interest the conniving Liberals who have entered the so-called "union" government, will, in the parlance of the day, be told "where they get off at."

And support is being sought in this celetion for the purpose of upholding the party supremacy in the new parliament—in a word, to elect a Parliament to support the Borden Government, when, if the support is given, the mask of Union Government is trown off and the Borden Government will appear in its true colours.

It is not folly to play the farce of Union Government with the partizan spirit, asserting its claim openly, brasenly and almost universally, and aiming at a predominancy in the next House?

The Mail and Empire's arguments that it will generally happen "that a Liberal Unionist candidate is insincere" logically applies ot the Liberal members of the Union Government, and if that is so, we have no real union government—only the Borden government in disguise.

It does not seem possible that a Union Government that is real and genuine can co-exist with the numerically dominating party element planning and scheming that the status quo ante in the matter of party representation shall be maintained.

Under the circumstances he is not unduly suspicious who regards the Union Government as a perpetuation, in another form, of the Borden Government, which hopes, in a new form, to escape the popular condemnation its record invites.

The honest, if deluded, Liberal, who honestly desires war winning administration, and believes that a real, bona-fide, genuine Union Government, that excludes partizan animus and ambitions, is the way, will find little encouragement in voting for the party candidate, of what is demonstrably certain is not such a Union Government as he believes in.

But, on the contrary, that it is a deplorable travesty of union government, that in seeking to use the national sentiment and national spirit of loyalty to the war in this terrible time of crisis, is appealing to the country under false pretences; that, as has been done before, it is sought to prostitute patriotism and loyalty to the gaining and maintaining of miserable party advantage.

The Union Government, supposed to non-partizan, arouses more partizanship than under the old relations of the parties.

SAVING TO SERVE.

A subscriber suggests to The Examiner that citizens might do a good deal to minimize the stringency of the coal situation. He says that he notices in the receptacles for ashes put out into the streets for the garbage men, considerable unburned coal, which by sifting might be saved, and used. This may seem a trifling matter, but when coal is so hard to get, every little expedient to make the limited supply go further should be adopted. One or two sifting their coal would not perhaps amount to much, but with the practice universal the total of saving would be worth considering. A great many persons sift their coal ashes, and find the resulting cinders useful for banking furnace fires at night, and a saving of coal.

At this time, every expedient for saving is indicated. If all round saving in all ways were practised, not only would the individuals themselves be benefitted, but the general capacity of the people to contribute to war-serving purposes, would be increased. We are asked to lend money to the government through the Victory Loan to provide financing for the production of munitions and food supplies.

Much more money would be available for this purpose if there had been more saving. Let the ordinary individuals, wage-earners or otherwise, who are unable to buy a Victory Bond, run over their receipts and expenditures for the past year. Many of them would be astonished at the respectable amount of their incomes, and the astonishingly small amount of real substantial and useful value received. Many would find that much—in some cases, all—of their income had been virtually wasted.

Nobody wants any income earner to live the life of an ascetic—make life a perpetual self-denial; but there is a possibility of using money means in a way to provide good, wholesome living and considerable pleasure, and still have a good deal of the income available for useful purposes.

We must live, not altogether for today, but have an eye to the future, lay by something for a rainy day and, all the better, something for investment.

War time is a time for retrenchment, and, strange as it may seem, the government itself has been economical in some ways; the national expenditure has decreased. In 1915, the government expenditure, outside of war expenditures, was 166 million dollars; in 1916, it had fallen to 149 million dollars, and in 1917 there was a further drop to 133 millions. In war time private individuals should follow the same course.

The country is in the midst of a crisis. There is need for money for use in the prosecution of the war, and the best place to get that money is in the country itself—from the people of the country.

We have had two years, at least, of unprecedented prosperity — abundant employment at high wages, and statisticians tell us that the people have "salted away"—in the chartered banks—400 million dollars more than they had in 1915.

All that money does not help win the war—to finance munitions and food purchases and export for war purposes. But if the most of it, or a part of it is put into the Victory Loan, it will begin to work for Canada, for Canadian soldiers and for the Empire.

Subscribing to the Victory Loan comes as a duty; but unlike most duties, its discharge is a pleasure, because it carries profit with it.

Interest at 5 1-2 per cent., with undoubted security, means a splendid investment; and in addition to the pleasure of cutting off 5 1-2 per cent. coupons, is the splendid patriotic feeling that our money is fighting for Canada, for the Empire and for civilization.

Some may be deterred from buying Victory Bonds by the fear that they might suddenly want the money, and not be able to get it. There is no fear of that. A Victory Bond offered to a bank will be as good as gold. Any bank will be glad to exchange money earning three per cent. for a bond that brings in fire and a half per cent.

There is no excuse for not buying a Victory Bond except not having the money or the expectation of it. It is a duty and a profitable investment.

The war will restore the United States as one of the maritime powers as she was before the Civil War. She is ordering freight carrying ships by the hundred.

Canada's Greatest Problem Is The Food Problem

The following appeared in the Ottawa Citizen o. Thursday last:

Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P. of Peterborough, who declined re-nomination in 1908, is one of the well known Ontario barristers in the supreme court this week. He was nominated by the Liberals of Peterborough at the convention on Saturday. It will be remembered that Mr. Hall moved the address when the house opened after the election of 1904, and made a good impression by his maiden speech.

He was asked for his views of the political outlook in Central Ontario by a Citizen reportgr at the supreme court yesterday morning, and also how he stood regarding Union government.

"Well, in our district we believe in the Liberalism and patriotism of the Mackenzie, Blake, Brown, Mowat and Laurier school," he said. "I have been a free recruiting agent in our district of four and five counties, almost since the war began, and I have long contended that a fusion government could best be formed after the people had made the selection. We are not flag waving or profiteering, but we are intensely and ceaselessly absorbed in making every sacrifice in life and values to aid the Empire and our allies in this cataclysm. In his speech at Brockville Sir Thomas White asked us who was our leader. In my nomination address you will see that I explained who Sir Thomas' masters are. The food problem is second to none in this campaign. I charge the federal government with having absolutely failed to realize that 45,000,000 of food producing men have been withdrawn by the war from that calling.

"So war as I am privileged to speak in the name of the Liberals of Central Ontario, I can assure you that the people are in no mood to be stampeded by jingoism. . . I am glad the women will have votes in this most important election since Confederation."

TRIBUNAL No. 276

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS

W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members

Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

"We might as well shut up shop if we were to accept these statements from doctors others than the Medical Board," said Mr. Aylmer, this morning, after he heard the rueful recital of the disabilities of William A. O'Connell, 476 Aylmer street.

The applicant said he had been given only two weks to live, some time ago, but the Medical Board gave him an A2 rating. He had gone West in August and worked in Saskatchewan until October. The outdoor life had benefitted him, and Mr. Aylmer pointed out that six months' training in the open air might continue his improvement.

"You appear to be in good health," Mr. Moore remarked.

"Because I take good care of myself."

Exemption refused.

TWO BROTHERS OVERSEAS.

William J. Downer of Auburn, a fireman on the G.T.R., has two brothers at the front. They enlisted with the 93rd Batt. Mr. Downer stated that his foreman had also made application for him at Lindsay, and his appeal to two tribunals was censured by Mr. Aylmer, who stated that this action contravened the Military Service Act. He proposed to report the foreman to the Kingston authorities. Exemption was requested on the grounds of two brothers being overseas and in addition the importance of Downer's occupation in the railway service. Decision reserved.

TEMPORARY EXEMPTION.

F. R. J. McPherson applied for the exemption of Leo. McCabe, 470 Gilmour street. He required his services for a contract in Kingston and could not get a man to replace him. Exemption allowed until February 1st.

William Pringle, 372 Queen street, employed as a teamster by the Peterborough Cereal Co., applied on domestic grounds. He stated that he was the sole support of his widowed mother. He has a married brother in France. Mr. Aylmer remarked that if Pringle were a soldier, his mother would receive $45 a month. Mr. J. W. Meyers requested that this exemption be granted. His Company had encouraged enlistment, but Pringle had important work to do as a shipper, handling forty shipments a day. "It was only last Saturday," Mr. Meyers said, "that we received a letter from the Government asking us to produce every barrel of flour we could." Decision reserved.

DECISION RESERVED.

Eric James Blackwell of Emily Township, applied for exemption as a farmer. He has two brothers in the West. Decision reserved.

EXEMPTED AS FARMER.

Frederick Robert Fowler, Emily Township, was granted exemption while he remains a farmer. His father owns a threshing machine and in his absence from home the son has the spring plowing and the harvest and fall work to do. He stated that there was no question of his continuing in his present employment.

Fred Dummitt, Alfred street, applied for exemption through the post office, but wasn't examined by the doctors. He said he understood that the examination was unnecessary if his claim for exemption was acceded to by the tribunal. Mr. Aylmer gave him an order for medical examination.

Francis Joseph Kelly, a husky young Otonabee man, was sent up for medical examination. He had been unable to get into the Armouries when he tried during the prescribed time.

Walter Irwin said he had lost his medical sheet and was refused a duplicate at the Armouries. He is a B Category man. Mr. Aylmer gave him an order for a new counterfoil.

1 T IN THIRD CLASS.

Clinton D. Heath, 82 Aylmer street, an apprenticed tool maker at the C. G. E. shops, was granted exemption on domestic grounds, and placed in 3rd class. Dr. Halliday supported the appeal. One brother died on October 13th last, and Mr. Heath's father, formerly of the United States Army, has been for years in the Soldiers' Home, Johnston City, Tennessee.

W. J. Hamilton, [illegible] McDonnell street, said he was a clerk at the Nugent Drug Store. Mr. A. J. Johnston supported his appeal for exemption on the ground that it was difficult to obtain young men of Hamilton's experience. Exemption disallowed.

Bertram Wardle's appeal for exemption was based on the national importance of his professional service as mechanical and electrical draughtsman. He lives at 228 Park street, and is employed at the C.G.E. works. Exemption refused.

O. L. Macklem Makes Signed Confession

States He Has Found He is Not Entitled to Wear an Officer's Uniform.

WINDSOR, Nov. 19.—"Colonel" Omar L. Macklem, who assisted the Liberty Loan campaign in Detroit, and who was lionized by society dames of England after he returned from France, admitted Saturday in a signed confession made to Lieut. P. J. Moran, of Windsor, that he had no right to wear an officer's uniform. The statement reads:

"I, O. L. Macklem, in presence of two witnesses, beg to make the following statement relating to the wearing of His Majesty's uniform as a staff officer:

"After looking through the King's rules and regulations pertaining to the wearing of uniforms, I find that I am not entitled to the same, and have made a mistake in wearing it.

"I further desire to state that I do not hold a commission in any branch of His Majesty's service.

"My object in making this statement is to set myself right, and to clear the army of any stigma that may be attached to it by me wearing an unauthorized uniform."

Macklem, after being deported from Detroit, registered at the Crawford House here as "O. L. Macklem." He is still here.

New German Peace Offer Is Expected

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. — A new German peace offer is anticipated by officials here, but the Allies' new unity insisted upon by America, will reject it. The offer will be of the same made-in-Germany type without meeting President Wilson's requirements, the elimination of Hohenzollernism. Therefore it will go unheeded as its predecessors.

FARMERS PETITION AGAINST WORK OF THE EXEMPTION BOARD

Will Forward Complaint to Sir Robert Borden That Farms Are Being Denuded of Help and That a Decrease in Production Will Follow

Below is a copy of a petition which has been circulated in South Monaghan and also in other townships. A deputation saw Mr. Burnham on Saturday, and he recommended them to Mr. Guise-Bagley, the successor to Ruddy & Burnham, and Mr. Guise-Bagley drew this petition:

To the Right Honourable Sir Robert L Borden, K.C., &c.

The Humble Petition of the undersigned Farmers of the Township of South Monaghan, in the Province of Ontario

Sheweth as follows:

1. That your Petitioners are Farmers in the said Township of South Monaghan, which Township is practically the most highly assessed Township in the District.

2. That in the past three years many men of military age have already answered the call of duty and have enlisted in His Majesty's Overseas Forces, so that very few eligible men are left in the Township. The said Township has already given more than its proportionate share or quota of men according to the population.

3. That owing to the near proximity of the said Township to flourishing towns and cities, there has for many years been a constant flow of the young men of the farming community from the farms to the cities and towns, the effect of which has been that for the last ten years the said particular district has even in normal times been very short of efficient help, and there has never been a surplus of young men beyond the number absolutely necessary to work the land, and there has at all times been much difficulty in getting enough men to properly cultivate the fertile lands of the said district.

4. That owing to the heavy draught of men already taken by voluntary enlistment, the past two years has been very strenuous for your petitioners, whose farms have in many instances deteriorated and become less productive for want of efficient help. And this at a time when the national interest calls for greater efficiency and greater productiveness.

5. That the Military Service Act, as it is at present being enforced by the Local Tribunals, threatens to so denude the said district skilled in the arts of agriculture that more depreciation and less production will inevitably follow, and in not a few cases farmers will altogether cease to produce those necessary food materials that they have heretofore done, to the detriment of the national interest.

Your Petitioners humbly pray that some steps may be taken to so modify the action of the Local Tribunals, either by special instructions to Courts of Appeal or to the Local Tribunals, or in some other wise manner that a sufficient number of young men may be exempted from Military Service to work your Petitioners' farms, or that such other action as may seem meet may be taken to so modify the operation of the said Act as may relieve your Petitioners in the premises.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

ITALIANS THROW ENEMY BACK AND CAPTURE 1,000

ROME, Nov. 19.—The German troops which forced a crossing of the Piave River at Zenson are being pressed back steadily by the Italians, it is announced officially. In other sectors nearly 1,000 prisoners have been taken.

More than 600 prisoners were taken at Fagare, on the Piave above Zenson, and 300 were captured at Follina, on the northern mountain front near the upper Piave.

Two more crossings of the Piave were effected yesterday by the Germans. At Follina the German troops were destroyed or captured. At Fagare they were driven back to the embankment, and their return was hindered by the Italian artillery.

BERLIN, Nov. 19, via London.—Austro-German forces invading the northern Province of Italy stormed Monte Prassolan, between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, says the official statement, issued by the German staff. Eight hundred Italians were taken prisoners.

WINDSOR MAN HAS GAINED 20 POUNDS

"I Now Know What a Wonderful Thing Tanlac Is" Says Pickell

"I have gained twenty pounds by actual weight and now I know for myself that Tanlac is something wonderful." William S. Pickell, who made this remarkable statement, is a well-known paint contractor and resides at 51 Windsor Ave., Windsor.

"About a year ago," continued Mr. Pickell, "I began suffering from stomach trouble and going down hill. My appetite went square back on me and I always had to be very careful about what I ate. I was very easy to take cold and was annoyed a great deal by a hacking cough caused by the irritated condition of my throat. I fell off to one hundred and thirty-eight pounds and felt run-down and tired all the time. My sleep was broken. I was very nervous and just felt worse than I can describe. Many days I simply felt like giving up entirely and it was by mere force of will that I kept at work.

"I had read so much about Tanlac that I concluded to see if it was good for me and what it has done in my case proves its value in building up people who are all run-down like I was. I have a fine appetite now and eat just anything I want with no bad after effects. My sleep is sound and restful and I don't have that tired feeling any more. I now weigh one hundred and fifty-eight pounds—have made an actual gain of twenty pounds already—and have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac. I really feel like a different man, and two bottles of the medicine have done my daughter a world of good, too. I expect to take a few more bottles and am telling all my friends how fine it is."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Forty-five young men attended the men's meeting on Sunday, 18th November, and were addressed by Mr. James Pogue, his subject being "Old Hymns and Their Origin." The J. M. Greene Music Co. kindly furnished one of their diamond disc machines and a number of patriotic and religious records, which were greatly enjoyed by the young men.

Mr. F. E. Ellis addressed the High School Club on Friday evening last on the subject of "Civic Finances." This was the third of a series of discussions on "Our City."

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., president of the Y.M.C.A., will address the boys at their meeting next Friday evening, his subject being "My Advice to Young Men Who Would Enter Public Life."

The "A" Group of Employed Boys, with Mr. Roper as leader, will have a tea at the Y.M.C.A. building this (Monday) evening at 6.30 o'clock. Every member of the Club should be present.

The Boys' Club Room is being refitted with pictures and furniture resurrected from the attic, C. Armstrong, Norman Foote, and Harold Copp being in charge of the work. Some interesting relics of the early days of our Association may be found in this room. The room is to be used primarily by the Standard Efficiency groups.

A chart has been prepared showing the standing of the various classes in the boys' membership canvass, and may be found on the Boys' Bulletin Board. The boys should keep a close eye on this chart, as the days are swiftly passing, and should be improved by each worker who desires to obtain a free membership ticket or a Y.M.C.A. button.

Wilson Urges Unity of Action And of Control

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Nov. 19.—America's full force for war is to be felt in the war councils of the allies no less than on the battlefields. This was to-day apparent from a cablegram to Colonel House from President Wilson, urging unity of action and unity of control. "Incomparably the most important development of the council scheme," was the way the London Times regarded this epochal step in the warfare against Germany as revealed in instructions from the President to Colonel House directing House and Gen. Tasker H. Bliss to sit with America's allies at Paris. Lord Northcliffe's bomb-shell letter refusing the air ministry revealed to England very forcibly how thoroughly America is preparing to wage war. It was regarded to-day as having been written by the head of the British Mission to the United States with knowledge in advance of President Wilson's determination that no ounce of effort should be wasted in the common cause against Germany by individual, national or local differences of opinion.

Knowledge of the President's instructions to Colonel House immeasurably strengthened the Lloyd George Government to-day, on the eve of its battle in the House of Commons. It was hailed as another evidence of American efficiency. The Times' comment of the President's instructions declared from their guarded tone they were manifestly not intended to serve in the present controversy between Lloyd George and Asquith, "but the message unmistakably emphasizes Lloyd George's central principle."

Nearly all beautiful things are expensive, including women.

Trouble likes to avoid a man who is able to keep his mouth shut.

Freedom Must by Freemen be Upheld

IN Canada there is no Prussian autocracy to reach out and take the possessions of the people by force. There is no tyranny of an "all highest" overlord with "divine right" to make the people fight and pay.

The people of Canada themselves decide to do the fighting and the paying.

Canadians are asked to lend their money, not forced to give their money.

Buy Victory Bonds and lend your money to the fight for freedom.

The canvassers in your neighborhood will tell you all about the Victory Loan. Subscribe for bonds yourself and use your influence to get others to do the same.

Every Victory Bond You Buy is a Blow Struck for Freedom

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

Canada's Victory Loan

If your weekly pay envelope is to continue without intermission, and minus deflation, you must place a portion of your funds in control of the Minister of Finance. Your dollars added to the dollars of everyone else in Canada. Represent the Working Capital of the nation. Canada cannot now borrow money from any outside source.

If you would avert a possible serious slump in valuable real estate, you must keep your funds in general circulation. If the business or factory, you own, or the business or factory you work in, is to continue in steady operation, it is your funds, large or small—that must help in the financing.

Your present purchase of Victory Bonds will hold up the price of all valuable securities in this county. If the credit of Canada is allowed to suffer through the lack of funds, this will be reflected in the quotation value of our bonds and stocks.

Britain will buy great quantities of munitions and foodstuffs from Canada, but she will not pay cash. We can have the orders if we take England's I.O.U. and ourselves supply the cash to pay for the production. If we do not supply the cash, there will be fewer orders, therefore a slackened industry in Canada, and only a limited market for our products. Such a situation implies lower wages, less work, and less money to meet the high cost of living.

Every wage earner in Canada must consider our Victory loan from plain BUSINESS reasons apart entirely from motives of Patriotism. This country must have money in quantity not only to pay war bills, but to provide funds for the maintenance of business generally. Every money market in the world is now closed to us. It becomes a vital necessity for every person in Canada to place a portion of his earnings or resources at the Disposal of the Dominion Government.

Take all you can afford of Canada's Victory Loan. You should buy for patriotic reasons. You must buy, from a sense of duty, from a selfish regard for your own bodily comforts. The instinct of self-preservation will lead you to subscribe.

Capt. Mowat Killed While Leading Platoon In Heavy Fighting

In a letter to Captain Grant Mowat's parents, Lieutenant-Colonel E. O. Jones, commanding officer of the 21st Battalion, says in part:

"Grant was killed while leading his platoon in exceedingly heavy fighting for the capture of Hill 70 and the entrance to Lens.

"It is harder to write you than you can know, as not only was Grant a splendid soldier, fearless and brave, but he had become in a very short time a friend of every one.

"As above, he was killed leading his men in the very front of the battalion, and at the farthest point of our advance. He was killed instantly by the bullet of a sniper concealed in the ruins of a building in line with the attack.

"His death, leading his men, is, I am sure, the one he would have chosen."

A LINCOLN INTERVIEW

whole string of charges made by a well known political character from Newark and another man who wanted the president to dismiss peremptorily a Lieutenant Colonel Alexander, of a New Jersey regiment. Mr. Lincoln patiently heard their charges, and when they were through he replied: "Now, do you think I would dismiss this man on all this expert testimony, without giving the officer a chance to be heard in his own defense?" This put a flea in their ears and they left without more ado.

After they left two representatives from Illinois came in, whom the president introduced to an old man from the same state, who was employed in the house.

I introduced myself as one of the three escaped officers from Richmond. He received me most cordially, said he knew I was in Washington, and asked me in the kindest manner to be seated, and invited me to call at seven o'clock, when the business of the day would be over, as he had so much to say to me and would receive the verbal messages I had for him from Richmond when I called in the evening.

He was particularly anxious to know all about his brother-in-law, Captain Todd, a Kentuckian, who was in command of our prison, which was one of the great tobacco

About two days after our arrival in Washington, after our perilous escape of eleven days from Richmond in September, 1861, Colonel William H. Raynor and Captain John R. Hurd called to pay their respects to President Lincoln. I being very much disabled and unable to walk without crutches, waited a few days longer to call, as I had some important verbal messages from Congressman Alfred Ely, who was taken prisoner at Bull Run, lso from William Huston, brother-in-law of Secretary of State Seward, and from several of the most important military prisoners which could not be written, and this for obvious reasons.

I called at 3 o'clock and heard a factories of the Mayos, corner of Twenty-first and Main Streets. This and the other two large buildings were unoccupied, and before Libby Prison was established there were no buildings large enough to accommodate 1,400 pris ners, who came in so suddenly. The new poorhouse was nearly finished, and the two smallest of the tobacco warehouses were used as hospitals.

After giving my verbal message he asked me about Captain Todd, who he had heard was unkind to the prisoners. I replied this was furthest from the truth, as I saw the captain every day and saw nothing of the matters charged against him.

As I had volunteered to take charge of the two tobacco building hospitals as superintendent, I could go out in the city on hospital business, but always in charge of an armed guard, so I had my eyes and ears always open to see and hear what was going on. I also had access to a Richmond newspaper, which the other prisoners were deprived of. Consequently, I could answer a good many of Mr. Lincoln's questions satisfactorily.

I remained with him until after ten o'clock, answering all sorts of questions, and never passed a pleasanter night in my life.

On another occasion I called on the President. In the course of the conversation he informed me of the means they had adopted to prevent the ironclad Confederate steamer Merrimac from reaching Washington. And this was to sink schooners full of stone in the channel of the Potomac River below Washington. He also informed me that the sinking of the Merrimac was principally caused by the opening of the seams of the ship by the great impact when she rammed the two wooden frigates, the Congress and the Cumberland.—Charles J. Murphy, in New York Tribune.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE IS A BUGLE CALL

(By Lord Northcliffe, Cable to The United Press.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

..LONDON, Nov. 19. — "Your wise President's bugle call to the European allies should put them wise to the insistent urgency of getting together in a regular, business-like conference.

"The American Mission here is doing fine work and now that President Wilson has added his personal punch and pep, there will be no excuse for delays which have been productive of such disastrous results in the past three and a half years."

SISTER WINS HER ACTION

Jury's Verdict for Mary Basil Against Archbishop et al. For $24,000

$4,000 AGAINST DR. PHELAN

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.—After being out for two hours and a half the jury in the case of Sister Mary Basil vs. Archbishop Spratt et al, brought in a verdict at 11.45 o'clock Saturday night in favour of plaintiff for the sum of $24,000, assessed as follows: $20,000 against Archbishop Spratt, the Episcopal Corporation of the Diocese of Kingston, Mary Frances Regis, and the Sisters of Charity of the House of Providence, and $4,000 against Dr. Daniel Phelan. Plaintiff sued for $29,000, alleging an attempt to abduct her and place here in an asylum in Montreal, and also assault and persecution, and after being a member of the Sisters of Charity for twenty-nine years, she claimed she was unable to return and in her declining years was left penniless and unprovided for.

WELL KNOWN BANDSMAN LEAVES CITY

Mr. Fred Barnes, Formerly of the 57th Regiment and 93rd Battalion Bands Accepts Position in Huntsville

Mr. Fred Barnes, formerly of the 93rd Battalion Band, and recently discharged from the Canadian Army Medical Corps at Kingston, left today for Huntsville, where he has accepted a position, and where he will play in the crack band of the Anglo-Canadian Leather Company. Mr. Barnes was for a long period solo clarionetist with the 57th Regimental Band, and with the Grand Opera House orchestra before joining the 93rd Band as first clarionet player. It will give local music lovers an idea of the calibre of the Huntsville organization when it is stated that Mr. Barnes is to play third clarionet. The band numbers forty-five men, and included in its membership are several overseas men. Mr. Barnes was a member of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. and that body, as well as his many other friends will wish him every success in Huntsville.

Davies Company Made 80 Per Cent. Profit On Capital

Considerably Smaller Profit Was Made by the Matthews-Blackwell Company

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.— That the profits made by the William Davies Company, Ltd., and the Matthews-Blackwell, Limited, more particularly the former, were exceptionally high during the war period and yielded an extraordinary profit upon the capital invested, is the most important statement made by the Commission appointed to investigate the report of W. F. O'Connor, K.C., Acting Commissioner on the Cost of Living.

Excessive Profits Now Prevented.

Incidentally, it is pointed out that owing to the action taken by the Government recently it will be impossible in the future for packing companies to make excessive profits. Under the terms of the recent order in Council, packers in future can make by way of profit a maximum of eleven per cent. only. They can retain seven per cent. clear, and one-half of their earnings on the money invested between seven and fifteen per cent. Above fifteen per cent. all profits are confiscated.

Profits made, according to the report of the committee, ran as high as eighty per cent. on the money invested. This profit was made by the Wm. Davies Company during the year 1916.

The Matthews-Blackwell, Ltd.

A similar statement in regard to Matthews-Blackwell, Ltd., shows that on an investment of $2,107,447 in 1914, which had increased to $2,129,882 in 1916, the percentage of profits to investment before deduction of interest was, in 1913, 12.77; in 1914, 3.88; in 1915, 21.06, and in 1916, 31.87. Deduction of interest reduced the profits in 1913 to 6.49, in 1914 to 2.89, in 1915 to 14.06, and in 1916 to 25.16. Profits earned from November, 1916, to August 8, 1917, were approximately at the rate of 52 per cent. per annum on the investment before deduction of interest, and 45 per cent. after.

Royal Bank Flat Decided On For G. W. V. A. Club

Joint Committee Met on Saturday Evening and Came to That Decision

At a meeting of the joint committee representing the citizens and the G.W.V.A. held at the city buildings on Saturday evening the question of securing club room for the Veterans was again discussed, and the flat in the Royal Bank building was definitely decided upon, the Peterborough Club proposition being dropped. The citizens were represented by Mayor Duffus, Ald. Dobbin and Messrs. E. A. Peck and G. N. Gordon. A committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank in regard to the lease of the property and the estimated cost of furnishing the flat will also be investigated. The joint committee will report to a general meeting on Thursday night of this week, and the project will be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible.

"The Bird of Paradise"

John Warner has been selected by Oliver Morosco to play the role of Dr. Paul Wilson in "The Bird of Paradise" this season. It is a remarkable thing that Warner studied to be a physician and was at the University of Pennsylvania, a member of the class with the greatest bacteriologist in this country, now at the head of a great institute in New York.

In the play of Richard Walton Tully, Dr. Wilson goes to the Hawaiian Islands to isolate the germ of leprosy, falls in love with a native princess, Luana, marries her, and lapses from the standards of a white man to a level lower than a native outcast.

Mr. Warner says that the playwright has not overdrawn the picture. That medical records are filled with just such cases. So to his portrayal Mr. Warner brings the knowledge of a physician to aid the art of an actor.

Oliver Morosco is sending his great production of the Hawaiian drama, with a superb cast, to The Grand for two performances on Wednesday, 21st November, which will be the first appearance of this much patronised play in Peterborough.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—May I ask if there is any law or order in the City of Peterborough; if so, is it not time it was respected I have heard many public speakers, but never have I seen them interfered with by "hoo'ums" till I saw it in Peterborough two nights in succession, and nothing done to stop it, until respectable people are disgusted. It would seem to me that people who do not care to hear what a speaker has to say they might stay at home or, at least, allow others to hear the speaker. Respectfully yours,

Mr. Murray.

CONSCRIPT THE ALIENS.

The Examiner has been asked to reproduce the following letter, which appeared originally in the Toronto World:

Editor, World,—I should be glad if you will kindly publish the following in your valuable paper. I wrote to The Mail and Empire a similar letter, but they never published it:

Conscription and the Foreign Element.

Conscription is now the law of the land, and no doubt all the eligibles will be in soldiers' uniforms unless there are enough reinforcements for the boys at the Front in the first and second drafts. Are we men who will be conscripted going to allow the aliens to stay at home, taking the places of the Canadians, and earning the big money, while the boys are up to their necks in mud to protect them? Conscript the alien. If they are getting their living here, make them share the burdens of the country in the same proportion that we Canadians have to or will have to. If they, the aliens, are getting a good living here in Canada, it certainly is worth fighting for. If they won't fight send them back to their respective countries. Did our women of Canada go through the trials and tribulations that come of the sacredness of motherhood, and watch them from babyhood to boyhood and on to manhood, when Conscription claims them to be sent as occasion requires them, which is as it should be, and rightly so—did our women do this that they, the aliens, may stay at home and live in comfort while the boys are going through suffering and hardship? Not on your life, sir. Is it fair to the women who have borne the men, and the men themselves? The men and women should protest to the Government as one body.

Amend the Military Act and insert a clause that conscripts shall mean both Canadian and alien, excepting the enemy alien, of course. The cry is, more man power for the Allies. Why in the name of heaven don't the Government either make the aliens fight or send them back to their respective countries? I have worked with some aliens and they have openly laughed and sneered at me. "When Conscription comes, you go fight, me take your job," and they, the aliens, quite saw the joke. Have we got to take that kind of stuff? Not if I can avoid it. Are we Canadians going to allow the alien to put it over on us? I may add that I tried to enlist last October, 1916, but got turned down twice. I should be glad to hear from any gentleman or gentlemen who would take this matter up and make Conscription affect the alien as much as we Canadians. Fred G. Porter.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In order to have that unionity which is so necessary at the present time, we must have fellowship, and owing to the weaknesses of human nature, fellowship without charity is impossible.

Co-operation is good only when our cause is just.

True fellowship and co-operation, backed up by Christian charity, will avoid antagonisms and misunderstandings.

Are we to conclude from what took place here Friday evening that materialism and greed are in control? Are we the victims of frauds, bribery, intimidation and undue influence? Democracy without the true moral spirit can be and is sometimes used to raise racial and religious cries, which appeal to the passions of the electors and not to their reason. Immoral democracy is a heartless thing that trades on the weaknesses and follies of men. It will, and has allowed, unprincipled men to make guilty gain out of the war-sorrows of the nation.

Democracy without charity, or reverence for one another because they differ from us in opinions, is a thing to be despised, and the result is hell.

This war will not bring about true democracy (the greatest and best form of government) if the heart, mind and conscience of the people are not pure.

Unavoidable evils will always creep in, but they can be met and conquered with the right spirit.

Conditions here should not discourage anyone if the wreckers outnumber those with the true spirit, for as they sow so shall they reap, or, in other words, the chickens will come home to roost.

Charity, if rightly understood and put into practice, would overcome many of the evils that exist in our midst, but it seems that it calls for too great a sacrifice on the part of some of the leaders of public opinion.

With all theologians and churches available, it would be presumptuous on my part to attempt to describe what charity is, but I could tell you of some sentiment that is not charity.

If some of those unspeakable characters, who, for their own selfish ends, foment the unholy strife by circulating outrageous falsehoods about the mothers and sisters of those brave boys who are killed at the front had the right spirit of charity, they would hang their heads in shame when they extend their hand in sympathy to the sorrowing friends and the poor dupes To be charitable I must believe they are more to be pitied than censured.

J. Begley.

Peterborough, Nov. 19, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As an English Liberal I wish to express my disgust at the manner in which the meeting at Victoria Hall on Friday night was broken up by supporters of Mr. Burnham.

I myself, attended the meeting because I felt that there was a feeling in the country that all parties should get together if possible and because a Union convention seemed a proper way of accomplishing this end. As far as I can learn the convention was very representative of all parties here, and there is no doubt that but for the deplorable conduct of Mr. Burnham's followers the meeting would have united behind one man. It would seem too, that those who went to such pains to break up the meeting absolutely defeated their own ends, because many Liberals, like myself, who were friendly disposed to the idea of union will now stay right with our own party. Mr. Burnham's obstructionists were like the dog that bit the hand extended to feed it. You will remember that the dog got a good swift kick that soon put it out of business, and as far as I can see there is an element of tyranny in this city under the leadership of Mr. Burnham that is due for something of a jolt.

In closing I might say that a number of us Liberals had the idea that Mr. Hall was lined up behind Laurier. This I find is a great mistake. Mr. Hall stated very clearly on Saturday night that he will support the Military Service Bill properly and justly administered in the best interests of this country, and he stated too, that he will support every move toward the better prosecution of the war. Besides this he will do his utmost to prevent war profiteering, which has been condoned by Sir Robert Borden since the war commenced. Mr. Hall seems to be the right win-the-war candidate.

Yours truly,
BRITISHER

HAT IS MR. WORTH'S OPINION WORTH?

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is gratifying to see the sporting spirit shown by such prominent men as Mr. Peck and Mr. Wearing after the strong expression of public opinion given at last Friday night's meeting in favour of Capt. Burnham.

The threatened split in the win-the-war party would have undoubtedly proved fatal to West Peterborough, and it is very pleasing to notice that is now unnecessary. Let us all pull for Captain Burnham.

A long pull, a strong pull and all pull together. Yours truly,

J. W. Worth.

The Solution Of The Milk Problem

What is the Real solution of the Milk Problem?

1. Pasteurization
2. Clarification
3. Inspection

We need inspection to keep milk clean; we need pasteurization to render milk safe. Inspection, however, has limitations. These limitations may be guarded against by pasteurization. We need Clarification to remove udder waste, dirt, slime, etc., which a milk filter cannot take out, hence a milk supply that is both supervised and pasteurized is the only satisfactory solution of the problem.

Issues Of The Day Were Discussed At Mass Meeting Held Saturday Evening

Mr. R. R. Hall and Mr. R. T. Harding Were the Speakers —"Who Would the Kaiser Vote For?"—The Seriousness of the Food Situation—Political Appointments.

MILITARY SERVICE BILL

"Put the country before politics!" is the slogan that Mr. R. R. Hall, Liberal nominee for West Peterborough, introduced at a mass meeting, held Saturday evening in Victoria Hall. The meeting, which was largely attended, differed from the meeting that was held Friday evening, in that a small band of disturbers entrenched in the gallery, were promptly and effectively squelched every time their voices floated over the parapet. They not only failed to confuse the speakers, but many of them heard for the first time a clear-cut exposition of the Military Service Act, and a few of its anomalies. A few of the interrogators left before the meeting was over, and those who remained became strangely silent as the speakers of the evening rapidly and logically discussed the issues of the day.

TWO PARTIES.

The chairman of the evening was Mr. J. J. Hartley, President of the Trades and Labour Council. Mr. Hartley said it was a good thnig that two parties existed, as it tended to make the party in power more alert and make a safer government for the people. The chairman reviewed Mr. Hall's career during the time he sat in the House of Commons and asserted that Mr. Hall, on that occasion proved his value as a parliamentary representative, and if the best interests of the constituency are to be served in the present crisis, Mr. Hall should again be returned.

MR. HALL'S ADDRESS.

In his opening remarks Mr. Hall reaffirmed the terms of his recent address to the electors with regard to war policy, food production, and the necessity for unity of action and sentiment. Mr. Hall pledged himself to support any war measure no matter whether it originated with the party in power or the opposition. "We must support our army overseas with food and men, said the speaker. An important phase of the present crisis that is frequently overlooked is the vital question of food supplies which in the successful conduct of this war is of the gravest consequence. Forty five million men have been withdrawn from the ranks of producers and are engaged in the work of destruction and not constructive work. This vast army consumes an enormous quantity of supplies of all kinds and the shortage of such supplies will increase as the war continues.

FOOD SITUATION.

Mr. Hall quoted an extract from a speech made by Lord Northcliffe, in which the latter said that the responsible men of Great Britain attach enormous importance to the question of food supplies. Lord Rhonda, the Food Controller for Great Britain, said that the danger of the food situation was not so much due to submarines, as it was to the shortage of supplies. The Food Controller of Great Britain has asked for three hundred million bushels of grain a year from Canada and the United States. The British Government is looking to North America for these supplies because they cannot be secured elsewhere. The deflection in Russia was largely due to the shortage of food.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

We must take a serious view of the situation, said Mr. Hall. The question is what are we going to do to serve Great Britain in her hour of trial. Have you in the last six months heard of an statement that has been made by any member of the Border Government as to how this situation can be met? We have yet to hear one constructive idea or hear a word of any kind from Borden, Rowell and others of the so-called Union Government as to how the difficulty may be overcome. It is a serious charge to make, and no one regrets it more than I do. According to figures supplied by Senator Richardson, three hundred million bushels of wheat will feed eighty million people six monts or half that number for a whole year. Never have I seen as little fall ploughing done than has been done this year. That in itself means sort crops. Labour conditions throughout the country and particularly in the West, are appaling. Whether I am elected or defeated I propose that the responsibility shall be placed on the people for such conditions, and if they do not vote for me they will vote for men who are unworthy of the confidence of the people," said Mr. Hall, in conclusion.

A QUESTION.

"Is Mr. Hall a straight Laurier Liberal or not?" enquired a man in the audience.

Returning to the front of the platform, Mr. Hall said: "I propose to vote with Laurier when he is right, and vote against him when he is wrong. I propose to vote on all constructive measures, no matter whether they come from the party in power, or the opposition."

The next speaker was Mr. R. T. Harding of Toronto.

"There seems to be a great deal of confusion," said Mr. Harding, as to what should or should not be done. We now have Union Government. Some call it an onion government because it smells bad and brings the tears to your eyes. Premier Borden started out to govern this country by filling his cabinet up with Nationalists, whose sentiments were anything but pro-British. The Almighty never placed in the hands of any one man a greater opportunity to write into the pages of history brighter record than he did Premier Borden. No man ever had a better chance.

"Patronage and graft, the same as all of you" yelled a man in the gallery.

"You may be quite right and you may be wrong,," said Mr. Harding.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENT.

Continuing, the speaker said: "The men who tucked away their overalls and enlisted were the men who really wanted to go and fight for their country. For every pair of overalls that were tucked away a dress suit appeared. The owner of the overalls go to the front, but the man with the dress suit stayed at home. Honorary colonels, who owed their appointment to members of Parliament sprang up all over. Nine out of every ten officers appointed owed their appointments to political favour. There are men lying in graves in Flanders to night who were led by incompetent officers. I have had the crepe on my door, and my family has suffered, and that is the reason. Hundreds of our brave boys have been shot down as they clutched a Ross rifle that had jammed. In spite of all this, the Government comes back with a new name, and asks you to return it to power.

Mr. Harding referred to the manner in which Lloyd George as Minister of Munitions, organized the munitions industry of Great Britain, and brought it up to a maximum of efficiency and production. When you have men in your midst whose thirst for money is like a drunkard's thirst for drink you have then got to have inspectors by brigades to watch them," said the speaker. The profits of the munitions plants in England went back into the pockets of the people.

"THE SLACKERS"

"Who made the profits here" asked the speaker.

"The slackers" yelled a voice in the gallery.

"Slackers, right," said Mr. Harding: Knights of the Garter and Baronets, also."

"When I first saw the manifesto of the Union Government it reminded me of a patent medicine advertisement which cures everything and says nothing about the past. The munitions plants are still full of profiteers. I do not intend to support any such government. When the lid is off after December the nineteenth three trains will not carry all the fellows who will want to leave for Mexico because the Chief has said they will be prosecuted. The Borden administration then took a gambler's chance and introduced a bill in the House to get one hundred thousand men because the Borden Government had brought the voluntary system to such a state that it was ruined. In Onario the Government spent eighteen thousand five hundred dollars in advertising for recruits under the voluntary system. In Quebec three thousand five hundred dollars was spent in advertising in the English language papers. In addition they sent a Methodist minister and a few Old Country drill sergeants who did not speak the French language to round up recruits. There wasn't a Cabinet Minister in Quebec who ever went on the stump until Casgrain went out and later they put a uniform on Blondin, and he is now overseas on a Cooks' tour. We have got people in this country to-day who are trying to break up the confederation between the English and French speaking people of this country while the latter are dying in hundreds for your liberty and mine. When they return they will vote for the man and will never allow strife to be kindled by a bunch of cheap politicians.

SOLDIER TOURISTS.

We have four hundred and fifteen thousand soldiers on the pay roll, said Mr. Harding, and we cannot keep one hundred thousand men at the front. There have been one hundred thousand casualties, and where are the rest I take my hat off to the man who has been at the front, but I despise any man who puts on the King's uniform and never fights.

"Haven't we got some of them in this town" enquired a man in the gallery.

"Yes," replied the speaker, "we have got them all over."

"Take them out of the factories," suggested the man in the gallery.

"How many men were taken out of the factory of Mr. Kemp, who, until recently was Minister of Militia," countered Mr. Harding. Ask the drill sergeants in that district and they will tell you, he added. When the voluntary system failed we should have asked for so many men from each Province and when they failed to come forward under the valuntary system, conscript the difference, and not introduce an act that is a scarecrow. Out of 361,692 registrations 338,534 have applied for exemption, leaving 23,000 who have not applied. In Montreal 65,000 men registered, and all but 1,400 applied for exemption. In a letter written to a friend by Mr. J. H. Rainsville, Deputy Speaker in the House of Commons, the writer stated that young unmarried men need have no fear of presenting themselves before the tribunals. The result, said Mr. Harding, has been that in Quebec, up until Thursday night, ninety-four per cent. of all applications for exemption have been allowed. If this continues, Montreal's contribution to the new arm will be less than five thousand men. If we get one hundred thousand men other provinces will suply the greatest number and the balance will come from Quebec.

I believe in service, but if you want to make people loyal you must trust them and not throw bricks at them. If Joffre had stayed in Montreal with a recruiting staff he would have got fifty thousand men in two months.

THE ELECTION BILL.

Reviewing the Election Act recently passed by the Borden administration, Mr. Harding said that there were a large number of Germans in the Province of Ontario who were never naturalized and were relieved of military service by reason of an "iniquitous" clause in the Election Act.

Voice in the gallery: "Could you trust them?"

"Yes, I have lived among them and I know them."

"We've fought against them," replied the galleryite.

"A number of them are on the staff at the front, fighting, and not in the gallery, yelling," retorted Mr. Harding.

Continuing, Mr. Harding said: "When the Government is defeated as it will be, in December, such an iniquitous act will be wiped off the books for good. It is an insult to the large number of women throughout Canada who have done their utmost in connection with the war, but are deprived of a vote because they do not happen to have a son or relative at the front. The Union Government in Canada will be an absolute failure if they are going to fill it up with politicians. To make it a success we must put men into it who have been disassociated from politics of the past few years.

THE KAISER'S VOTE.

Placards are being displayed all over Canada ad will be displayed in Peterborough before long, upon which are inscribed the words "who would the Kaiser vote for?"

"Let me tell you he would vote for the Government that allowed Canadian nickel to go to Germany to shoot Canadian boys, and also permitted Canadian soldiers to be equipped with the Ross rifle. Then another thing they shout at you is 'Win the War' The only party that is out to win the war are the boys who went to the front. It is misnamed. They mean 'win the election'. The Franchise Act was not created for the purpose of winning the war; it was created to win the election. The Military Service Act is the same. It took one hundred and twenty-five days to get the Military Service bill through the House of Commons and it will soon be a year old, and not one man has been sent to the front as a result. When McKenzie and Mann wanted several million dollars of the country's money it just took twenty-nine days for "Bill" and "Dan" to get their work in.

In conclusion, the speaker emphasized the necessity for unity of action, not only on the battle fronts, but at home, in the form of a new government and new men

Lakefield Hunters Meet With Success

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 19.—Mr. J. C. Strickland secured a fine deer and over seventy ducks at Burleigh this year.

Mr. Levi Payne, who stopped at his cottage at Stoney Lake, brought home 30 ducks, 27 whitefish and one mink.

The Silver Lake party composed of Messrs. Robt. Miller, Stewart Miller and Wm. Miller, of Warsaw, and N. A. Moore, of Lakefield, had a very successful hunt, securing their full number of deer during the first week.

Messrs. John Charlton, P. Taylor and S. W. McKibben, who hunted at Grassy Creek, had a successful hunt, getting their full number of deer.

The Cedar Lake hunting party returned on Wednesday after a very successful hunt. The party secured seven deer and eight beaver. The party consisted of Messrs. J. Carey and C. L. Bickell, Toronto; S. J. Charlton, B. Q. Dench, D. S. Charlton, W. W. Leonard, Geo. Jackman, and J. Bickell.

Messrs. P. Spence, Theo. Crawford and W. Stabler, made a flying trip to Burleigh township on Tuesday last and had the good luck to shoot two fine fawns.

The Payne party, who were located at Still River, in the Parry Sound, district, secured their full number of deer.

Messrs. Dr. J. R. Fraser, Dr. Gibson and A. J. Kidd returned from the Parry Sound district on Wednesday, having had good luck, the party securing their full number of deer. Messrs. H. Kidd, G. Ridpath and D. W. Edwards, of Toronto, were also with the party.

Nerves of the Stomach

Were Weak and Inactive as Result of Nervous Prostration — Lost Twenty Pounds — Had to Take Sleeping Powders to Get Any Rest.

St. Catharines, Ont., November 19.—Many people never realise that the movement and action of every organ of the human body is dependent on the energy supplied by the nervous system.

When the nervous system gets run down there is weakness throughout the entire body. You feel tired and languid and your stomach and other digestive organs are similarly affected. Appetite fails, digestion is poor, you do not get the good of what you eat and gradually grow weaker and weaker.

This process can only be stopped by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which goes directly to create new nerve force and thereby to invigorate the whole human body.

Mrs. Geo. S. Elise, 46 Davidson Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My husband had an attack of nervous prostration, and although he doctored for some time and tried different other medicines, he could not get relief. He had to resort to sleeping powders given him by the doctor to make him sleep. The greater part of the trouble seemed to be with the nerves of the stomach. He began to lose weight, and kept on going down until he had lost twenty pounds. We had read advertisements in the newspapers for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and noticed that it seemed to be doing a lot of good for people troubled with nervousness, so my husband decided to try it. He found benefit almost from the start, and continued this treatment until he had taken about twelve or thirteen boxes. The results were most satisfactory. He is now enjoying good health, sleeps well and has gained back nearly all the weight he had lost. He also uses Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally, and thinks them an excellent remedy. I have also used this latter medicine for dizzy spells and liver trouble, and was completely cured of these complaints. We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's medicines, and cannot speak too highly of them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

William S. Darling, a "B" man, and a farmer, was exempted until his class is called.

Gordon Chester Adams, another farmer, and an "A2" man, was exempted so long as he continued to be employed as a farmer.

Sydney Craig, 575 Patterson street, a "B" man, was exempted until B class is called.

B. Lockington, Box 983, and an "E" man, was exempted until his class was called.

J. R. Halpin, 332 Smith street, and an "E" man, was exempted until E category men are required.

C. B. Clute, 467 Albert street, an "E" man, was exempted on similar grounds.

Thomas Wallace Rhind, 226 Brock street, a "C" man, was exempted until Class C is called.

E. J. Condon, 321 Simcoe street, and an "E" man, was exempted until E class is called.

Harold Gilgour, 786 Water street, and an "A2" man, was exempted until July first of next year.

E. C. Black, 218 Rubidge street, a "B" man was exempted until Class B is called.

Thomas Lansfield, Y.M.C.A., appeared before the tribunal with his medical sheet marked "A2". A second trip before the Medical Board resulted in Lansfield being placed in B category, where he will remain until Class B is called.

O. F. Dannecker, 264 Hunter street, an "E" man, was exempted until his class is called.

Norman McLaurin, 563 Romaine street, B. C. Hall, Indian River, Richard Price, 59 Olive avenue, Fred Price, 59 Olive avenue, V. R. Craig, 45 McDonnel street, and R. A. Law, Auburn, all "E" men, were exempted until B class is called.

E. E. Ingall, 421 Stewart street, a "C" man, was exempted until his class is called.

J. V. Heffernan, a farmer, and an "A2" man, was transferred to the Keene tribunal.

The exemption claim of J. J. O'Brien, 621 George street, was disallowed.

H. W. Bickell, 145 London street, was exempted until his class is called.

"If you don't want the Germans to take Venice, you had better get over there quick," was Judge Huycke's parting suggestion to Domenico Memmo, an Italian, who for the past thirteen years has resided in Canada, but has never been naturalised.

Memmo surprised the Board when he said that he had once voted in Canada, this despite the fact that he had never been naturalised.

Judge Huycke warned Memmo to be careful what he did during an election. As Memmo is an alien the Board had no jurisdiction in the matter.

Reported for Service.

E. Drake, 423 Concession Street, reported for service. He appeared before the Board with the statement that the Medical Board had refused to examine him, the doctors giving as their reason that the applicant had not appeared before the Board on or before 10th November, the last day for registration. Drake was instructed to appear before the Medical Board with an order for examination.

Willing To Go.

Andrew Tedford, of Douro, will go to the trenches instead of Alberta, where he has a homestead, which he proposed to take over in the spring. For the past two years Tedford has been residing with his brother, and his Western farm has been rented.

"I think you will have to go," said Judge Huycke.

"Well, I may be as much use in the trenches as on the farm. I am willing to go," said the applicant for exemption.

"I think you are," replied Judge Huycke, as he signed the papers disallowing exemption.

Further Examination.

John Tevens, 206 Perry Street, claimed to have rheumatism, and on this ground applied for exemption. The doctors placed the man in A category. Tevens was sent up for further medical examination. Applicant said he would have gone three years ago if he had been fit. He claimed to have been turned down several times. Applicant said he was content to go if the doctors reaffirmed their original decision.

Judgment Reserved.

W. C. McBride, Wolsley Street, an A2, claimed exemption on the grounds of domestic hardship and financial obligations. Applicant is the only son, and both parents are said to be in poor health.

'It is a serious case," said the applicant.

"Not nearly as serious as some of the cases we have had to deal with," said Judge Huycke. Lieut.-Col. Clegg will investigate the case.

Judgment Deferred.

William Steinkrauss applied for exemption on behalf of his son, John Steinkrauss, whom he claimed was needed on the farm. "There is as good a boy as was born. He has never been off the farm, and if I did not need him on the farm, he would have been in town earning the big wages," said the father of the boy. He owns two hundred and thirty-five acres of land on the second line of Smith Township. Miss Tully, a neighbour, with one hundred and fifty acres of land, is dependent on the Steinkrauss family for help. If one of the boys is drafted, the Tully farm would have to be idle.

Judgment was deferred. William Steinkrauss, senior, was born in Germany, and came to this country when two years of age.

Was Exempted.

John A. Archer, an A2 man, residing on the 4th Line of Smith, claimed exemption on the grounds that he was a farmer and was needed to work a hundred-acre farm. One sister resides at home and another is going to school.

Archer was exempted on condition that he remain on the farm with his father.

"They need men badly, Archer, and you will have to stay at home and do two men's work," admonished Judge Huycke.

Temporary Exemption.

Howard Edmund Profitt, an A2 man, resides on the first line of Smith Township. The applicant has one brother at the Front, one brother at home, and a third brother works a farm in Monaghan. The applicant together with his father and younger brother, work a two hundred acre farm in Smith Township.

The applicant was exempted until the first of October next.

Exemption Granted.

Thomas Russell, an A2 man, residing in Douro, claimed exemption on the grounds that he was sick. When informed that the Board would not consider such a claim in view of the finding of the Medical Board, Russell changed his claim to cover his occupation, which is that of a farmer. The applicant and his father work two hundred and fifty acres of land in Douro.

Russell was exempted on the second ground.

Death of Gen. Maude

British Commander of Mesopotamia Force Passes Away

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 9. — The death of Gen. Maude, the British commander of the Mesopotamia expeditionary forces, on Sunday, was announced in official despatches to-day. He was reported ill last week.

An official announcement issued today says General Maude died in Mesopotamia yesterday evening after a brief illness.

Major General Frederick Stanley Maude, captor of Bagdad, was rated as one of the most brilliant commanders of the war. After a series of British defeats in Mesopotamia, General Maude was placed in command last year and won an unbroken series of successes. Advancing from the Babylonian Plains he captured Kut-El-Amara, where Gen. Townsend's army had been compelled to surrender. He eventually took Bagdad.

General Maude was 53 years old. He had a distinguished military record before the war. He served with distinction in the South African war, where he won the Distinguished Service Order. Prior to taking command in Mesopotamia, General Maude saw service in France, where he was wounded. From 1901 to 1904 he was military secretary to the Governor-General of Canada, and later private secretary to the Secretary of State for War.

Can separate peace ever be justifiable? demanded the parlour orator. Yes, answered the man who wasn't supposed to. I once knew a man who made up with his wife, but kept her mother out of the house.—Buffalo Express.

"The Family Honour" At The Empire

Robert Warwick and June Elvidge, Stars in An Extremely Interesting Photo Play

How can a man
Save his younger brother
From the clutches
Of a
Designing
Adverturess?"

This was the problem put up to a man in "The Family Honor." The manner in which the man solved the problem forms an exceedingly interesting story and the acting given the part by Robert Warwick makes it one of the distinguished characterizations of the year on the screen. Miss June Elvidge is seen in the role of the designing adverturess. From every angle this is a particularly pleasing and entertaining production. The supporting cast is more than excellent. See this new World-Brady picture at the Empire Theatre tonight and be gloriously entertained.

ENGINEERS' CLUB VISITED THE QUAKER OATS PLANT ON SAT.

The Engineers' Club made an inspection of the Quaker Oats plant on Saturday afternoon, under the guidance of officials of the Leonard Construction Company. About fifty of the engineers took advantage of this opportunity of going over the structure as it nears completion. They afterwards held their week-end dinner at the Empress, and were addressed by Mr. Basler, of the Leonard Construction Company on the design of the reinforced concrete parts of the plant.

Chief Thompson's Department, etc.

Military Service Act. The buildings destroyed were the storehouse near the C.P.R. used by J. L. Squire and Son, Mr. A. McIntyre's garage and an empty dwelling-house near the storehouse. Fire was also discovered in the shed of a large vacant dwelling owned by Mr. J. B. Pearse. Through the efforts of C. P. R. Constable Greenham and others, it was extinguished before it had made serious headway.

Mr. F. J. Squire, of the firm of J. L. Squire and Son, is a member of the Havelock Tribunal, and, it is understood, that he had received threatening letters and that certain statements had been made that his place would soon be in ashes because of his connection with the Military Tribunal. It is also known that while the great majority of the people in and around Havelock were as patriotic as any Canadians, there were certain recklessly defiant young men who had openly voiced their opposition to the Military Act.

Chief Thompson did not offer any details of the intelligence he gathered in his preliminary conference with the Havelock citizens, but it is understood that a strong case will be prepared against Varty, who, by the way, is a cousin of Clarence Varty Sampson, whom the city and county police have known through the Dummer cattle stealing cases.

The McMullen brothers were taken into custody after eight o'clock, and from that time until long after midnight the whole village seemed to have congregated about the Town Hall. Varty had been out driving, and when his trail was finally discovered he gave the police a merry chase of three blocks before he was run down.

Some of these men are reputed village bullies, and were more or less feared by their fellow-citizens. They were easy captures for the Thompson party, however. It is alleged that Varty, who was first exempted by the Havelock Tribunal, was recalled and his exemption disallowed, when it was learned that he had given false information. That was on Friday. The McMullen brothers are said to have been engaged by the C.P.R., and automatically were discharged by the company when they did not report for service or file a claim for exemption.

Unionist Headquarters At Ottawa

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 19.—Union headquarters have been established in the Castle Building, Ottawa, to be under the direction of Mr. James F. Smellie and Mr. Ainslee W. Green.

The office is for the purpose of giving general information to candidates and others interested in the election and co-ordinating the platform campaign. The Union Government expresses the hope that provincial organizations will keep in touch with Union headquarters in respect to all these matters. It is also desired that the Speakers' leagues and other similar organizations in arranging for meetings within their provinces or districts will keep Union headquarters advised in order that there may be no unnecessary duplication of effort.

OBITUARY

ROBERT DIXON.

The funeral of the late Robert Dixon, who died at the family residence, Lot 6, Concession 8, Douro, will take place tomorrow at 2.30 from the family residence to the Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Dixon's death was of an extremely sudden nature. On Thursday he had been with his brother, Thomas, helping at a neighbour's farm, in Smith, and while returning on Friday, suddenly exclaimed that he was gone. He dropped off the seat of the waggon and evidently hit the bridge of his nose. He was taken home and Dr. McGrath called, but his heart, which has been affected for some time, gave out, and he died at 4 o'clock on Saturday morning.

Deceased was born at the farm on which he died, 47 years ago. He leaves, besides his wife, five brothers, William, Thomas, George, Charles and John Henry; also six sisters, three of whom, Mrs. C. Johnson, Mrs. Alfred Gill and Mrs. McLean reside in the city, the other three in the States.

STEVANIE ANTONIA.

The funeral of Stevanie Antonia, who died on Saturday morning at Nicholls Hospital, took place this morning at 11 o'clock. Deceased was born in Greece, 23 years ago, and had for some time been employed with the Yeotes Brothers. A few months ago he went into munitions work in Toronto, but took sick and was brought to Peterborough.

A service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Grobb, was held at Bellechem's Undertaking Rooms. Interment at Little Lake cemetery.

Paid Tribute To Returned Soldiers And Latest Dead

Sergt. Albert A. Laplante.
Corp. W. J. McCann.
Privates Dan Bridgenaw, Dan. Maher, and Walter Cornelius.

Last week's casualties included the names of the above five young men of the Sacred Heart Church, for whom congregational prayer was offered yesterday and also for the recovery of Ptes. John Murray and William Gadoria. The Pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, paid a tender tribute to the memory of these young men and spoke of the abiding appreciation of the sacrifice they had made. Father O'Brien also referred to the returned soldiers, of the service they had rendered and the hardships they had endured, and in which they had suffered injuries. They deserved the honours of their fellow-citizens, who should not forget their lasting debts to the returned veterans.

I suppose only a limited amount of this stock is being offered—the old wheeze. No, we're offering an unlimited amount of it, said the promoter truthfully. We'll continue to print it as long as we have any sale for it.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

he was admitted to the 6th British Red Cross Hospital, Etaples, on 12th November.

PTE. ERNEST GIBSON.

Pte. Ernest Gibson, formerly of the band of the 59th Battalion, is reported seriously ill, according to an official message from Ottawa. Pte. Gibson who, before the war, was a member of the 57th Regiment Band, enlisted as a bandsman with the 50th Battalion in August, 1915. The message from Ottawa states that he was admitted to No. 14 Stationary Hospital.

Q.M.-S. D. E. BRADSHAW.

Word has been received that Quartermaster-Sergt. Dave Bradshaw, formerly of Peterborough, died of wounds on 3rd November. Quartermaster-Sergt Bradshaw had a host of friends in Peterborough, who will be grieved to learn of his death. For a number of years he was on the staff of the Royal Bank here, and was prominent in hockey circles, being a member of the Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. team. He was moved from here to Sudbury, where he enlisted for overseas service. His relatives are in Stratford.

Pte. Charles Hickey, 180 Charlotte Street, who enlisted in Toronto with the 208th Irish Battalion, and has been invalided home, has arrived at Quebec.

Sergt. Harry Watson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been removed to Nicholls Hospital, seriously ill from pleuro-pneumonia.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Pte. Frederick H. Sawyer, who died in Peterborough on Nov. 19th, 1915, after much pain and suffering patiently borne:

"And there shall be no more pain nor sorrow, for the Lord God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

—His Wife and Little Daughter.

A Satire That Won An International Reputation Recently

Iowa Man Acquires Much Fame in Few Weeks—Satan Amazed When He Saw Kaiser Form Partnership With the Impossible Turk.

REQUESTS FROM ALL STATES

Louis Syberkrop, of Creston, Iowa, has acquired much fame in recent weeks as author of a satire on Kaiser Wilhelm. Requests have come to him from Tumulty, Secretary Daniels, Roosevelt, and people in every state of the Union and in Canada for copies of his article. It is:

"The Infernal Region,
"June 28, 1917.

"To Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, King of Prussia, Emperor of All Germany, and Envoy Extraordinary of Almighty God:

"My Dear Wilhelm,

"I can call you by that familiar name, for I have always been very close to you, much closer than you could ever know.

'From the time that you were yet an undeveloped being in your mother's womb I have shaped your destiny for my own purpose.

"In the days of Rome I created a roughneck known in history as Nero; he was a vulgar character and suited my purpose at that particular time. In these modern days a classic demon and efficient super-criminal was needed, and as I know the Hohenzollern blood I picked you as my special instrument to place on earth as annex of hell. I gave an over-supply of egotism, that you might not discover your own failings; I twisted your mind to that of a made man with certain normal tendencies to carry you by, a most dangerous character placed in power; I gave you the power of a hypnotist and a certain magnetic force that you might enslave your people. I am responsible for the deformed arm that hangs helpless on your left, for your crippled condition embitters your life and destroys all noble impulses that might otherwise cause me anxiety, but your strong sword arm is driven by your ambition that squelches all sentiment and pity; I placed in your mind a deep hatred of all things British, for of all nations on earth I hate Britain most; wherever Britain plants her flag she brings order out of chaos and the hated Cross follows the Union Jack; under her rule wild tribes become tillers of the soil, and in due time practical citizens; she is the great civiliser of the globe and I HATE HER. I planted in your soul a cruel hatred for your mother because she was British, and left my good friend Bismarck to fan the flame I had kindled. Recent history proves how well our work was done. It broke your royal mother's heart, but I have gained my purpose.

"The inherited disease of the Hohenzollerns killed your father, just as it will kill you, and you became the ruler of Germany and a tool of mine sooner than I expected.

"To assist you and further hasten my work I sent you three evil spirits, Nietzsche, Treitschke, and later Bernstadi, whose teachings inflamed the youth of Germany, who in good time would be willing and loyal subjects and eager to spill their blood and pull your chestnuts, yours and mine; the spell has been perfect—you cast your ambitious eyes toward the Mediterranean, Egypt, India, and the Dardanelles, and you began your great railway to Bagdad, but the ambitious archduke and his more ambitious wife stood in your way. It was then that I sowed the seed in your heart that blossomed into the assassination of the Duke and his wife, and all hell smiled when we saw how cleverly you saddled the crime on to Serbia. I saw you set sail for the fjords of Norway and I knew you would prove an alibi. How cleverly done—so much like your noble grandfather, who also secured an assassin to remove old King Frederick of Denmark and later robbed that country of two provinces that gave Germany an opportunity to become a naval power. Murder is dirty work, but it takes a Hohenzollern to make away and get by.

"Your opportunity was at hand; you set the world on fire and bells of hell were ringing; your rape on Belgium caused much joy. It was the beginning of a perfect foundation of a perfect hell on earth, the destruction of noble cathedrals and other infinite works of art was hailed with joy in the infernal regions. You made war on friends and foes alike and the murder of civilians showed my teachings had borne fruit. Your treachery toward neutral nations hastened a universal upheaval, the thing I most desired. Your undersea warfare is a master stroke, from the smallest mackerel pot to the great Lusitania you show no favourites; as a war lord you stand supreme; for you have no mercy; you have no consideration for the baby clinging to its mother's breast as they both go down into the deep together, only to be torn apart and leisurely devoured by sharks down among the corals.

"I have strolled over the battlefields of Belgium and France. I have seen your hand of destruction everywhere; it's all your work, super-fiend that I made you. I have seen the fields of Poland, now a wilderness fit for prowling beasts only; no merry children in Poland now, they all succumbed to frost and starvation—I drifted down into Galicia where former Jews and Gentiles lived happily together; I found but ruins and ashes; I felt a curious pride in my pupil, for it was all above my expectations. I was in Belgium when you drove the peaceful population before you like cattle into slavery; you separated man and wife and forced them to hard work in trenches. I have seen the most fiendish rape committed upon young women and those who were forced into maternity were cursing the father of their offspring, and I began to wonder if my own inferno was really up to date.

"You have taken millions of dollars from innocent victims and called it indemnity; you have lived fat on the land you usurped and sent the real owners away to starvation. You have strayed away from legalised war methods and introduced a code of your own. You have killed and robbed the people of friendly nations and destroyed their property. You are a liar, a hypocrite, and a bluffer of the highest magnitude. You are a part of mine and yet you pose as the personal friend of God. Ah, Wilhelm, you are a wonder! You wantonly destroy all things in your path and leave nothing for coming generations.

"I was amazed when I saw you form a partnership with the impossible Turk, the chronic killer of Christians, and you a devout worshipper in the Lutheran Church. I confess, Wilhelm, you are a puzzle at times. A Mohammedan army, commanded by German officers, assisting one another in massacring Christians is a new line of warfare. When a Prussian officer can witness a nude woman being disemboweled by a swarthy Turk, committing a double murder by one cut of his sabre, and calmly stand by and see a house full of innocent Armenians locked up, the house saturated with oil and fired, then my teachings did not stop with you, but have extended to the WHOLE GERMAN nation. I confess my Satanic soul grew sick and then and there I knew the pupil had become the master. I am a back number, and, my dear Wilhelm, I abdicate in your favour. The geat key of hell will be tuned over to you. The gavel that has struck the doom of damned souls since time began is yours; I am satisfied with what I have done; that my abdication in your favour is for the very best interests of hell—in the future I am at your majesty's service.

"Affectionately and sincerely,
"LUCIFER H. SATAN."

EIGHTEEN SEATS GO BY ACCLAMATION; ONE IN ONTARIO

Nine Go to the Laurier Supporters and Nine to the Union Government Hon. G. P. Graham Drops Out

LEADERS OPPOSED

TORONTO, Nov. 20. — Eighteen seats in the House of Commons go by acclamation, nine to the Laurier supporters and nine to the Union Government. Hon. Geo. F. Graham drops out and is not nominated. All other Cabinet Ministers and leaders have opposition in their constituencies except Hon. Martin Burrell. The Union Government looks strong in the West. John McMartin, Liberal Unionist in Glengarry, is the only Ontario acclamation.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

"Suppose you were managing editor, and the biggest story you can think of broke upon you"—Manning stopped and searched. "What is the biggest piece of news you can imagine, Dr. Latimer?"

The other man examined the ceiling.

"Well, say an authenticated case of the persistence of life after death," he ventured.

"Bully!" cried Manning. His eyes sparkled, the color mounted to his forehead and his fingers twitched — was it for the missing pencil and copy-paper? Then he found himself. "Suppose you were in charge, and that flash came over from the Associated Press. What would you do?"

"I should develop a violent headache," said Latimer.

"Here's what you'd do,, Dr. Latimer. You'd yell up the tube to the make-up man to tear open the first page for a seven-column double-ribbon head. You'd then get the telegraph editor to write that head: 'Life Holds Beyond Grave Says French Savant.' You'd then turn loose several men on the Encyclopedia Britannica, looking up opinions on imortality by Plato, Solomon, Lucretius, Thomas a Kempis, Mme. Blavatsky, Huxley. You'd have the city room get all the local clergyman on the wire. You'd telegraph to President Wilson, Billy Sunday, President Eliot, Anna Howard Shaw, Henry Ford, Mary Pickford, the Pope, the Sultan, and the Chief Rabi of Petrograd. You'd have your Wall Stree man interview Mr. Morgan as to the probable effect of immortality on the stock exchange. You'd ask the presidents of the insurance companies how immortality would effect their special business. Next day there would be follow-up stories, with reproductions of the most famous paintings of the Resurrection. By the end of the week your hair would be slightly grayer, and if anybody mentioned immortality to you, you'd bite him. Next week something would break loose in Mexico."—November "Atlantic."

FIVE SUBMARINES DESTROYED SATURDAY

LONDON, Nov. 20—Premier Lloyd George stated in the House of Commons that he had no further fear of submarines. Five German submarines were destroyed on Saturday. Lloyd George's answer to the critics was vigorous and conclusive.

Italians Still Holding Firm

No Further Enemy Attempts to Cross the Piave River

ROME, Nov. 20.—Italians are still holding the new positions firmly. A powerful attack is proceeding in the north between the Piave and Bretna Rivers, the enemy throwing heavy forces into the line. There have been no further atempts to cross the River. The Italian infantry and artillery are holding on tenaciously.

Young's Point A Resident Dead

The death occurred last evening at Young's Point of Mrs. Mary Godfrey, aged seventy-two years. Her husband the late Manley Godfrey, predeceased her many years ago. One brother, Mr. Matthew Young of Peterborough and one sister, Mrs. James Walsh of Young's Point, are left to mourn her loss. Funeral announcement later.

Advances In Prices Last Week Were Numerous

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE.

Wholesalers were somewhat agitated during the week over the order of the Food Controller which stipulated that purchases of lima beans must not be made in the United States at prices exceeding 11 1-2c per pound. Contracts have already been entered into between wholesalers and importers at prices ranging from 13c to 14c ped pound coast basis. This would mean that wholesalers could not secure these stocks if the Food Controller persisted in this stand, and some 190,000 to 200,000 pounds of beans could not be brought into Canada. The mater was immediately taken up with the Food Controller, who agreed that the beans could be brought in at contract price provided the shipper in the United States had a license to export the beans.

Package cereals continue to be in good demand as a result of the stocking up movement on the art of consumers. Licenses to sell margarine are expected to be issued in the near future. Storage creamery butter was easier in price as a result of stocks that are held, with no better prospect of an export outlet. For the same reason store eggs have been easier in price. Poultry Prices were higher due to the influence of higher prices in the United States.

Advances have been quite numerous and include washing powder, pure lard, shortening, blended jams, mustard, chocolate, maple syrup, catsup, brooms peanut butter, jelly powder, toilet soap. A decline was registered in toilet paper. Sugar holds unchanged at rcent quotations with endeavous being made by refiners to make stocks go round. Business is reported good.

Weekly Report On Farm Conditions

Fall Wheat Has Picked Up During the Past Two Weeks—Fine Stock Selling Well

WORK PROGRESSING

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The young fall wheat and rye have picked up somewhat owing to the recent warmer weather, although yet comparatively backward owing to late seeding and delayed growth during the cold weather, in October. The Essex representative reports seeing a farmer sowing fall wheat during the week.

Beans have suffered from the unfavourable weather of the past month and are unusually late in being harvested. Considerable of the crop was injured by frost.

Roots are turning out well, as a rule, and storing is nearly completed. Turnips are described as being very uniform in size, and mangels and sugar beets are also favourably regarded both as to yield and quality.

Some potatoes were yet undug a representatives reported. Statement regarding yield, quality and price vary considerably.

New seeding of clover promises well and in fact clover fields generally will enter the winter in very fair condition where they have not been pastured too close.

Some Spy apples were still on the trees in Norfolk at the end of the week. Apples in that county are selling at from $1.75 to $2 a bushel, tree run. In boxes, properly graded, they bring $2.50 to $3.25, and in barrel they range from $3 to $8, according to variety and quality.

LIVE STOCK.

Stockers are selling well at auction sales, even though of only medium quality. Many cattle already have been put in for the winter, as pastures had got very poor owing to the bad weather of October. For this reason also the milk flow has fallen off more especially as mill feeds and other concentrates are very high in price. The Leeds representative state that the factory at Athens is paying its members $50 a ton net for milk delivered at the factory in fit condition to ship to the Brockville condensery. The Lanark Representative says: "The total output of milk, according to a cheesemaker I talked with, will be about the same as that of last year; the first part of the season was very much ahead but the latter part is behind."

Hogs are being marketed steadily, but some sold have been below weight and generally unfinished. Prices range from $15 to $16 per cwt.

As to fodders, hay and coarse grains are plentiful, but ensilage and shelled corn will be comparatively scarce, and much of it inferior in quality.

LABOUR.

The agricultural labour situation is more or less in a daze, and will be until the more immediate matter of military conscription has been settled. Farmers are naturally waiting to see how this calling out of men is going to affect them bofer they finally make their plans for the coming season. Meantime all necessary field work, such as the storing of roots and other late crops, is being pushed along, together with a fair amount of fall ploughing, which has been favoured during the week by more open weather. Threshing, for various reasons, has been greatly delayed this season. One representative states that more farms are going to be worked on shares.

Hair has to be kept in good order constantly before it acquires a well-groomed look.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

Mrs. Morton went back to the apartment, and made her preparations to start. She determined to take a train leaving at half past three, and as Ruth would not return from the studio until later, she called her up on the telephone, and told her of her sudden determination.

"It is a matter of business, dear," she explained. "I will be back tomorrow. Good-by." The girl's cheerful voice reassured her. At least nothing had happened up to now, to give cause for alarm.

It was only when Mrs. Morton was about to leave for the train that her nerves were once more subjected to a severe shock.

The telephone bell rang, and she went to answer it, thinking that Ruth might for some reason have called her up.

Over the wire came a thin, queer voice.

"Beauty is only skin deep," it said. "A breath may destroy it." After that, silence.

Mrs. Morton made a frantic effort to learn the number of the station from which she had been called, but without success. In a rather depressed state of mind, she made her way to the train.

It was half past eight at night when she arrived in Washington, and she at once called up Richard Duvall on the telephone.

To her disappointment, she learned that he was out, and was not expected back until late. There was nothing to do but wait until morning. She retired to her room, full of hope that the following day would bring an end to her fears.

Immediately after breakfast she called again, and this time was more successful. Duvall himself answered the telephone.

"I am Mrs. Morton, from New York," she said, eagerly. "I would like to come out and see you."

"What do you wish to see me about?" the detective inquired.

"It is a personal matter. I will explain when I arrive. I prefer not to do so over the telephone. I have a letter to you from Mr. Stapleton."

"Mr. John Stapleton, the banker?"

"Yes."

"Come, then, by all means, at any hour that suits you. Mr. Stapleton is one of my best friends."

Mrs. Morton hung up the receiver, after assuring him that she would start at once. Then she went out and engaging an automobile, set out for Duvall's place.

CHAPTER III.

Richard Duvall and his wife, Grace, lingered rather later than usual over their breakfast that morning.

It was a warm and brilliant day in May, and the blossoming beauty of the spring filled them both with a delightful sense of well-being.

Duvall, however, seemed a trifle restless, and Grace observed it.

"What's the matter, Richard?" she asked.

"Oh, nothing." Her husband picked up the morning paper. "They are still looking for the woman in the Marsden case, I see," he remarked.

"Do you know, my dear," Grace said, "I sometimes think that you made a mistake in coming down here to the country to live. Your heart is really in New York, and every time there is a murder case, or a bank robbery, or a kidnapping up there, you are restless as a hen on a hot griddle until the mystery is solved. Why don't you take up your professional work again?"

Duvall laid down his paper and regarded his wife with a look of surprise.

"Because, Grace," he said, "you especially asked me, after that affair of the missing suffragette, to finally give up my detective work and content myself with a quiet existence here on the farm. You said, on account of the boy, that I ought not to take such risks."

"Well—suppose I did. You agreed with me, didn't you?"

"Yes—I guess so." Duvall once more picked up the newspaper. "But, naturally, I can't help feeling a certain interest in any striking and novel case that I may read about."

"And I haven't a doubt," laughed Grace, "that you wish that you were back in harness again a dozen times a day. Come now—'fess up. Don't you?"

"Sometimes" granted her husband, with a smile. "You know I loved my work. It always seemed to take me out of th dull routine of existence, and give be a new feeling of interest. I shouldn't mind if I had a novel and interesting case to work on right now."

"Would you take one, if it were offered to you," asked Grace quickly.

"No, I guess not. I haven't forgotten my promise."

"Well, I've decided to release you from that, Richard. I really think you need a little mental exercise and diversion. All play and no work, you know——" She began to arrange the dogwood blossoms she had gathered before breakfast, in a big vase on the table.

Duvall laughed.

"I'm getting along very well," he said. "Don't forget I'm expecting to have that corner lot planted in potatoes to-day." He rose, and coming over to his wife playfully pinched her cheek. "What's the matter, dear?" he asked. "Are you pining for a little trip to New York yourself. We don't need a murder mystery to make that possible, you know."

Grace shook her head. As she did so, the telephone bell in the hall began to ring. "That may be your murder mystery, now," she said with a laugh.

"More likely the Clarks asking us over to dinner this evening," he returned, as he made his way into the hall.

Grace continued to arrange her flowers. Presently Duvall re-entered the room. There was a curious smile upon his face.

"Well, Grace remarked, glancing up. Which was it? The murder case or the Clarks?"

"Neither. A mysterious woman, this time, saying that she must see you at once. I told her to come on out."

"Ah! This is serious," his wife laughed. "A mysterious woman! I suppose I ought to be jealous. Didn't she say what she wanted with you?"

"No. But we'll know soon enough. She'll be here at half past nine. Suppose we go and take a look at those Airedale pups." Together they crossed the veranda and made their way towards the barn.

Richard Duvall had changed but little since the days when he had served on the staff of Monsieur Lefevre, the Prefect of Police of Paris, and had taken part in the stirring adventures of the Million Francs, the Ivory Snuff Box and the Changing Lights. The same delightful spirit of camaraderie existed between his wife Grace and himself, a spirit that had enabled them together to solve some of the most exciting mysteries in the annals of the French detective service. It had been nearly two years now since the affair of the Mysterious Goddess, the last case in which Duval had been concerned, and he was beginning to feel that he would welcome with outstretched arms a chance to make use once more of his exceptional talents as an investigator of crime. Hence he had received Mrs. Morton's telephone call with more than ordinary interest.

The later had told him nothing of her reasons for interviewing him, contenting herself with the bare statement that she had a letter to him from Mr. Stapleton. This, however, had been enough to set Duvall's nerves to tingling and to cause him to conclude that the mysterious woman who desired to interview him in such a hurry came on no ordinary business. Hence he waited with some impatience for the arrival of half past nine.

A few moments after the half hour, a large automobile swept up the drive and Duvall with a nod to his wife, went back to the house to receive his guest. She was waiting in the library when he entered.

"I am Mrs. Morton of New York," his caller began, handing him Mr. Stapleton's letter.

Duvall read it, but it told him little.

"Mr. Stapleton informs me," he said, looking at his visitor, "that you are in some difficulty or other, and asks that if I can possibly do so, I try to help you out of it. Did he not also say that I have for some time past given up the active practice of my profession?"

Mrs. Morton nodded, then bent eagerly forward.

"Yes, Mr. Duvall, he told me that. But he also said that when you heard the circumstances you might be persuaded to assist me. I am in very deep trouble, and I fear that there is not a moment to be lost."

"What is the nature of your difficulty, madam?" Duvall asked.

"It—it concerns my daughter. I am the mother of Ruth Morton." She made this announcement as though she fully expected Duvall to realize its significance at once, but the latter's face remained quite blank.

"Yes," he replied, vaguely. "And who is Ruth Morton?"

Mrs. Morton looked at him in pained surprise. The thought that anyone could possibly be ignorant of her daughter's fame and success seemed unbelievable to her. Was not Ruth's name a household word among moving picture "fans" from coast to coast? "Why—Ruth Morton—the motion picture star," she replied. "Surely you must have heard of her."

Duvall smiled but shook his head.

"I never go to motion pictures," he said. "But that is of no importance. What has happened to your daughter?"

"Nothing. At least I hope not—yet. It is what may happen to her that frightens me so." She took the two threatening letters from her hand bag and gave them to the detective. "These came yesterday," she said simply.

Duvall took the letters and proceeded to read them with the utmost care. When he looked up his eyes were sparkling with interest.

"The first letter, I observe," he said, "was mailed night before last, at half past six, at the general post office. How was the other letter delivered?"

"I do not know. I found it yesterday afternoon upon the floor in my daughter's bedroom, an hour or more after she had left the house. She has not seen it. I kept all news of it from her, as I did not wish her to be frightened."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Tom Gallagher's Information

By EDITH V. ROSS

Tom Gallagher's term in state prison was finished. He was given some money for present use and started down the street. Tom had nowhere to go and there seemed to be no use looking for a job. That day of making a living by honest work had passed. He had tried work and had tried housebreaking. Several terms at hard labor in prison had led him to prefer hard labor in the open. But if he could get a job—which was not likely without a recommendation, which he did not possess—it wouldn't be long before some one who knew him for what he was would come along and give him away.

He stopped at a restaurant and had a meal, after which he bought a cigar and enjoyed the first good smoke in a long while. Then he walked on into the residence part of the city, inspecting premises with a view to finding one of easy access, from which he might extract something which he might exchange for funds against the time when his meager purse should again need replenishment.

Coming to a fine residence that stood in a lot so large that there were no other houses near it, he stopped and looked it over carefully. There was an arbor for grapes from which a second story window might be reached, and most of the windows on the main floor were not so high but that they could be reached from the ground.

With a view to looking for a weak spot he entered the premises and went round to the rear. Through a window he saw a woman washing dishes. She saw him, too, and to divert suspicion he knocked at the kitchen door and asked if that was Mr. Smith's house. He was taken all aback when the woman said that it was.

"Mr. Jacob Smith?"

The woman replied in the affirmative.

"Mr. Jacob Brown Smith?"

"Yes, Mr. Jacob Brown Smith lives here. Do you wish to see him?"

Tom, not having sufficient wit to extricate himself from such a hole, stood looking at the woman shamefacedly and without reply.

"You don't want to see the owner of the house at all. You are reconnoitering with a view to breaking in to carry off valuables. I saw you sizing up the chances of an entry from the arbor and giving a professional glance at the second story rear window. You ought to know that the safest way for a job like that is to take a servant in and have the whole thing opened up to you."

"Are you in the biz?" asked Tom.

"I know all about the craft and can tell one of them on sight. I'm tired of taking risks and will never take another unless I'm cocksure that there's no chance of my getting caught, and the pay must be big."

"What luck!" exclaimed Tom. "I never thought to find a helper in here. You just put me on to the game and you can make your own terms as to the divvy."

The woman stood looking at Tom with an eye that puzzled him. Then she said:

"I reckon I'll trust you. I've had a lot of experience with our kind, and if a person has any good in him at all I can tell it. You won't give me away."

It was arranged between the two that Tom should come to the house that night at 12. He was to find a kitchen window unlocked, through which he might expect an entrance. A back staircase would lead him to a safe built in the wall and he would find the key under a rug near by. He was to take the silver and any cash he might find in the safe and go out with it as he came in. Having turned the swag into cash, he was to meet the woman that day week at the northwest corner of the city park and deliver two-thirds of the profit. Tom was surprised at being so largely trusted, but this didn't trouble him a bit.

At the appointed hour he appeared at the window and found it unlocked, entered, went up the back staircase, found the key of the safe under the rug and was opening the safe door when suddenly every electric light blazed out at once. Feeling a hand on his shoulder, he turned and looked into the face of a policeman. At the same time he heard a rustle of a dress and the woman with whom he had made the deal appeared on the scene in evening costume.

"Shall I take him away, ma'am?"

"Wait a minute; I wish to speak to him." Then, turning to Tom, she added:

"When you called this afternoon, both my servants having left me, I was doing my own work. I spend a good deal of my time in the work of rescuing prisoners and recognized you as one I had seen behind bars. You are a better man than you look to be. If you were not handicapped how would you like to earn an honest living?"

"I'd like it mighty well, ma'am," gasped Tom.

A lengthy conversation followed, at the end of which the police were dismissed and Tom was to report the next morning for duty as chauffeur. He appeared, as agreed, and did not leave his employer's service for a number of years. When he did he took with him her recommendation for honesty and faithfulness.

The lady was celebrated as a worker with prisoners and possessed a wonderful influence over them.

Pains Over Left Kidney

Warned This Captain That the Kidneys Were Responsible for His Pains and Aches—Freed of Pain and Suffering by a Well-known Medicine.

Hereford, Que., Nov. 20.—Captain Peabody is well known all through this section, and his cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has aroused great interest in this great medicine.

The Captain had been suffering for a long time, and could never get any treatment to afford lasting relief until he began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Captain A. Peabody, Hereford, Que., writes: "For years I suffered from indigestion, rheumatism and neuralgia. Lightninglike pains would shoot all through my body, and I also had severe pains over my left kidney and through the hips. I doctored for years and tried all kinds of remedies, but the only result was money spent without relief. At last I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac of his Kidney-Liver Pills and decided to try them. One box made such a change that I sent for five more. Before I had finished them the pains in my kidneys and hips had disappeared, and I was clear of those sharp, shooting pains through the body. I still take these Pills occasionally to keep my bowels regular, and would not be without them, as I have them to thank for my cure.

"I can also speak highly of Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder and Linseed and Turpentine. The former cured me of catarrh in the head, which caused frequent headaches. I am completely cured of this now, and breathe freely as when a boy. The Linseed and Turpentine proved of great benefit for a bad cough which bothered me continually for three winters. Last winter I took one bottle of the Linseed and Turpentine, and have not been bothered with a cough since."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Don't be talked into accepting anything said to be just as good. Imitations and substitutes only disappoint.

TURNED THE TABLES.

Two Incidents in the Careers of an American and a Belgian.

More than ten years before Belgian relief was ever thought of a young American mining engineer who was in charge of important mining properties in China received a visit early one morning from a burly Belgian. The Belgian brusquely informed the young American that he had come to take charge of the properties. The American had received no official notice of the change in management, and he did not much like the manners of the Belgian, but he quietly accepted his new status. He explained to the Belgian that two heads often are better than one and offered to help manage the properties jointly. The Belgian accepted.

The two men worked together for about six months. Then one day the burly Belgian lost his temper and with it his more experienced fellow manager, for the young American promptly resigned his position and left the employ of the company.

The name of the young American was Herbert Clark Hoover.

Now observe how Nemesis pursues proud mortals! In October, 1914, this same Belgian, at the suggestion of the American ambassador in London, called on an American who, Mr. Page said, was the logical man to head the work of relieving starving Belgium. The American was Herbert C. Hoover.

THE HUMAN SKIN.

Why White Races Invariably Die Out Quickly in the Tropics.

One reason—and a most important one—why white races are unable to colonize the tropics, dying out inevitably in a generation or two, is that they have not enough sweat glands. The sweat glands are the refrigerating apparatus of the body. They draw water from the blood and pour it out upon the surface of the skin, where its evaporation keeps the temperature of the body down. That is why we make a person with a fever perspire profusely—it lowers the temperature. In drawing off the water the sweat glands draw off also many impurities from the blood, but their most important function is the regulation of the temperature of the blood.

Scientific investigation shows that for every square centimeter of the skin area on the fingers white Americans have 558 sweat glands, American negroes have 597, Filipinos 653, Moros 684, adult Negrito 709, Hindus 738 and Negrito youths and children 950.

As all the sweat glands are fully formed at birth and their number remains the same throughout life, the greater number found among the Negrito youths is no doubt due to a corresponding difference in size of individuals. As the body grows the skin area increases and the glands become more dispersed.

It is evident that 709 sweat glands will pour out nearly 27 per cent more perspiration than will 558. Therefore there will be 27 per cent more evaporation, and so the Negrito is comparatively comfortable in a tropical heat that the white man finds almost unbearable.

Order of the Thistle.

The Order of the Thistle claims a very ancient date for its foundation—even as far back as A.D. 809—but it was either restored or instituted by James the Fifth, 1540, when he with twelve knights completed the roll. St. Andrew is its patron saint, and the color of the distinctive ribbon is dark green.

GOT WET FEET TOOK AWFUL COLD

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezekiel Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PUBLIC OPINION

New York Herald: Do these women believe the franchise is the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, and that as soon as they have it their eyes will be opened and they will have wisdom? If so the belief evidently is fallacious, for women of New York State, who now have the ballot, have joined the pickets in Washington. If these women must camp on some one's doorstep let them camp on the doorsteps of the governors of those states which have not extended the franchise to them.

New York World: Until a government is erected on stable foundations that will have the ability to command obedience by force or otherwise and to restore domestic peace, who can sign a treaty of peace with Russia's' enemies in Russia's name? A Trotzky-Lenine peace would be worth less to Germany than a scrap of paper. . . . Bolshevikist clamor for immediate peace is largely inspired by Berlin's agents, but Berlin knows better than to try to act upon it.

New York Journal of Commerce: Having the cost of the war to make up may help to keep up the habit and redeem the nation from the inclination to be either spendthrift or thriftless. There is no other nation that has the opportunity before it for using the kind of strength that this implies, a strength which can best be expended in achieving those victories of peace that are "no less renowned than war."

New York Commercial: For us who view the Russian situation from afar the menace of Russian Socialists, now established in New York city, comes home to us. If the foreign-born voters who supported Morris Hillquit had their way the United States would be another faithless and disorganized Russia. They are true Bolsheviki and must be recognized as enemies of society and traitors to the lands of their birth and their adoption.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Let it not be forgotten that all the terrors of strife, all the deaths and injuries that have resulted from warfare were willed by the German Emperor and his mad advisers. Military ambition and an insatiate appetite for world power caused this gigantic conflict. The ambition and the appetite remain and will continue to remain unless destroyed.

Hamilton, Can., Herald: One of the most widely circulated war pamphlets in Germany is one in which it is declared that the indemnity to be wrung from the United States is 348,000,000,000 marks—about eighty-seven thousand millions of dollars. To win the war is going to cost our neighbours a great deal of money, but not so much as defeat would cost.

New York Journal of Commerce.—It is the duty of the citizen, therefore, to safeguard against shortage by productive work on the one hand and economy on the other, and to safeguard against abnormal prices by refraining from needless or luxurious purchases whether he makes them by the use of cash or through the offer of bonds or other representatives of value.

New York Times.—The Times will not pretend to rejoice at the result to which it made no effort to contribute. May he experiment, if it is to be made, disappoint the fears and predictions of its adversaries. May the women justify by their behaviour their fitness for the ballot. And, all division removed, may the feminists give henceforth the full measure of their strength and energy to the cause of freedom and democracy!

Philadelphia Record.—The blundering Germans made an attack upon Russia just at the moment when Russia would have ceased to be a belligerent if Germany had let it alone. And they made a great drive at Italy at the psychological moment when they hoped for more peace pressure from the Pope, and the result is that the Vatican allows it to be known that the present is not an opportune moment for renewing peace negotiations and nothing more will be done in that line at present. The Germans seem hopelessly incapable of understanding anything except blows.

Buffalo Commercial.—The removal of doubts and suspicions and the mutual declaration of the new doctrine as to the Far East would be enough to make the visit of the Japanese commission to the United States historic and memorable, but it accomplished a further purpose of special interest to the world at this time as expressing Japan's earnest desire to co-operate with America in waging war against the common enemy.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

WAIST DEEP MUD CAN'T STOP BRITISH ADVANCE IN FLANDERS—Oceans of mud where once were roads, can't stop the great British drive in Flanders. They may combine to slow up the steady advance a gainst the German trenches, but they will have to get a great deal worse to compel a definite halt. This British official photograph shows how great are the difficulties that the British forces have to encounter. Supply waggons are advancing through mud in which the horses sink knee-deep and then some carrying munitions over the shell-pocked ground to the big guns at the front.

Caterpillars' Strong Jaws.

The damage done by caterpillars in certain parts of England draws attention to the fact that they go about in regular armies, congregating in such numbers that they have been known to stop railway traffic by making the line too slippery for the wheels of the locomotives to grip. They can strip the pasture from hundreds of acres, and all the leaves from the trees of big forests.

Both butterflies and moths always lay their eggs on the particular plant on which the caterpillars like to feed when first hatched. Some lay them on the ground among the grasses, others on the tips of the leaves of certain trees, whilst others fasten them in little rings round the tree twigs.

The caterpillar's powerful jaws enable it to eat the leaves upon which it finds itself when hatched out at an alarming rate.

When large numbers of caterpillars are occupied in feeding, the munching noise they make with their jaws can be heard as distinctly as the rustling of paper.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyses the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

Extinguishing Burning Liquids.

Many people have often wondered why it is permissible to use water for extinguishing some burning liquids and not for others. For instance, water is effective for extinguishing burning alcohol or acetone, but quite the reverse in the case of gasoline or oil. The difference lies in the fact that water mixes readily with the first two liquids, while gasoline and oil do not mix with water, but float upon its surface and are thus scattered over a large area.

If the thief lacks opportunity he thinks himself honest.

PAGANISM IN GERMANY.

Henotheism Influences the People and Results in Cruelty.

Nominally Christian, Germany has been really given over for decades to the worship of strange primeval deities, headed by a chief deity definitely referred to as a "German God." By many identified with the Christian's conception of God, at the same time there has been little in common between the German God and the God of the Christian communions, since everything in Germany has been contemplated by developing picturesquely the idea of the old deities of the woods and the sky, who belonged to the Pagan civilization that preceded the conversion of the savage tribes to Roman Christianity as the real deities of the chosen nation.

Along with this curious cult went a devotion in art and literature to the animal and the powerful that was almost beyond belief. Numerous straws show which way the wind blew. Just as the cynical erection of two ugly churches in Berlin, one French and the other German, by Frederick the Great, in which he rather sniffed in a way that Voltaire might have taught him as if crying "a plague on both your houses" while seemingly a concession to religion, was far from it, both being in the original form almost unusable as houses of worship, so the cult of the Pagan "God of Germany" has been carried on by the statesmen, military clique, poets and writers, until there is no region or town or village that has not some suggestion of the cult as a feature.

The very culmination of it is indicated in Germany by the huge Leipsic battle monument in which the human figures are of a superhuman type, monstrous and revolting, and particularly, by the Bismarck statutes and towers that are features of their hilltop landscapes all over Germany. The latter, built in a primitive style, suggesting altars to Wotan and Thor, being used on Bismarck's birthday as huge fire towers, as if the devotees were invoking Baal. And they drive home on the merest child, the idea that what Bismarck stood for in his need of faith and his lack of any public morals is quite the correct thing, and to be admired and to be followed by every one.

Not only that, but the very cult of the Wagner operas and the Nibelungen legends have also been adroitly used to convey to the German people the idea that they are to-day themselves the incarnation of these old heroes and demigods. And nothing is more common in mural decorations than the effort to identify Germans with the Brunnhildes and Siegfrieds of the past, and many a child in Germany might be letter-perfect as to Wotan and Alberish while possibly somewhat hazy as to what happened in the manger at Nazareth.

What, indeed, Germany built up in this state religion is known as henotheism. But to find it in its original rated form one must go back to the days of the Babylonians and the Assyrians who exalted the tribal deities as national gods and believed they were all powerful, also becoming convinced that anything they might do in wartime had the approval of these tribal gods down to acts of the most fiendish and heinous inhumanity, which they didn't hesitate to leave on record in cuneiform or carved on imperishable stone.

Following their example Germany has exalted its own tribal deity and in this war has shown the same callousness toward the suffering of others as history has recorded of a Sargon or a Sennacherib.

No Wonder He Wouldn't Sell.

Captain Amundsen told an amusing story of one of his arctic expeditions. Several of his dogs having died, Captain Amundsen asked one of the natives in his best Eskimo if he would sell him a few dogs. To his surprise the request was promptly refused. The explorer and the Eskimo had a long argument, the explorer pointing out that he must get dogs somehow and the Eskimo replying that they never sold them.

"Nonsense!" Captain Amundsen exclaimed. "I have often bought dogs."

The Eskimos seemed immensely astonished, and at the end of another argument Captain Amundsen discovered that instead of using the Eskimo word for "dogs" he had been asking the man to sell him some "children."

His Decision.

"I have been in your train a long time now."

"I can't marry you," said the girl.

"All right. Here's where I change cars then."

What Started the Jar.

Wife—I wonder how you can look me in the face. Husband—Oh, a man can get used to anything

Canada's Limbless Heroes

Antoinette Donnelley, of the Chicago Tribune, visited many hospitals and war relief centres during her recent visit to her native Canada. Describing what she saw in Toronto, she says:

The North Toronto Military Hospital receives all armless and legless men returned to Canada. There are at present 500 soldier patients there. There are five other large military hospitals in and around Toronto. This institution is attracting wide-spread attention because of the remarkable surgical work being done. A number of medical and surgical men from the States have been over studying conditions. The hospital has been in operation for about six months, and is under the direction of medical men who have been serving in base hospitals at the front since the beginning of the war.

The sight of so many missing arms and legs and the dearly efforts at manipulating the substitute ones, is distressing, to say the least. But the distress is written on the visitor's face and not on the soldier's. The cheerfulness of these men is simply unbelievable. Sympathy is the unkindest thing you have to offer them.

THEY DON'T WANT SYMPATHY.

"Aw, we don't need sympathy, one young chap said, struggling bravely with the job of "breakingin" his new leg. "My Peggy," the nickname given their artificial legs, "is coming along fine, and she'll soon be as good as the one I left overseas."

"Why I might have been blinded, or shell-shocked, or got tuberculosis."

"Bill, here," pointing to his Highland companion with an empty sleeve which he was twirling as fast as he could make it go, and an upturned trouser leg, "he tried to hog the whole bloomin' shell."

"Come on over and look at our 'crocks,' (another pet name for the artificial legs) one hollered across the hall to a chum. Later when our tour of inspection led us into the limb factory operated in connection with the hospital, we found these two chaps watching operations on the limbs for which they had been measured. The great shed of logs at the end of the factory sent a foreboding chill through me. How many more did they expect to have to provide for?

I saw these artificial arms and legs in the making from the short willow logs to the finished product with its tan coat of flesh colored enamel. The innovation of an improvement on the Bowley of English output is claimed for the one manufactured here and called the Canadian government leg. Its improvement over the one of English make is an extra joint at the ankle, another above the toes.

A suggestion of English humor hangs with the sign at the entrance to each ward:

"Ladies will kindly arrange to stay out after 9 p.m."

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied In Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrile are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every pair passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

JUST BY KNITTING

In past days it gave us pleasure watching, everywhere we'd go, all the women, whether standing, whether sitting, at the concert, in the lecture hall, and even at the show. Everyone was busy with her bit of knitting. This good work was undertaken by the women of all ages, cheerfully and with a patience unremitting. Soldiers' hosiery one saw each day in all its different stages. For the women always took along their knitting.

She would purl two, she would plain two, and she made non-knitters feel angry with envy as they watched her fingers flitting. Oft her wrestlings were pathetic with the most fatiguing heel; but she conquered it and bravely kept on knitting. Now, we wonder what's the matter that this patriotic work seems to languish; for the women, there's none fitter. 'Tis unthinkable that any of our women folks would shirk; but this fact remains—we seldom see a knitter.

Yet this awful war still rages, and each day the need increases,
As our lads against the foe their strength are putting,
With an energy and purpose that not for one instant ceases,
Dare we women cease to do our bit by knitting
Many a hero marching forward, though his feet are bruised and bleeding,
And he never has the slightest thought of quitting;
With courage that is God-like, pain and weariness unheeding,
We can strengthen for the conflict, just by knitting.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION

From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE.

Historic City Has Lost Importance in Recent Years.

Aix-la-Chapelle is, in many ways, one of the most historic cities in Europe. It figures prominently in history, not only as the coronation place of German kings and emperors, but as the scene of several notable congresses; whilst it has given its name to three important treaties. It was famous in the time of the Romans, to whom it was known as Aquisgranum, and, centuries later, in the time of the Carlovingian kings, it was a place of no little importance. As early as A. D. 765, King Pippin the Short, the father of Charlemagne, had a palace there; whilst it was there, in all probability, that Charlemagne himself was born. It was to Charlemagne that Aix-la-Chapelle owed its rise to greatness. Between the years 777 and 786, he pulled down the palace which his father had built there, and built another far more magnificent, whilst he raised the town to the rank of the second city in the Empire.

Charlemagne was, of course, a patron of music and learning, welcoming such scholars as Eginhard, Alcuin, and Warnefried to his court, and Aix-la-Chapelle quickly became a center of western culture. His son, Louis the Pious, was crowned there, and thence onwards, until the time of Ferdinand I, in 1531, the coronation of Frankish and German kings always took place at Aix-la-Chapelle, no fewer than thirty-two emperors and kings being crowned within the city. Nothwithstanding its importance, especially from a political point of view, it was not until the twelfth century that Aix-la-Chapelle was surrounded, after the manner of the times, with walls. It had been ravaged by Northmen, in their raids up the Rhine, in 851, and again in 882, but it was apparently allowed to take its chance with other open towns, until about 1166, when the Emperor Frederick I. granted its first important civic rights, and ordered that the city should be surrounded with walls. Later on, it became a free city of the Holy Roman Empire, and, having grown strong in power and influence, took a conspicuous part in the great happenings of the fourteenth century, being a prominent factor in the league which, at that time, kept the peace between the Meuse and the Rhine.

The next notable event in its history was the inevitable insurrection of the guilds, which here, as in Cologne, some forty miles away, had steadily grown stronger and better able, to secure rights and privileges from a reluctant, not to say wholly antagonistic, authority. The revolt broke out in 1450, and ultimately resulted in the admission of the guilds to a share in the municipal government. It was at about this time that Aix-la-Chapelle reached the zenith of its power. In the following century it began to decline in importance and prosperity. For some time past, the German kings had been looking at it rather askance. It lay perilously near to the French frontier, altogether too near, in fact, to be safe; whilst it was too far away from the center of Germany to be convenient as a capital. So it came about that Maximilian I. had the courage of his convictions, and broke with seven centuries of tradition by having himself crowned at Frankfort-on-Main, a precedent which was followed till the extinction of the Empire, in 1806.

Aix-la-Chapelle lost much in dignity by the change, and then the Reformation dealt hardly with the city. In 1580 it accepted Protestantism, and, as a consequence, there fell upon it the ban of the Empire, a ban which was carried out by Ernest of Bavaria, the Archbishop-Elector of Cologne, in 1583. The Archbishop brought back the city "into the fold of the church," but, within a few years, it had forsaken the fold again, only, however, to be once more brought back by Spinola's Spanish troops. The Treaty of Luneville, in 1801, provided for the incorporation of Aix-la-Chapelle with France, as chief town of the Department of the Roer, but the Congress of Vienna, in 1814, assigned it to Prussia.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear

(Helps to Beauty)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms, after a single treatment with delatone. To remove the hairs, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone.

A Runaway Star.

The star with the greatest proper motion so far discovered is one in Ophiuchus, of magnitude 9.5, which is drifting northward ten seconds a year—perhaps some hundreds of miles each second of time, says an exchange. This was lately revealed to Professor Barnard on a comparison, with the blink microscope, of a recent stellar photograph and one made eighteen years ago. An eighth magnitude star in the southern heavens has a proper motion of 8.7 seconds, and the seventh magnitude Groombridge, 1830, of Ursa Major, the original "runaway star," has a yearly drift of seven seconds.

A FAITHFUL HORSE.

Paul Revere's Sturdy Steed Fairly Entitled to Fame.

Paul Revere's name was made immortal when he rode from Boston to Lexington and Concord, warning the patriots along the way of the British approach, and his fame has been securely enshrined in the hearts of all Americans.

Historians have honored themselves in honoring him. Poets have found inspiration in praising him. He is an idol of childhood, an example in the prime of manhood and a soothing memory of old age.

How few characters loom up like great peaks above the mountain ranges of time!

And Paul Revere was one of these. He was one of the precious few great enough to grasp an opportunity to do an incalculable good to mankind.

But while we give deserved glory to Paul Revere let us no longer forget that there was another hero in that wild midnight ride.

There was the horse.

"Any other horse might have done as well," you think? Well, so might any other man have done as well perhaps. So might we flippantly disparage any hero.

But the fact remains that it was Paul Revere and Paul Revere's horse that did it. And the harder work fell on the horse. But for the true horse's faithfulness Paul Revere would have been a failure

Learn History by Novels.

In the Woman's Home Companion Anne Bryan McCall says:

"One of the pleasantest ways I know of making varied travels into history is by reading historical novels. I remember that when I was twelve years old I read Harrison Ainsworth's 'Windsor Castle,' and when I was fifteen I read Scott's 'Kenilworth.' When I was sixteen I read Hawthorne's 'Scarlet Letter.' I was not thinking of history at all when I read them. I read them solely for the story. Yet from those three books I learned more of the times of Henry VIII, and Queen Elizabeth and of early American days, I do believe, than in the many historical chapters covering those times that I have read since. Those books made these times live for me, and it was as though I myself were living in them."

Van and Semiramis.

Van is a city of immemorial antiquity, which gave the name to the "Vannic empire" of Assyria, and was supposed to have been founded by the semi-mythical Queen Semiramis. Unless cruelly libeled by the legend she was no better than she ought to have been, which is not surprising if she really was a daughter of the mermaid who ruled the neighboring lake. Van is today famous for the cuneiform inscriptions, indelibly printed on rocks, by which forgotten Van dwellers at once preserved their historical records and provided against future "paper famine."

$4 Saved Two Fingers

The fingers were those of Mr. J. W. Besnard, of 539 Craig St. E., Montreal. He says, —"A falling beam badly smashed my hand. Two fingers were so severely crushed that the doctors said they would have to be amputated. Naturally I didn't want this, so decided to try Zam-Buk first. I applied Zam-Buk daily, and by the time I had used $4 worth, the injury was completely healed. My fingers were saved!"

Pensions for Harems.

There are considerable numbers of Colonial troops serving with the French army, and among these there is a certain proportion of polygamists. Some are Mahommedans, while others profess religions that allow of their adherents keeping a more or less imposing harem.

The question has now arisen in France as to how the widows of black soldiers fallen on the battlefield are to be provided for in the way of pensions.

It appears that they are entitled to a pension, but the French law, which does not wish to give them preferential treatment as compared with white women, is only allowing them the same amount of money as would fall to the wife of an ordinary soldier who lives under the monogamist regime. Thus the four or more legal wives will have each to content herself with the quarter or less of the money that would come to a single wife.

Fierce Fighting at Northern End of The Italian Line

Piave River Defences Still Hold Firm But Italian Press Warns People Not to Be Too Optimistic and Hints of Further Retreat Are Given---Civil Evacuation of Venice Has Been Systematically Carried Out and Art Treasures Have Been Removed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Monday—The enemy is concentrating his attack on the north and very heavy fighting is in progress south of Quera, where large enemy masses are attacking Italian positions on Monte Tenera and Monte Tomba.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME (Official), November 20.—The struggle between the Austro-Germans and Italians on Monte Tomba and Monte Monferera in the mountainous region of Northern Italy, continues. The invading forces were driven back four times when they attempted to take the Italian positions on the Monfenera Spur.

(By Webb Miller.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, November 20.—Censored despatches received to-day from Italian Headquarters pointed out the possible necessity of abandoning the Piave River line in order to complete preparations to assume the offensive. Such a withdrawal would mean the loss of Venice and Treviso. Coincident with this possibly significant precautionary note sounded from headquarters, the Italian press, according to word received here, is urging the public not to become unduly optimistic.

London newspapers to-day followed this same course. So far the Piave line has proved impregnable to the Austro-German assault. Practically the only gains which the picked enemy forces have been able to make have been in the northern or left wing in the mountains. The river line itself has apparently resisted all efforts at a breach. One reason for the note of caution against undue optimism was very patently the importance attached in some quarters to yesterday's official report that the Italians had assumed the offensive in the Asiago region.

(By John H. Hearley.)

ROME, November 20.—Pope Benedict has extracted from Germany and Austria the promise not to damage Venice nor remove her priceless art treasures, if the city is evacuated before an advancing Teutonic army, according to a well authenticated report to-day.

While all of Rome mourned in dread of confirmation of the death of Gabriele D'Annunzio, her poet aviator, it was reported to-day that he had left his squadron, on leave, to bid farewell, to Venice's art treasures and had not been lost on a flight as was feared. Despatches from Venice to-day reported heartrending scenes as the civil evacuation was completed. Every man in the city between 18 and 45 who is able to handle a gun, has already left to fight back the Teutonic hordes. Practically all the women and children have been removed. A few old men, weeping and insisting their right to remain in the city are all that remain. Venice's majestic lagoons and canals were all but deserted, her great palaces of other days of grandeur were starkly staring with the empty spaces from which precious art works had been snatched.

Much of Venice's irreplacable art treasures are in the form of frescoes and sculpture firmly fixed in buildings. They cannot be removed. All the paintings and statues that are removable have already been transferred out of the city. The Minister of Marine left Rome to-day for an inspection tour of the defences of the city. The fortresses guarding the city from the Adriatic have been strengthened in anticipation of a possible attempt by enemy warships to force their way to Venice.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), November 20.—Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire troops made a successful raid last night east of Fampoux. In the region of Wytschaete a raiding party of Germans was driven off by our fire.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), November 20.—The Germans made an attack last night on a front of one kilometre in the Verdun sector north of Caurieres Wood. They succeeded in penetrating French advanced positions over a small extent of this front, but subsequentlyy were expelled for the most part.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 20.—No headquarters communique was issued to-day says an official wireless message from Petrograd.

ATTEMPT TO RESTORE MONARCHY IN RUSSIA

Grand Duke Nicholas Has Been Placed in Command of General Kaledine's Cossacks—Is to Be Proclaimed Regent

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, November 20.—The Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch has been put in command of General Kaledine's Cossacks in a plan proposed by that General to restore the monarchy in Russia, according to a despatch from Vienna via Geneva, printed to-day in L'Information.

The Grand Duke, it was declared, had arrived at Kaledine's headquarters at Kharkoff and offered his services. The general "gave the Grand Duke command of the Cossacks and promised to restore the monarchy and proclaim the Grand Duke regent," according to the Vienna version. Grand Duke Nicholas is a cousin to the former Czar, by whom he was originally appointed commander-in-chief of the Russian armies. He is a stern disciplinarian, and known as one of the most brilliant cavalry leaders in Europe. The Grand Duke was demoted from his post of commander-in-chief on September 8, 1916, and made viceroy of the Caucasus. He was reported arrested June 2, 1917, after the Royalist riots at Tiflis.

IMPORTANT NOTICE FOR G.W.V.A. MEN

All members of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, who have been bookkeepers, accountants, or bank clerks are asked to report to President Harvey Staunton, at the Barrie Building to-night at 7 o'clock, when they will hear of something to their advantage. Comrades Perks and Hayes are particularly asked to be present.

G.W.V.A. DISCLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY FOR DISTURBING MEETINGS

Matter Discussed at the Regular Semi-monthly Gathering Last Night and Veterans Wish Public to Understand That Heckling is Not Authorized or Approved by Association

THE NEW CLUB ROOMS

The Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association wish the public to understand that they as a body are not responsible for the actions of individual members at public meetings, and that if speakers are heckled by Veterans, the latter are acting on their own responsibility and without the authority or approval of the executive of their Association.

This matter was brought up at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the G.W.V.A. in the recreation room of the armouries last night by Comrade J. A. McNabb, who pointed out that there was a good deal of adverse criticism in the press and throughout the city as the result of incidents happening at public meetings in Victoria Hall on Friday and Saturday nights. The trouble was chiefly caused, in Comrade McNabb's opinion by returned soldiers who were not members of the G.W.V.A., but as they were former members of the C.E.F., the Veterans' Association would be blamed for their action unless they gave an intimation to the public that such conduct was not authorized by the G.W.V.A. It would do the Association no good to be accused of shouting down speakers who were endeavouring to do what they thought was the proper thing in the present crisis. Such tactics reflected unfavourably upon every member of the G.W.V.A. and should not be condoned.

While the chief offenders were not members of the Association, Comrade McNabb thought that all members should be advised that in interrupting speakers they were doing so without any authority from their executive.

"Men who are not members of our Association, were mostly to blame on Friday night," remarked President Staunton. "Some of those who were making the most noise in the gallery were not even returned soldiers."

The members present concurred in Comrade McNabb's remarks and a resolution moved by the latter authorizing the Executive committee to prepare a statement for the press was carried.

It was pointed out that the members had their rights as private citizens, and if they chose to heckle a speaker they could not very well be stopped, although any action of that sort would not have the approval of the Association or be authorized by them.

The New Club Rooms.

Comrade George Coleman presented the report of the committee which had

Pte. W. S. Condiff, Infantry, Millbrook.

PTE. JOHN W. DEVINE.

Pte. John W. Devine, who enlisted in Peterborough in October, 1915, with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion is officially reported killed in action in the recent fighting. Pte. Devine went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, and went to France in one of the first drafts from the Battalion, going to the 5th C.M.R.

PTE. ROLAND TURNER.

Another name added to-day to the long list of 93rd Battalion men who have laid down their lives in France is that of Pte. Roland Turner, who is to-day officially reported killed in action, presumably in the fighting around Passchendaele. Pte. Turner was a young farmer living near Elizabethville, and came to Peterborough in October, 1915, to enlist in the 93rd Battalion. He went to France a year ago last September in a draft from the 93rd Battalion to the 5th C.M.R.

PTE. WILLIAM FRANKLIN GIRVIN.

An official message from Ottawa to Mrs. Wm. Girvin conveyed the tragic news that Pte. William Franklin Girvin, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported killed in action. Pte Girvin enlisted outside of this military district.

PTE. FRED COOPER.

Pte. Fred Cooper, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here early in 1916 and went overseas with the Peterborough County unit, is officially reported missing, according to a message received by his wife to-day. Pte. Cooper was employed at the Henry Hope factory before enlisting for overseas. He had been in France for some time.

PTE. JOHN SWEENY.

According to official word received to-day from Ottawa, Pte. John Sweeny, a former member of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, is reported wounded and missing since October 31. Pte. Sweeny, an old resident of Peterborough, went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the Front. His son, Pte. Herbert Sweeny, who enlisted here with the 39th Battalion, was killed in action in the spring of last year. Pte. John Sweeny's wife and family reside in Peterborough.

Pte. John Huxley, a Peterborough man, who enlisted in Lindsay with the 109th Battalion, and was transferred to a Forestry Battalion, has arrived home after being on duty in Scotland for some time. A number of Peterborough soldiers have, arrived in Canada on their way home; according to Pte. Huxley, including Ptes. Charles Cheverell and Wm. Evans of the 93rd Battalion, the latter gassed; Pte. Chas. Mongour of the 2nd Battalion, wounded; Ptes. O'Hara, wounded, and Pte. Drain, wounded. Bandmaster Heffernan of the 109th Band, Lindsay, was in the party.

A Direct Statement of The War Aims of The Allies

That is the Big Objective Behind President Wilson's Advocacy of the Inter-Allied War Council—World Will Know Just What Allies Are Aiming At.

CARDS ON THE TABLE

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(Copyright 1917, by the United Press)

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A direct and unequivocal statement to the entire world of the Allies' war aims is the big objective behind President Wilson's advocacy of the proposed inter-allied war council. The United Press is able to make this statement on the basis of information of unquestioned authority to-day, as the American Commissioners had their first formal meeting with the British war leaders in Downing street. It is to insure the organization of such a council that the American Commission, headed by Colonel House, is in Europe. It is to insure such a declaration made binding upon all Allies as well as to stiffen the offensive, that the council is desired by the United States.

PRESENT EVERY CLAIM.

America's immediate aim will do to induce every one of the Allied nations to throw every card on the table to state every demand and present every claim of war. From the entire lot will then be selected those which are basic, which are predicated upon broad humanitarianism, which justify the Allies' claim as champions of the rights of small nations, which are aimed at freeing civilization from the menace of militarism, and which are in truth calculated to make the world safe for democracy.

Then the plans and ideas of the American Commission carry the objectives, backed by and endorsed by the entire allied council, will be proclaimed to the end of the world, allied, neutral and enemy, not as a peace movement, but as a war move, a move calculated to democratize the entire Allied war-making machine.

It would be a move to purge the entire Allied coalition of the last tinge of suspicion of safish interest or hope of individual gain for any nation.

WOULD DISARM KAISER.

Such a move, disarming the Kaiser of his argument that the German soldier is fighting a defensive war, is counted on to deal a telling blow to German morale, to give reassurance to neutrals, and to remove from the mind of any Allied soldier any idea that he is risking his life in the furtherance of commercial or political interests of any Allied nation.

War leaders regard any move calculated to solidify and unite the Allies, to define and concentrate their efforts on common objectives, eliminating private or selfish hopes of individual Allied belligerents, as military measures.

Along the same line, it has been urged as of no less necessity, that greater consideration be given to the needs and advantages of further co-operation with some of the minor and less consulted Allies.

The United Press understands there is good reason to believe the statesmen among the Entente Powers are in substantial agreement with President Wilson's suggestion, but opposition, however, may develop among certain groups of financiers because no attempt is made to conceal the fact that such a statement of essential principles as President Wilson desires, may necessitate a whittling down of maximum demands by various countries.

TO LIMIT DEMANDS.

The statesmen who have been guiding the war for more than three years, are quite prepared to limit their demands to these essentials affecting all Allies. It is known, however, that certain great international financial groups prefer to run still further risks in hope of making good, financially and territorially, at the expense of the Central Powers. It is admitted readily here that America is advantageously placed to put through her programme without inconsistency. With Russia definitely out of active fighting, the United States alone of all the Allies is in a position to furnish the man power requisite to continue the war to a successful culmination. It is pointed out that if America is to furnish her full strength, and deliver the full blow of which she is capable, the mind of every one of her fighting men must be made abso-

Will Form Ladies' Anxiliary For G.W.V.A.

There will be a big rally of all ladies interested in the welfare of the Great War Veterans' Association in the City Council Chambers to-night when a Ladies' Auxiliary will be organized. A cordial invitation is extended to the ladies of the city to be present on this important occasion, and as many as possible of the Veterans are urged to be on hand. The meeting will be featured by the presence of the Provincial Secretary Comrade W. E. Turley, of Toronto, whose ability as a speaker is too well known to need more than a passing reference in this article. The meeting will be called at 8 o'clock sharp.

HISTORIC MEETING OF BRITISH AND AMERICAN LEADERS

Officials Gather in the Some Room and Around the Same Table Where Formal Recognition of America's Independence Was Made 134 Years Ago

ARE TAKING STOCK

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Nov. 20. — In the same room and at the same table where one hundred and thirty-four years ago England formally announced her recognition of American independence, a notable assemblage of American and British officials met to-day, planning the world's independence. The American mission, headed by Col. E. M. House, represented the United States to-day. Their British conferees included Prime Minister Lloyd George, Lord Milner, Sir Edward Carson, Gen. Smuts, Lord Chief Justice Reading, Lord Curzon and Chancellor of the Exchequer Andrew Bonar Law. The occasion was America's first formal conference with Britain for the war to make the world safe for democracy.

IN DOWNING STREET.

The meeting was held in Downing street, the official residence of England's premier. The conferees met in the cabinet room, where time has wrought but few changes since the day when England's premier, Lord Lockington, announced his King's acceptance of American independence. Attaches to-day insisted that exactly the same table over which Lord Lockington made this announcement, will be in front of the British and American officials to-day. Officially to-day's meeting is to match up, co-ordinate and consolidate all details of America's war work. The American members of the mission have individually been conferring with the various British officials on the special problems with which they are separately charged. The ground work has therefore, been gone over. To-day's meeting was to re-arrange all that has been developed in these preliminary meetings, to smooth out the whole plan of co-operation into a perfect system of the highest efficiency.

The conference assembled at 11.30. Lord Reading, recently back from a special mission to the United States, presided.

AN HISTORIC GATHERING.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 20. — None of the numerous Allied war councils which have occurred in the past three years have occasioned the same interest as to-day's historic meeting of the British war cabinet and the American war mission for tightening the links that chain the Anglo-American war efforts. The scene is the old residence in Downing street, which has served the prime ministers of many generations as both home and office, and the room is the council chamber where the cabinets meet and where destinies of the Empire have been shaped since the days of the American revolution.

COUNTY COUNCIL ASKED FOR GRANT OF 50c. PER CAPITA

Ten Thousand Dollars is the Amount Alloted to Peterborough County by the Y. M. C. A. Authorities

NOVEMBER SESSION

The November session of the Peterborough County Council opened this afternoon at two o'clock in the County Courthouse.

Warden Maxwell Brown, who presided, dispensed with the usual formality of a "Warden's address."

The meeting opened with the reading of the minutes, after which Mr. A. S. Hopper, Financial Secretary, representing the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, addressed the Council.

"I am representing the men in the trenches," said Mr. Hopper, as he pleaded with the councillors to stand back of the boys and assist in its distribution of necessities through the organisation which he represented. The work this year will cost seventeen hundred and fifty thousand dollars, or more than the amount asked for in Canada by the British Red Cross Society. Mr. Hopper reviewed the scope of the work being carried on by the assistance on the battle fronts.

In conclusion, Mr. Hopper said that the amount allotted to Peterborough County was ten thousand dollars, which figured out at the rate of fifty cents per capita.

It was moved by Mr. Walsh, and seconded by Mr. Eason, that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee.

The following members of the Council were present: Warden M. Brown, B. W. Squire, H. G. Fitzgerald, W. Matheson, W. E. Griffith, N. Lean, F. J. Bullied, C. J. Darling, M. Walsh, J. Clark, H. B. Rye, J. Bell W. A. Anderson, F. A. Eason, F. McKee and G. B Nichols.

Italians Are Attacking Says Berlin Report

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 20.—Strong Italian counter attacks with massed forces were broken down by heavy artillery and machine fun fire of the German lines around Monte Tomba, the War Office asserted to-day. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

A BOOMERANG.

The Kaiser equally hopes against hope and lies against fact when he again attempts, as he has done recently to cheer the starving, suffering people of Germany with the fairy tale that the German submarine warfare is succeeding, and would have a decisive part in the final outcome.

He needn't prophecy upon that point; it already has had a decided effect in shaping the outcome of the war.

It has strengthened the determination and nerved anew the arm of Britain and her allies. It has raised up new enemeis and among them a mighty, formidable enemy, the United States, mighty in material resources, and strong on land and sea. It has raised actual and sentimental enemies—all civilized nations.

And not only that, but the submarine is proving itself a failure. Last week it made the smallest bag in its history; and the agencies for its destruction as a war-winning element, are becoming more formidable every day. Yesterday the despatches told of Lloyd George's statement that on Saturday five German submarines were put out of business.

The Kaiser may succeed in fooling his people a little longer but he can't conceal from them for long that the submarine atrocity upon which he placed his reliance for victory, is proving not only a failure, but a dangerous boomerang.

Democracy should prove a tremendously big thing. The world is paying a terrible price for it.

THE PROBLEM OF PRODUCTION.

Mr. Hall, the Liberal candidate, while in Ottawa, told the Ottawa Citizen that the food problem is the greatest problem presented to Canada at the present time. And he is justified in this statement.

Are we awake to the fact? Are we doing what can be done, and should be done ,to stimulate and increase the production of food? Are we beginning at the right end in trying effectively to solve the three-fold problem that confronts Canada—providing reinforcements, providing munitions for them, and, above all, providing the most important part, food, to maintain them in fighting trim?

We don't seem to be working with the proper energy. It is now nearly a year since conscription was proposed as a means of providing reinforcements, and not a man is under arms according to its provisions. After conscription was decided upon as a Borden government policy, it took more than four months of parliamentary dawdling to put the measure upon the statute book.

If the government had believed its own contention—that the need for reinforcements was pressing, and that "sharp" was the word, they should have used more speed in passing and enforcing the military service act.

The Borden government could be prompt enough when it wanted to serve—not the soldiers in the trenches—but its own political favourites, the "big interests" concerned in Canadian Northern Railway stock.

Here was a real case of urgency — millionaires wanted reinforcements of profits, and they mustn't be kept waiting.

The C. N. R. bill committing the country to liabilities in the hundreds of millions and validating stock the Borden government's own commission declared of no value—in the interest of big financial pledges, was rushed through parliament in less than a month, while it took more than four months to put through a militarp service act that was infinitely more pressing and important than placating a few Toronto millionaires.

While the food profiteers have been allowed to wax fat, the problem of producing more food has not been even considered in earnest.

Ontario has an Organization of Resources Committee, but that is too restricted or too general. What is wanted is a nation-wide organized policy of productic in the wide lands of the untilled west, in addition to sympathetic, effective, well organized stimulus and financial aid, if necessary, to promote private production.

The government is floating a Victory Loan, which should be largely over-taken. We are to use the funds thus provided to finance the production of munitions and the purchase of food. How can we purchase food if we do not produce it?

The logical way, the business way, would be to give intensive government energy to a thoroughly organized scheme of food production.

The Borden government, neither Union nor antecedent—is giving nor gave adequate attention to production. It's giving some attention to providing soldiers and raising money; but it is not giving any serious attention to providing food for profitable purchase of the food needed to maintain the soldiers and the armies of Britain and the allies. There is of course a call for soldiers and munitions; but the loudest call is made for food, for the supply of 250 or 300 million bushels of wheat by Canada and the United States.

With the decrease of the submarine scourge, there is more chance of Canada-grown wheat getting safely across the Atlantic—if we only had the wheat, or would produce the wheat to send.

GUILT ACCEPTED.

His Holiness Pope Benedict is debarred by virtue of the character of his office, from taking an active part in European politics; but he has a sauve and inferential way of expressing his belief in the atrocious and barbarous methods of the Central Allies, Germany and Austria.

As is compatible with his office, Pope Benedict has issued an appeal to the Central Powers — those named above—asking the governments to instruct their military authorities to follow the rules of international law and civilization in their operations in Italy —to respect the lives and properties of civilians and to give protection to women and children and churches.

Nothing except specific language could more strongly express the opinion of His Holiness as to the war methods of the Hun armies. As strongly as if in so many words, he implies his belief that the Germans and Austrians—especially the Germans—have been guilty of all the barbarous excesses he now asks them to refrain from.

The appeal of the Pope tells its own story. No one can fancy his making a similar appeal to the British, French or Italian military authorities. He couldn't consistently do so. He knows as the world knows, that these nations have not, in waging war, been guilty of the barbarities and breaches of faith and disregard of the laws of God and of man such as he has inferentially imputed to Germany and Austria. He knows and the world knows, that such atrocities could not be committed by the other nations named.

Why has the Pope instructed his nuncious in Germany and Austro-Hungary to personally lay his appeal before the two Teuton emperors? Because he well knows where lie the guilt and responsibility of what has been committed, and the danger of repetition of not only Teuton lapses from civilized methods but of a bold plunge into what the world had held as out-lawed barbarism.

Without charging them with guilt, the Pope by virtue of his appeal, has pronounced them guilty.

The appeal of Pope Benedict voices the sentiment of universal Christendom. It is virtually excathedra condemnation of methods that have shocked the sense and outraged the sentiments and ordinances and conventions of Christian civilization.

Yesterday the war-time election was officially launched into the strong and eddying waters of a political maelstrom.

TOLSTOY ON THE KAISER.

— Have you, in your reading, come across Tolstoy's opinion of the Kaiser. He called him a "narrow minded, ill educated, vain man, with the ideals of a German junker." Tolstoy continued:

"When he says the army is to take no prisoners in China, but to slaughter everybody, he is not in a lunatic asylum, but people shout "Hoch!" and set sail for China to execute his commands."

When these opinions were translated into German the book was seized for lese majesty, and the edition was destroyed.—London Daily Chronicle.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—At the general meeting of the G.W.V.A., held at the Armouries last night, it was decided in view of the criticism levelled at the association through the press, in connection with the recent political meetings held in the city on Friday and Saturday last, that the few returned soldiers who caused the disturbances were not members of the Great War Veterans' Association, and were not authorised to take any part whatever in the proceedings.

The public should understand that should any individual member choose to take up an argument at any public meeting, this association will not hold themselves responsible for his actions.—Yours truly,

Sidney Whatley, Secretary.

Peterborough, 20th Nov., 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Mr. J. W. Worth, in a letter in last night's paper, speaks of the strong expression of opinion in favour of Mr. Burnham in last Friday's meeting. I wonder if this is intended for a joke. It was plainly evident that the large majority were in favour of Mr. Peck. It is true that the Burnhamites made the most noise, and that many of them put up both hands, which shows the means they were prepared to take to nominate their man, but there is no doubt at all that Mr. Burnham would have been swamped if a proper vote had been taken.

The Liberals who were present really had a joke, and a good one, for it was most amusing to see the tactics employed by the Burnhamites in view of the fact that many Liberals and Labour men were prepared to stand behind the man nominated. The disgraceful conduct of Mr. Burnham's followers simply lost to the Conservative party here for this election all those Liberals and Labour men who were prepared to vote for the candidate-nominate. The scrap between two Conservatives meant the loss of what they were scrapping for.

Mr. Worth asks for a long pull and a strong pull. As far as I can judge he will get it, but in the opposite direction fro mwhat he would like.—Yours truly,

One Who Was There.

Editor, Examiner:

Judging from several letters appearing in the local press there seems to be a wrong impression abroad as to what took place at the meeting at Victoria Hall on Friday night. I think this impression should in fairness to me and others be corrected.

I want to say the audience listened quietly to every speaker, including myself. There was no rowdyism and the spirit of fairplay exhibited by the large gathering was characteristic of the true British spirit. The only display of vociferous enthusiasm was at the mention of Mr. Burnham's name, and if the chairman had not, contrary to the British ideals of fair play and free discussion, tried to put the extinguisher upon Mr. Burnham by refusing his nomination, and ruling against free speech there would have been no protest against his action. As it was, as soon as he changed his attitude there was a cessation of interruption.

The reason why the meeting broke up as it did, was because of the same chairman's partiality and his refusal to take a ballot — the only way in which it could be possible to arrive at the true result— and as many thought Mr. Burnham had the majority, they were justified in protesting against the ruling.

Mr. Burnham's supporters wanted a ballot, because they, as much as anybody else, wanted to have a Union candidate in name, as well as in fact, nominated, and they think after a ballot the nomination would have been made unanimous.

I therefore take exception to the statement in the press that the meeting broke up in confusion. It ended without a decision because the chairman made the mistake of failing to follow precedent by attempting to arrive at a decision by rule of thumb instead of by the ballot. I have no grudge against him, and think he felt it would be difficult to take the vote, but I attribute this more to his want of knowledge than to any sinister motive. The incident is to be regretted, but it is no fault of Mr. Burnham's supporters who had no other alternative, and who acted, as I maintain, quite correctly.

JAS. GUISE-BAGLEY.

The Examiner gives Mr. Guise-Bagley's letter for what it is worth. It is interesting to read a communication from the same gentleman which appeared in the Review on Friday, a few hours before the convention, and compare it with his action at the meeting and his reference to the convention in the letter published above. To-day Mr. Guise-Bagley says: "Mr. Burnham's supporters wanted a ballot taken because they, as much as anybody else, wanted to have a Union candidate in name, as well as in fact, nominated." Yet on Friday the same writer, referring to the convention said: "It is in no sense of the word a Unionist convention. To-night's meeting is not representative and cannot be." He wound up his letter on Friday with the following eloquent appeal:

"Any man that loves the freedom and liberty and civilization for which all brothers and sons are bleeding and dying to-day will avoid as a pestilence the ill-advised pseudo-convention called by pseudo-patriots for to-night."

And a few hours later found the same Guise-Bagley, instead of "avoiding the meeting as a pestilence," on his feet at the front of the hall, strenuously demanding an opportunity to present Mr. Burnham's name before the convention he had denounced as a pesuedo one.

Now he is Mr. Burnham's agent for the election campaign.—The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH'S LOST OPPORTUNITY.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Long ages ago a great philosopher warned the populace of Macedonia against letting slip three things, namely, the arrow, the spoken word, and the lost opportunity. These three things, he declared, missed or misdirected, would never again return within their grasp. Now, it seems to me, sir, that we should give earnest heed to this sage's warning words to-day in our nation's crisis, and in view of the Dominion elections we are facing. The thoughtful voters need to beware of the crafty politicians who are shooting out their arrows of malice, and seeking to assassinate the characters of men also, do not see eye to eye with them in all their schemes and policies for winning the war. Again, they (the people) need to beware of the professional ward bosses who go stealthily about our streets and places of public resort dropping hints and vague rumours calculated to poison the minds of people against some of the noblest citizens of our land, because, forsooth, they don't happen to pipe to their tune, or utter in parrot-like monotony their shibboleths. Again sir, I think we ought to beware lest we lose the golden opportunity of choosing a disinterested and loyal citizen to go to Ottawa as our representative in this great national crisis, and permit ourselves to be sandbagged by some local Ku Klux Clan, who raid our cancases and flout all suggestions of free speech, fair play, and the will of the democracy.

Now, sir, as a constant reader of your reliable paper, I must say that I have read with disgust the attempts of certain people to abuse and persecute one of the most loyal and devoted of our citizens, and a man who has played a most public-spirited role in every sphere since the war began, I refer, sir, to Mr. Joseph Wearing. I venture to think that when Peterborough's citizens get to their second sober thoughts and natural judgments, they will realise that they have lost a golden opportunity in refusing to listen to the earnest counsels and enlightened wisdom of Mr. Wearing at the so-called, sham citi y back, sir, when I read in your paper that some of the vulgar sort actually yelled "Sit down" to Mr. Wearing t the so-called, sham citizens' meeting in the Victoria Hall. Here is a young man who has stood up for the right, for public honour, and for civic and national righteousness, and who will yet, I believe, be slated for a position of trust and power in a very few years at the most. And yet, sir, he was told to "sit down." "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Ashkelon," that such a thing could be done, and in such a heartless, cold-blooded style, right here in our city of Peterborough. By the way, Mr. Editor, I would like to inquire who this J. Guise-Bagley is who has the temerity to question Mr. Wearing's statements and cast doubts and reflections upon his opinions? Is Mr. Bagley a real person, or is his Guise a dis-Guise? We have a right to know and to examine his credentials before we can pay any heed to his malicious attacks.—I am, yours truly,

John Ploughman.

Peterborough, 20th Nov., 1917.

NEGATIVE WON DEBATE

A most interesting and enjoyable debate was held under the auspices of the George Street Epworth League last night on the subject "Resolved that women have more influence for good than men." The affirmative was taken by Miss Eva Outram and Mr. Chas. Elliott, while the case for the negative was presented by Miss Stella Bennett and Mr. Stanley Nicholls. All the speakers gave a good account of themselves. The Judges, Miss Parker, Mrs.(Dr.) Harvey and Messrs. G. C. Parsons and C. S. Thompson gave their verdict in favour of the negative.

Enjoyable solos were given by Miss Gladys Westaway of Port Hope.

There was a large attendance at the meeting, which was a most interesting one.

SIR WILFRID'S BIRTHDAY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier is spending his 76th birthday at his home, and is engaged in the task of selecting the candidates to whom he will accord endorsation for purposes of the Military Voters' Act at the coming election. The Liberal Chief has almost completely recovered from the indisposition which for a time threatened to seriously interfere with his campaign efforts, and this morning expressed great satisfaction at the result of yesterday's nominations.

Sir Wilfrid will speak at the Russell Theatre in Ottawa on Tuesday, Nov. 27th, and will thereafter go west, where he will speak in Winnipeg. To-day he was in receipt of countless messages of congratulations from all parts of the Dominion of the passing of another anniversary of his birthday.

Electric Heaters
A few minutes in the library, den, or nursery will make the place warm and comfortable. They produce heat without odour, smoke, or dirt. They make a furnace fire needless until the weather gets real cold. The savings on the coal bill will more than pay for the heater. Cost of operation is from 1 cent up, according to size. Come in and see some of the Designs, on Sale in our Store.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE A. S. K. CLUB

The members of the A.S.K. Bible Class of Knox Church met on Friday evening, and the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Hon. President—Rev. Mr. MacKenzie.
President—Harvey E. Henry.
Vice-President—G. Cunningham.
Teacher—Mr. A. McKenzie.
Secretary—H. Martin.
Treasurer—F. Goodfellow.
Convener Social Committee—Ross Williamson.
Convener Visiting Committee—W. Smith.
Convener Athletic Committee—W. Rehill.

After many compliments and good wishes were passed, the members were invited to the basement, where a luncheon was laid for them by the ladies of the Volunteer Bible Class. While partaking of the good things provided, music was furnished by a Diamond Disc Edison, machine kindly loaned by the Green Music Company.

Mr. C. H. Thurber, the retiring president, who for the past two years has filled the position in an efficient manner, and under whose management the class has grown and prospered, notwithstanding the fact that so many had volunteered for military service, was chosen as chairman for the evening.

A few appropriate remarks were made by the chairman on the success of the class for the past year. He mentioned the fact that 47 members of he A.S.K. Class were now on active service, but notwithstanding this contribution of men to the Empire the class had a membership of 25, and the organisation is doing work second to none in the city. He also mentioned that three of their members—Wm. Toms, J. McGregor, and H. Hill—had made the supreme sacrifice within the last year fighting for our Empire, and on behalf of the class he expressed their sympathy to the many friends present.

The officers in turn were called upon, and made very fitting remarks and resolutions for the coming year, after which Rev. Mr. MacKenzie and the teachers of the Volunteer and A.S.K. Bible Classes made excellent speeches.

A very pleasant feature of the evening was an address and presentation by the members of the A.S.K. Class to their teacher, Mr. A. McKenzie, of a beautiful pearl tie pin. Rev. Mr. MacKenzie read the address and the presentation was made by the chairman.

Mr. McKenzie was taken by surprise, but thanked the members for their expressions of esteem, and said he would prize it as an indication of the good fellowship that existed between the class and himself.

A hearty vote of thanks to the ladies for their valuable help and co-operation in the past years, and for the excellent banquet they provided, was moved by Ross Williamson, seconded by H. Martin, and the boys showed their appreciation of the ladies' work by singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

After three cheers for the chairman and the singing of the National Anthem, Rev. Mr. MacKenzie dismissed the gathering with prayer.

Historic Meeting Of British Etc.

Lord Reading, Lord Chief Justice will preside, with Andrew Bonar Law, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the American Treasury at the table beside him. The military and naval heads of both governments and officials representing other departments of war work will be grouped together. Premier Lloyd George planned to be present for the purpose of answering questions. The general work of the meeting constitutes the taking of stock of resources and needs of both countries and to some extent of the continental allies.

A group of reporters and photographers and curious sight-seers were on the scene early in the day.

Tenders Received For the Collection Of Garbage

Committee Will Recommend That the Contract Be Awarded to Mitchell and Turner

COMMITTEE MEETING

At a meeting of the committee of the Whole Council held last evening, the tender for the collection of garbage for the year 1918 was awarded to Mitchell and Turner at a contract price of $7,500. The contract price for the present year was $6,250, with a war bonus of $500. The tender of Mitchell and Turner was the lowest of three tenders that were submitted. The other two tenders were as follows: Raper and Blodgett $7,776 and A. B. Downer $7,900.

The committee did not think it advisable to undertake the work on its own account after perusing a report covering the garbage collection in other cities where the work is done by the corporation. The following cities were referred to in the report: Stratford, cost in 1916 was ..$ 9,063
Kingston, cost in 1916 was ..$10,877
St. Catharines, cost in 1916 was $43 day
London, cost in 1916 was.....$25,056

The cost in all cases included the cost of operating an incinerator plant.

Ald. Saunders was instructed to supply the two men at the incinerator with a small stove, which will be used by the men in the preparation of their dinner.

Street Lights.

Several street lights were authorized for a number of dark streets.

Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, was instructed to arrange a conference with the Utilities Commission for the purpose of bringing about a more even distribution of lights.

City Engineer Parsons will look into the matter of street numbers on George street south.

Snow Removal.

The tender for the removal of snow in district number four was awarded to A. Cooney, 340 Aylmer street at a contract price of $125, and district number three was awarded to W. J. Stinson at a contract price of $265. An amendment moved by Ald. Stratton, to award the two districts to A. Cooney, who was the lowest tenderer in both cases, was defeated. Ald. Dobbin voted for and against, much to the chagrin of Ald. Stratton.

A proposal to lease Mr. Peters a couple of islands in the river for the purpose of erecting a bathing house was left in the hands of a committee composed of Ald. Smith, Ald. Weir, City Engineer Parsons and City Solicitor Gordon.

"The Bird of Paradise"

"The Bird of Paradise," Richard Walton Tully's exotic drama, will make its first appearance at "The Grand," to-morrow (Wednesday) Nov. 21st.

The piece is referred to as "the play of a woman's soul," and has its settings in the Hawaiian Islands. Against this background of unique beauty is lived rather than acted, a powerful story of two women and their influence upon the lives of the men who loved them. One with the sensuous charm of the young Hawaiian, vows that she will woo her husband and keep him "by the charm of lips and arms." The other, a snow maiden, vows: "I will keep and hold him by the power of the mind." The girls live and love and pay the price of life and love. Then each sees the other, and says "I was wrong. My way has failed. Teach me your way to win and keep a man's love."

Every woman knows, and every home woman will admit that this is the knowledge she desires beyond all earthly things. She will learn it if she sees "The Bird of Paradise."

Miss Celete Scudder, as Luana, Oliver Morosco's nineteen year old leading woman, John Warner as Dr. Wilson, John Waller as the beachcomber, and Helen Carew, as Diana, the American girl, are the principal characters, assisted by a lengthy cast, including a quintette of Hawaiian singers and players, whose music gives atmosphere to this compelling play.

When I left the club your wife was talking. No wonder she says it is so homelike.—Baltimore American.

A joint mass meeting for Havelock, Belmont and Methuen was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening last at 8 o'clock, when Mr. Warren, the organizer of the Victory War Bonds for this county, and other prominent speakers delivered addresses, explaining the bonds and the extreme need of making the new loan a big success. Reeve Mathison, of Havelock, occupied the chair.

Mr. Wm. Davidson shipped a carload of horses, a carload of hogs and three carloads of cattle on Wednesday last.

Elgin Post, of Glenalda, a nephew of Mr. Frank Post, of town, has been reported killed in action. He went overseas with the 93rd.

The vigorous blowing of the round house and locomotives whistles on Monday morning last at 9 o'clock very forcibly marked the opening of Havelock's participation in the big Victory Loan campaign.

The Women's Relief committee has completed the work of sending some 43 Christmas boxes to our soldier boys overseas. The boxes contained socks, chocolate, gum, tobacco and candies.

Edw. Fennel is the enumerator for No. 1 polling sub-division in Havelock, and J. Craighead for No. 2. Belmont's are as follows: No. 1, A. A. Wilde; No. 2, Jas. Ketchen; No. 3, Jas. Freeman; No. 4, D. Peterick; No. 5, Wes. Dulmage; No. 6, W. L. Wannamaker; No. 7, Dan Masters, and No. 8, Robt. Miriam.

British Casualties Are Heavy

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The British casualties reported in the week ending to-day reached a total of 32,227. They are divided as follows:
Killed or died of wounds—Officers 296, men 6,160.
Wounded or missing—Officers 923, men 24,848.
The British casualties lists have been increasing recently, probably in consequence of the bitter fighting in Flanders.
Last week they were 25,065, and in the preceding week 21,891.

Bail Refused Havelock Men

Bail has been refused Walter Varty and William McMullen, the two Havelock men, who are held at the county jail on two different charges. This morning McMullen was charged in the police court with having failed to comply with the Military Service Act, and Crown Attorney Hatton asked for a week's remand until he obtained permission from the Crown Attorney to proceed with the prosecution. Mr. Gordon, the defendant's solicitor, applied for bail, which was first suggested at $3,000, and was finally withdrawn.

Bail has also been refused Varty although it was first mentioned at $5,000.

MEMBER OF A TRIBUNAL DROPS DEAD

S.S. Marie, Ont., Nov. 20. — John Knight, Mayor of Bruce Mines, dropped dead while acting on an exemption tribunal yesterday afternoon. He was 73 years of age. Two sons are overseas.

ONE OF THE HAVELOCK MEN TO KINGSTON

Earl McMullen, of Havelock, who surrendered himself as a defaulter under the Military Service Act to Chief Thompson, was taken to Kingston this morning.

ITALIAN MURDERED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—Frank Marietta, an Italian workman, was shot four times and instantly killed by a fellow countryman so far not apprehended, in the Grand Trunk paint shops here to-day.

MORE ACCLAMATIONS WERE EXPECTED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The nomination results are the general topic of conversation here to-day, and there is much comment on both sides regarding the paucity of acclamations. Most people expected far more Unionist candidates returned without a contest. It is agreed that the election campaign will be vigorous in all provinces.

PHYSICIAN WHO 'SENTENCED' BABY COURTS INQUIRY

DR. HAISELDEN OF CHICAGO, DEFENDS RIDDING WORLD OF ABNORMAL CHILDREN.

CHICAGO, ILL. — If Paul Hodzima, four years old, dies of the drug given to him by his mother upon the order of Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, Coroner Hoffman said that he would submit the case to the Grand Jury. Dr. Haiselden says he has sentenced the child to die a slow and painless death because of his deformed skull, and other hopeless abnormalities. He contends that all such children should be put to death, not only to put them out of their misery but to protect normal persons.

Dr. Haiselden's radical stand has caused a storm to rise against him, and the condition of the Hodzima child is being observed closely. The mother said to-day that while her religion taught her she was doing wrong her mother love gave her the courage to "feed this deadly drug to my baby with a steady hand." She said that she had watched him suffer for two years and could stand it no longer.

Coroner Huffman has recommended to Health Commissioner Robertson that a committee of representative physicians be appointed to investigate Dr. Haiselden's practice upon malformed and abnormal infants.

Dr. Haiselden says that "when the Hodsima baby dies" he will be glad to go before a jury and "step on the necks of persons of the Coroner Hoffman type." He will welcome such an inquiry, he says, as he believes it will establish a physician's right to rid the world of abnormal children.

Give Something Musical this Christmas

Gifts this year MUST be Practical. What's the sense of conserving food and then undoing your good work by giving useless or unappropriate Presents. This year's token must be given for utility. One of your Choicest and most Practical Gifts might well be a

AEOLIAN VOCALION

A CONSTANT REMINDER OF A THOUGHTFUL GIVER.

Until you have heard the Aeolian Vocalion you haven't a real appreciation of the Phonographic Art.

It possesses the priceless privilege of SELF-EXPRESSION in Music, which only those who play or sing have hitherto enjoyed.

Its great difference from other Phonographs—its great new feature—is the GRADUOLA for controlling expression, gives it an appeal that wins the heart of every music-lover who hears it.

It can honestly be said of the Vocalion, when compared with other phonographs, that there is the Tone difference between that of an ordinary Violin and a rare Cremona.

Hear the Aeolian Vocalion now. Demonstrations are always gladly given. Remember, prices will advance after December 1st. Pay a deposit now, and secure the choice of one of these beautiful gifts.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.— Canada is to have a rea lwar-time election. Despatches last night from all parts of Canada indicate that of the 234 constituencies under the new redistribution bill probably less than twenty seats will go by acclamation. Of these ten in Quebec Province go to Laurier Liberals, and the balance, made up of one in Nova Scotia and the others in Ontario and the West, go to Unionists, all but one of them Liberal Unionists. Until a late hour last night not a Conservative other than Hon. Martin Burrell, whose opponent's nomination paper are said to have been irregular—had been reported as elected by acclamation.

Both Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier will face opposition. The Premier leaves Halifax and runs in King's, Nova Scotia, where he is opposed by a Laurier Liberal. The Liberal leader stands again for his old seat of East Quebec, and is opposed by a Conservative Unionist. Sir Wilfrid is also contesting one of the Ottawa seats.

Mr. Fielding Unopposed.

The only acclamation from the Maritime Provinces goes to Hon. W. S. Fielding, former Minister of Finance in the Laurier Administration, who comes back to Parliament as a Liberal Unionist supporter. Hon. Frank B. Carvell, the new Liberal Minister of Public Works, is opposed in his old riding of Carleton, New Brunswick, by a Laurier Liberal, Hon. A. K. Maclean, who entered the Unionist Government as Liberal representative from Nova Scotia, is also opposed in his Halifax constituency.

Hon. Dr. Beland Honoured.

Quebec furnishes ten acclamations, nine of them to Laurier Liberals and the other to Hon. (Dr.) H. S. Beland, former Postmaster-General and now a prisoner of war in Germany, who is again returned from his old riding of Beauce. All the Ministers from Quebec— Hon. Messrs. Doherty, Blondin, Ballantyne and Sevigny—face opposition from Laurier Liberals. Mr. Sevigny is running in two constituencies — Dorchester and West mount. A unique feature of the contest in Quebec is the opposition to Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux of Mr. C. H. Cahan, chief English-speaking lieutenant, of Henri Bourassa, and proclaimed Nationalist, as a Unionist candidate.

An Ontario Acclamation.

One seat goes by acclamation in Ontario. Mr. John McMartin Liberal Unionist, is elected in Stormont and Glengarry. All the Ontario Ministers, Liberal and Conservative, are opposed. Hon. George P. Graham, nominated as Liberal Unionist candidate in South Essex, precipitated a surprise by dropping out entirely, while Mr. F. F. Pardee, the former Chief Liberal Whip, who is an out-and-out supporter of conscription, and has the unique distinction of being the only Unionist supporter in Ontario who received renomination as such from an open Liberal convention faces a Laurier Liberal in West Lambton in what promises to be a hard fight. Hon. N. W. Rowell and Hon. S. C. Mewburn, the new Liberal Ministers, also face opposition from Laurier Liberals, while Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Solicitor-General, runs against a candidate of the Social-Democrats in South Wellington.

On the Prairies and in B.C.

In the three Prairie Provinces — Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta —the Union cause fared best. Hon. T. A. Crerar and Hon. Arthur Meighen both face Laurier Liberals in their Manitoba ridings; Hon. J. A. Calder is opposed by an Independent Labour candidate in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, and Hon. Arthur Sifton by a Laurier Liberal in Medicine Hat, Alberta. Despatches received till a late hour last night indicate, however, that several Liberal Unionists on the prairies have been awarded seats by acclamation. These include Robert Cruise, ex-M.P., in Dauphin, Man., Levi Thompson and Thomas MacNutt, who were Liberal members in the last Parliament. Dr. Michael Clark, who runs again for Red Deer, is opposed by a Laurier Liberal.

In British Columbia Hon. Martin Burrell has been declared member for Yale by acclamation, owing to alleged irregularities in the nomination papers of his Laurier Liberal opponent, Mr. W. W. B. McInnes, formerly Minister of Education for the Province, who resigned from the Bench to re-enter the political arena, and is running as a Laurier candidate in two constituencies, Comox-Alberni and Vancouver Centre.

Task of Endorsing Candidates

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 20.—That elections have been averted in 19 seats of the Dominion is evident from the official figures received by the clerk of the Crown in Chancery, of yesterday's nominations. So far there is no official confirmation of acclamations for Hon. Martin Burrell in Yale, or Hon. Arthur Meighen in Portage La Prairie. In both these seats irregularities in the Opposition nomination papers have been claimed and the protests have not yet been definitely settled.

The task of endorsing candidates is now under way. In Ontario the government will likely give endorsation to the following Liberal Unionists: Hon. Hugh Guthrie in South Wellington, Hon. N. W. Rowell in Durham, Hon. C. S. Mewburn in East Hamilton, F. F. Pardee, in East Lambton, Col. Martin in South Renfrew, Col. H. Mackie in North Renfrew, J. B. Tudhope, East Simcoe, A. F. Macnab in South Bruce, H. M. Mowat, K.C., in Parkdale, Hume Cronyn in London, E. W. Nesbitt in North Oxford, John Harold in Brant. In Nova Scotia, Hon. A. K. MacLean will be the only Liberal to be endorsed. In New Brunswick, four Liberal-Unionists will receive endorsation, Elken in St. John, Carvell in Carlton, Logie in Northumberland and Col. H. McLean in Queen's, Sunbury.

In Quebec only one Liberal, Hon. C. C. Ballantyne will secure Unionist endorsation. In the western provinces, the endorsations will be divided on about an even basis.

Submarine Which Sank Medie Was Destroyed

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Nov. 20. — A German submarine was destroyed at the time the French steamship Medie with a cargo of munitions was torpedoed in the Western Mediterranean on Sept. 23, with a loss of 250 lives, says a despatch from Algiers to the Journal. The liner Biskra was proceeding with a convoy of French and British steamers, among which was the Medie, leading the line. The Medie was torpedoed without warning before she was able to bring her guns to bear on the submarine. Apparently thinking that the ships were not armed, the submarine commander brought his boat slowly to the surface. The Biskra immediately opened fire at a distance of two miles. The second shot struck the submarine forward and low. An explosion followed. The submarine's stern shot up. The U-boat plunged to destruction before the Medie disappeared.

A Smooth, White Skin That Defies Weather

During the coming months of biting winds and intense cold, you who would keep your skins smooth, white and velvety, should turn your attention to mercolised wax. Nothing else will so effectively remove a chapped, roughened or discolored surface. By gradually absorbing the weather-beaten cuticle, the complexion is kept in perfect condition, and even the beauty of expression appears more pronounced.

If your skin be blotchy, pimply, freckled, coarse, sallow or over-red, why not shed it? One ounce of ordinary mercolised wax, to be had at any druggist's, will completely transform the most unsightly complexion in less than a fortnight. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

Police Send Parcels To Former Members Now Convalescent

met the Citizens' committee on Saturday night. He explained that when the wish of the Veterans to have a place entirely to themselves was made clear the Peterborough Club proposition was dropped. The committee visited the flat in the Royal Bank building and also rooms in the old Oriental Hotel. They unanimously decided upon the Royal Bank rooms and yesterday a lease of the property for two years with an option of renewal for a third year had been secured. The Citizens' committee were going ahead at once with their work of furnishing the room and it was expected that the quarters would be ready in a couple of weeks.

An Entertainment committee composed of Comrades W. R. Elliott, chairman, E. W. Watson, Walter Hughes, J. A. McNabb, J. J. Cook, W. Perks and H. Gilbert was appointed to handle the question of arranging concerts and amusements. It was explained that owing to a mix up in dates the Madame Gardini concert had been cancelled.

Comrade H. Gilbert brought up the question of the G.W.V.A. securing the band instruments formerly belonging to the 93rd Battalion. He pointed out that there were seven bandsmen already in the ranks of the G.W.V.A. and with others who would be returning shortly they would form the nucleus for a band. A number of the members might be glad of the opportunity to learn to play an instrument and the Veterans were fortunate in having among their numbers Bandmaster Hughes of the 93rd.

States His Position.

Comrade R. H. Muir asked permission to deny a statement that he had heard. "I was told to-day," he remarked, "that the Veterans were for Capt. Burnham because he was getting them positions. Well, I have only this to say, that Capt. Burnham did not get me my job as caretaker of the armouries; it was the G.W.V.A. who got it for me. I am not a Tory; I am not a Grit. I'm a Labour man, but when it is a case of standing by my comrades who are still in the trenches I am going to vote for the man who is for them every time."

The political situation was briefly discussed and the desirability of the G.W.V.A. seeing that all women who should be on the list are placed there and their duties made clear to them by the Veterans was pointed out. Definite details of this will be decided upon later.

Lieut. J. A. McNabb, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, became a member of the G.W.V.A. at last night's meeting.

Life Term For Monett

lutely clear as to what she is fighting for.. It is pointed out that America has not been invaded and has not been threatened. She has been deluged for three years with German propaganda. Pacifism, some German and some merely mis-disguided has had free reign. A reconsecration of the Allied cause has been urged by the American commissioners, and in this they have had the hearty support of many of the British Commissioners an demissaries who have visited America within the past eight months. On every hand Colonel House and the American Commission have been given a most cordial reception. There can be little doubt but that among the foremost British and French leaders the proposal of the Americans will receive endorsement. Lloyd George in particular, has since their first meeting, shared the complete confidence of Colonel House, and while the imperialistic views of Lord Northcliffe are generally well understood, the energetic manner in which he is fighting for the inter-allied council with all that he must know it will entain, suggests that the publisher-peer regards the proposal as a most necessary win-the-war measure.

LIBERAL MEETING IN HAVELOCK LAST NIGHT

The Liberal meeting in Havelock last night drew a big attendance to the Town Hall. The speakers were the East Peterborough candidate, William Johnston, and Messrs. Hartley Dewart and William Lee, of Toronto, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough.

The old art of husbandry has been lost. Not much. There's old lady Robinson; she's married off five daughters. —Baltimore American.

The blowing up of a submarine in view of the audience is one of several realistic efforts in "Seven Days' Leave," the big spectacular military comedy, to be presented at The Grand next Saturday under the direction of Daniel Frohman, a name that spells quality in things theatrical. The drama is still the big rage of London despite the fact that it is now in its tenth month of continuously crowded audiences there.

PETERBOROUGH COUNTY TO TAKE UP THE QUESTION OF GREATER HOG PRODUCTION

Each Township Was Represented at Meeting Held in Norwood—Township Meetiugs Will Be Held Throughout the County Next Week—A Sound Business Proposition.

Two farmers representing each Township of the County met in Peterborough on the 16th inst. at the request of the local representative o the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of considering what could be done to increase the production of bacon hogs.

Food Controller Hanna, at a recent meeting of farmers from every county in the Province, emphasized the need of greatly increasing the production of hogs when he said "that the supply of pigs in Europe is 33,000,000 short of the normal. In Canada we have only three and one-half million hogs. The shortage in Europe is therefore, ten times as great as our total hog population. But great as is the present shortage European hogs will be depleted even more rapidly as the war goes on, and if it lasts long enough the European hog will be exterminated. In the United States the hog population is 10 per cent. less than it was a year ago. In Canada we are just about holding our own."

He announced that there will be no fixing of maximum or minimum prices on hogs. The universal shortage, he considers, guarantees a strong demand and a profitable price. He will, however, take measures to regulate the spread between the price paid to the producer and the price paid by the consumer for pork products. This, it is believed, will prevent fluctuations and stabilise the hog market.

The present embargo on United States corn will be removed as soon as the new crop is ready for market and Canadian feeders can have all they can pay for. As this year's United States corn crop is the greatest on record, new crop corn should sell at a reasonable price. Mill feeds, such as shorts and middlings, are to be given to the farmers at cost; that is, the profits of the millers are limited to 25c a barrel of flour, and they have been instructed to take over all their profits out of flour and sell mill feeds at cost. Elevator screenings, which are a splendid pig feed, but at present prohibitive in price, are to be made available to the Canadian farmer at a minimum of cost.

"I believe it is sound business to increase hog production as much as possible during 1918," says Food Controller Hoover of the United States. It is more than sound business. If every Canadian farmer will raise one or two more litters of pigs in 1918 and the United States farmers do the same, it will have an appreciable effect on the duration of the war.

This situation was fully explained, and the scheme the Department contemplate putting on was announced. It was as follows:

That one or more farmers from each Concession in the Township be invited to attend a meeting when the situation will be discussed fully. These men will be asked to impress their neighbours with the seriousness and need for greater production. It is proposed that the census will be taken of the number of brood sows kept in normal times on each farm, the number kept now, and the number which will be kept later on. In this way the Department hope to secure accurate information as to the per cent. of increase there will likely be. On the Provincial farms the Government contemplates the placing of about 600 brood sows where 140 were kept in normal times.

The Township meetings will be held next week in the County of Peterborough.

BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The third annual meeting of the Business Girls' Club was held on Friday evening, Nov. 16th, 1917, in the green parlour of the Y.W.C.A. A large number of the members were present. The reports for the year were read and adopted. The new officers for the year 1918 are as follows:

Hon. President—Mrs. F. C. Neal.
President—Miss Helen Denison.
1st Vice-Pres.—Miss Maud Adams.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Miss M. Sherlock.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Miss J. Richardson.
Treasurer—Miss B. Gillespie.
Secretary—Miss B. Latimer.
Executive Com.—Miss L. Hall, convenor, Miss E. Hall, Miss L. Hamilton, Miss A. Horsfield, Miss Waddell.

I beg to submit the following report, being the third annual report of the Business Girls' Club, for the year ending November, 1917:

Average attendance 20 members.

During the months of January, February and March the Club met in the room over Mr. Lynch's Drug Store, kindly given the Otonabee Chapter for Red Cross Work, and left heated for the use of the Business Girls' Club. During these three months we made 30 Personal Property Bags, 30 Comfort Bags, and 25 Scrap Books. These bags were all filled and each bag contained with other things one pair of socks, and sent to be distributed in the Canadian Hospital, France, by Nursing Sister B. M. Mowry. Letters have been received from the boys who received these thanking the Club.

A "Garden Tea" was held in the Recruiting Rooms in February at which we raised $113.75, which was used to defray expenses of the Red Cross Work and filling the bags sent to France.

Parcels at Christmas were sent to the four Prisoners of War whom the Club are keeping for which a contribution of $60.00 is sent every year.

The Club also took charge of the booth in the Machinists Moonlight Excursion and Bonner-Worth Excursion, from which a considerable sum was realized.

During the months of October and November the Club have met every Monday night in the Public Library, and are doing Red Cross work for the local Red Cross Society. The Club has promised $5.00 a month to the Red Cross Society and the girls are all contributing to this cause.

Fourteen meetings were held during the year. Eight regular and three business one outdoor at Inverlea, one at Jackson Park, and a Tennis Tea on the grounds of the Brinton Carpet Company, for which pleasure the girls wish to thank Mr. Brock, the manager.

The members of the Club extend hearty thanks to the Bonner-Worth for the use of the booth on their excursion, to the Machinists at the C.G.E. for the use of boothh on their moonlight, and to all those who assisted them in any way during the year—especially to the Press for their uniform courtesy and kindness in inserting notices, etc.

COLDNESS OF FARMERS TO THE GOVERMENT IS SPREADING

Introduction of Oleomargarine Stirs Up Opposition From Dairymen According to Reports From the Country—Protesting Against Too Severe Drafts

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—Sir Robert Borden returned to the capital yesterday from Nova Scotia. He has been bombarded with telegrams about the recognition of candidates, especially in Ontario, and he found a bunch of knots on his table when he arrived. The lot of a Union Prime Minister is not a happy one, with two hundred and thirty-five candidates to be endorsed by next Friday and more than that quantity hungering for the magic word.

The situation has not improved during the last two or three days either from the point of view of newspaper reports, or the prognostications of political experts who drift in and out of the city. For some time the stories of the coldness of the farmers to Union Government have been increasing in number and significance. The present outlook will surely put the Government and all its friends on their mettle. A Liberal Unionist stalwart whose election was conceded because the opposition to him was regarded as negligible, a month ago, has said that in one section of his riding, where he has always had a majority of 250, he expects to be beaten by 250. Some farmers' attitude reminds one of a Punch cartoon during the Crimean War, when wheat was up to eighty shillings a quarter—two dollars and a half a bushel—without any of the deprivations which now afflict all British citizens. A farmer complained bitterly to his friend. "Why," he said, "they do say there's danger of peace."

"The Farmers' Turn Now."

The Parliamentarian referred to reports one of his agricultural constituents as saying: "What does the Government want to let margarine in for, just when we were figuring on getting seventy cents for butter." The answer was that the people in towns and cities ought not to pay so much for butter. "Let them pay," answered the landowner, "it's our turn now."

Another farmer tackled his late member about another reported intention of the Government "What's this I hear about dismissing Flavelle?" he questioned. "We don't want to see him dismissed from a place where he has great influence with our Government and the British Government, too. He's the fellow that put up the price of hogs for the farmer; and you want to get rid of him, I suppose? Nice member you are."

These reflections from the sidelines may be no more typical than agreeable. But they have a certain symptomatic value. Taken along with the declaration of the chairman of a farmers' convention in Norfolk that Canada has sent enough to the war, and with the Perth parade of five hundred farmers, with their protest that Conscription is taking men from their locality, they do show how great the need for propaganda is, if the Union is to make an impressive appearance before the Allies and the world on the 18th of December.

John Teevan, 206 Perry street.

Exemptions Allowed.

A. J. Coughlin, farmer.
W. H. Hatherly, farmer.
J. H. Archer, farmer.

Temporary Exemptions.

John J. McDonnell, farmer.
Cyril E. Lech, 415 Stewart street.

A. J. Coughlin, an A2 man, and a farmer, was extempted until he ceases to be a farmer.

Delmar Douglas, 772 Water Street, O. A. Robertson, 833 Water Street; T. A. Tobin, 193 River Road, Melville Fowler, R. R. No. 6, Peterboro; Clarence McDougall, 20 Lisburn St., Peterboro; J. H. Keating, 157 Rubidge Street; J. K. Huston, Peterboro, Charles J. Ray, 687 Water St.; Stanley Albert Lowe, 162 Aylmer St.; A. G. Metheral, 474 Aylmer Street; and Hector J. Neil, all "E" men are exempted until "E" class is called.

George Gilbert, Smith township, a "B" man, D. W. Hunter, 548 George street, a "C" man; and Lawrence Lavoie, 127 Sophia street, were all exempted until their class is called.

The claim for exemption of James Fred Hatherly, a farmer, and an "A2" man, was disallowed.

William Henry Hatherly, was exempted until he ceases to be a farmer.

The claim for exemption of C. W. O. Anderson, 301 Bethune Street, was disallowed.

Cecil J. Richardson, 541 Homewood avenue, an "A2" man, applied for exemption. The claim was disallowed.

Alexander Trotter, a farm labourer who works a short distance from Peterborough, claimed to be afflicted with rheumatism. He told the Board that he was engaged by the year at the rate of $2.50 a day. Applicant said that he was frequently incapacitated owing to the aforesaid mentioned affliction. "Did you get $2.50 for the days you say you could hardly raise your arm?" enquired Magistrate Dumble.

The mother of Trotter, who appeared before the Board on behalf of her son, put in a strong plea for exemption of her son, whom, she said, was the sole support. The applicant has three married brothers.

"There is no more obligation on you to support your mother than any of your brothers and besides your mother will get more money when you are in the army and she won't have to keep you," said Magistrate Dumble.

Judge Huycke and Lieut.-Col. Clegg both agreed that the family should be represented in the army, and Trotter's claim was disallowed.

John J. McDonnell, R. R. No. 9, an "A2" man, was exempted until Oct. 1st, 1918.

Cyril Earl Lech, 415 Stewart street, an "A2" man, was exempted until March 1st, 1918.

Mr. Aylmer had told a young Russian "A2" man that the Military Act did not apply to him because he had not taken out naturalization papers. "Is your father naturalized?" Mr. Aylmer asked.

"Yes," was the reply that immediately altered Reuben Beube's prospect before the tribunal and cast a shadow of approaching disturbance over the middleman's business he and his father follow.

Born in Kovno, Russia, Beube came to Canada with his parents when he was ten years old.

Kovno is near the Polish frontier, and has been overrun by German and Russian armies as the tide of war ebbed and flowed on that front. When he came to Canada he was unable to speak English, but his unaccented speech was as smooth and finished as his sartorial outline, and the S. E. Post "ads" have framed few effects smarter than this young alien, who discovered that his father's naturalization made him also a British subject.

His father was naturalized in 1908, thus the son was about fourteen years old at that time.

"You were under 21 at an rate," Mr. Aylmer explained, "and not being of age your father's act applies also to yourself. Had you been 21 or over you could have objected, and, if you desired, have refused to be naturalized."

Beube said there were six boys and one girl in his family. One son, in Hamilton, has already been drafted, and there is a boy of 18 years in Toronto. Reuben and his father buy potatoes, poultry, fruit and other produce in the country, re-selling it in Peterborough and elsewhere. His father cannot speak English.

"For myself, I wouldn't care," he replied," but it would be a great shock to my mother, two of us drafted. And she's not well." His appeal was refused, but Mr. Aylmer sent him away with a smile.

APPEAL REFUSED.

John Raymond Sullivan's appeal, on domestic grounds, was refused. He stated that his father had died recently and only he and one sister remained at home.

FARM LABOURER REFUSED.

Mr. Howard Smithson of Otonabee supported the claim of Cornelius Driscoll, a young farm labourer and thresher, whose family lately moved into the city. He has always been employed with farmers and Mr. Smithson stated that the young man was steady industrious and of great assistance to him and other farmers with whom he has been working.

"Hired men are almost common property now," said Mr. Smithson. They are so scarce we have to pass them around at times."

"This young man's father and brother have mail routes," Mr. Aylmer commented. "They do not pay much attention to the faulty's responsibility in national production or they would be engaged in farm work."

Mr. Smithson replied that he was thinking of the usefulness of Driscoll as a steady farm labourer. "Men can not fight unless we get supplies for them." Decision reserved.

FARMER EXEMPTED.

James Frank O'Connor, Lot 21, Con. 13, of Otonabee, lives at home with his father, working 250 acres. There are also younger brothers, 17 years old, 8 and 4 respectively, and four sisters, the oldest of whom is 13, all at home, and one sister at school in Peterborough. Two hundred and ten acres are under cultivation and fort- in pasture. O'Connor, with his father and younger brother work the land and care for the stock.

"I guess we'll have to wait till the little boys grow up," said Mr. Moore.

"If you and your father are working 210 acres you have your hands full," Mr. Aylmer added. Exemption granted while O'Connor remains on a farm.

FARMER AN ONLY SON.

James Howard Baptie was another of the morning's grist of farmers. He lives in Smith, near Lakefield, and is his father's only help. He has no brothers or sisters, and his father is 81 years old. Exemption granted for present employment.

A SHORT RESPITE.

Robert Roland Robinson, whose name lends itself to trills as naturally as Burns' "Rantin' Rovin' Robin," lives in Otonabee on Rural Route No. 6, and is employed as engineer on a threshing machine. He bases his claim on the importance of his work. Howard Murray suported Robinson's claim stating that he needed Robinson not only for threshing but also to run a "ditcher" next Spring There was a great deal of ditch work to be done on Peterborough farms, he said; but Mr. Aylmer answered that it had been delayed so long it could well wait until the war is over.

A young farmer in the gallery asked permission to advert to the Government's exhortation of farmers to undef-drain their farms and thereby increase production.

That was the Government's affair, Mr. Aylmer replied. He refused to argue the question but, to answer it fully and finally, called the farmer from his bench and picking up the Military Act "blue book" said: "I've read and re-read the Act, and there is not one word in it about the exemption of farmers." Exemption allowed until Jan. 1st.

FARMERS EXEMPTED.

Patrick Crough, who lives on the 2nd Concession of Smith, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer.

John Corkery, an Otonabee farmer, married in October, 1917, was exempted while he remains in his present employment. In September, 1916, he leased a farm for six years, and has taken this year's crop off it. His father and brother have another farm about a mile distant.

ITALIAN ALIENS.

Frank Jobbitt of the G. T. R., appeared for three Italian labourers who are aliens, Jas. G. Nasso, Polito Nasso and Johnny Bin Giovanni. The Military Service Act does not apply to them.

John Redmond Kelly, a young farmer in Otonabee, lives alone on his hundred acres. His father has a farm twenty miles away. Exemption granted.

Exemption for Arthur D. Wood, 315 Margaret Avenue, was applied for by Mr. Robert Fair, his employer, on business grounds and was allowed until Feb. 1st, 1918.

British Only Twelve Miles From Jerusalem

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 20.—British troops are now within twelve miles of Jerusalem. Official despatches from the Egyptian expeditionary force to-day reported the occupation by mounted troops on Sunday of Beiturettahta, twelve miles northwest of Jerusalem.

Decrease In The Casualties

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 20. — There seems to be a very appreciable decrease in the volume of the Canadian casualty lists, following the heavy lists of the last few days, mostly the results of the operations at Passechendaele, it is thought here. To-day's noon casualty list contained 189 names, including 13 killed in action and eight died of wounds.

Border To Tour Ontario

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—Arrangements have been made for five meetings to be addressed by Sir Robert Borden this week in Western Ontario. On Wednesday there will be a great meeting in Massey Hall, Toronto, at which Hon. N. W. Rowell will also speak. Thursday evening the premier will speak in London, Friday afternoon in St Marys, Friday evening in Stratford and Saturday evening in Kitchener. Hon. N. W. Rowell will speak at the Stratford meeting. Next week will also be devoted to Ontario, but the arrangements for the meetings are not completed.

American Destroyer Goes Down

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The sinking of the American destroyer Chauncey, in collision in the war zone early yesterday morning, with the probable loss of twenty-one lives, was announced by the navy department to-day.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 20.—A telegram from Maestricht, Holland, to Amsterdam, as forwarded by Central News reports great movement of troops with artillery on all roads leading to the Flanders front. These troops evidently are from the Russian front, the despatch says.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, November 20.—Two army corps, loyal to the committee for the salvation of the revolution, stationed at Luga, report that Premier Kerensny is with them. There is no confirmation.

After the defeat of the forces at Gatchina Premier Kerensky was faced with the proposed desertion of the bulk of the army. The Premier was coerced into promising to surrender to the Bolsheviki government, but while the guard was being formed, he disappeared disguised as a sailor. The committee for the salvation of the revolution is opposed to the Bolsheviki regime in Petrograd, and has protested against the order of arrest of Premier Kerensky. Luga is on the Petrograd-Pskoff railway about 90 miles south of Petrograd and 60 miles south of Gatchina.

RIOTING IN BERLIN

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Serious rioting took place in Berlin last week. A message to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the fighting between a mob and the police was very fierce and that there was a heavy casualty list. The police used their firearms.

The Wireless Press says the military and police were called upon to oppose the progress of independent socialist demonstrators. In the riotous scenes which followed the police were forced to fire with their rifles and revolvers and the organizers of the meeting responded with firearms and knives. The German press, despatches say, have been forbidden to publish the details of the affray. No newspapers have arrived in Amsterdam from Berlin.

KITCHENER LEAGUE.
The Canadian Kitchener League held an interesting meeting last night at the Y.M.C.A. Mr. G. A. Gillespie gave a very instructive address on the present unrest, politically and industrially, in all the nations of the world, and the need to-day of keeping up the enthusiasm and the work for the cause of the war. Little Miss Helen Curran rendered a very pleasing piano solo.

The lucky number for the cushion top, a donation to the Canadian Kitchener League, was Number 44, and won by Mr. Toone, of the C.G.E. Company.

CANADIANS THE BEST.

Greenwich Boy Home After Gallant Service as Ambulance Driver.

GREENWICH, Conn., Nov. 19.—Victor B. Geibel, a Cornell student son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Geibel, has returned from France, where he drove an ambulance, with a War Cross, which he won by his gallantry in aiding the wounded inhabitants of a village which yas under fire of a German aircraft.

Geibel saw service as an ambulance driver principally at Verdun.

"These stories about Britain not doing her share," he says, "are all wrong. Britain is doing more than her share, and she is rushing troops to France all the time.

"The Britisher is a very good fighter, but the Canadians are simply wonderful. The Frenchmen boast of the fighting qualities of their Chasseurs Alpines, but they admit that the Canadians are even better fighters.

"When you converse with a Frenchman you can sum up all his questions in four 'When are Americans coming?' 'How many are here?' 'How many are coming?' 'When will the war be over?'"

The young man—he is just 20—plans to take a couple of weeks' rest and then hopes to enter the artillery arm of the service.

When the dealer informed her that the price of eggs was forty cents per dozen, she exclaimed:

"Forty cents! Why, that's more than three cents for each egg!

Yes, mum, said the dealer; but you must remember that one egg is a whole day's work for a hen!—Everybody's Magazine.

Explosion At Gas Works

The district of the city in the neighbourhood of the Gas Works received a severe shock this morning when an explosion, which blew the walls about the three driers at the works to pieces, occurred at 7.20.

The Cause of Fire.

The explosion was apparently caused by a plugged retort, and the gas having no way to escape, exploded. Immediately following the explosion the roof of the drier building, which is at the north side of the works, caught fire and was gaining rapid and dangerous headway when the Fire Department was called. Chief Grange laid two lines of hose and used a three-gallon chemical, and by 8.15 had the fire extinguished.

His Ankle Sprained.

Charles Turner, an employee of the Lytle Co., who are installing new machinery at the Gas Works, was climbing a ladder when the explosion occurred, and was thrown several feet to the ground. His ankle was sprained and foot painfully injured.

FIRE ENGINE IS TESTED

Under the direction of Chief Grange the fire engine was tested this morning at 10 o'clock at the creek at the corner of Brock and Aylmer Streets. The test was made to familiarize Engineer Percy Pennett, who reported for duty yesterday at the Fire Hall, with the working the that particular engine.

OBITUARY

MRS. SAMUEL SEABROOK.

Elizabeth Sanders, daughter of Mrs. B. F. Sanders, of Belmont township, and wife of Mr. Samuel Seabrook, passed away on Monday at her home in Hearst, Northern Ontario. Mrs. Seabrook was born in Madoc, but had lived the greater part of her life in and around Peterborough, going to Hearst about two years ago. She was sixty years of age. Her mother and husband survive her, as well as three daughters: Mrs. Hugh Fletcher, Peterborough; Miss Jennie Seabrook, Toronto, and Mrs. Arnold French, of Hearst, and by four sons: Benjamin Seabrook, of Peterborough, and Harry, Wesley, and Herman Seabrook, of Hearst.

Three sisters, Mrs. B. Seabrook, of Fraserville; Mrs. Maybee, of Consecon, and Mrs. A. Weymark, of Havelock; and three brothers, George and Will Sanders, of Havelock, and Albert, of Hillier, are also left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 2 o'clock from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Fletcher, 494 Aylmer Street.

Tells of Peril In Crow's Nest When Torpedo Hit Ship

Harold Selick, Lookout of the Finland, Describes "Storm After Explosion"—Whipped About as if in Top of Tree—Says Loss of Nine Lives Was Due to Panic Stricken Men Jumping Into Sea.

AN ATLANTIC PORT.—With the mast whipping back and forth like a high tree swayed by a tempest, Harold Selick, of Glen Ridge, N.J., who was acting as lookout in the crow's nest when the steamship Finland, American transport, was torpedoed recently, had a hard time holding on to prevent himself from being thrown far out into the ocean. He arrived here aboard a British steamship.

Young Selick and J. S. Weeks, of Boston, had received an honourable discharge from the French Army, in which they had served for nearly a year, conveying heavy ammunition from bases to the guns at the Front.

"As Weeks and I were passengers aboard the Finland at a reduced rate," said Mr. Selick, "we did not hesitate to answer the captain's call for volunteers to assist the crew. I was assigned to a posiion in the upper crow's nest on the foremast, and began my duties on the morning of 28th October.

"At about half-past nine o'clock I saw something coming helter-skelter at a terrific rate towards our vessel. It did not take me long to realise that it was a torpedo, although there was no sign of a U-boat anywhere.

Remembered "Hold Tight" Warning

"I had been told that in case we were torpedoed to hang on as tight as possible, as the masts invariably rocked when vessels were struck. There also came into my memory what I had read only a few days before about one of the masts of the transport Antilles being blown out of the vessel by the shock of the torpedo which hit her.

"I shouted down a warning and then clutched the strongest looking stanchion near me. The torpedo came bounding along, leaping, porpoise-like, from crest to crest. It struck just aft of the mast I was on, on the starboard side. There was a muffled detonation from inside the vessel, and for the next few minutes I lost track of what was happening on board, as I was kept busy holding on to my perch. The mast whipped like a willow wand, and if I had loosened my hold for an instant I undoubtedly would have been snapped out of the crow's nest like a missile from a catapult.

"When I finally got back to the deck I found that there was a great deal of excitement. The nine lives which were lost were the toll of this excitement and not of the explosion of the torpedo. They were men who could not get into the boats which were lowered and who jumped overboard and were unable, on account of the rough sea, to approach close enough to the boats to be taken aboard.

Exploded in the Bunkers.

"The torpedo had torn a hole through the starboard side of the Finland and exploded in the bunkers, tearing another hole in the port side. It was into the latter opening that the water came pouring.

"The captain and his American officers and the United States gunners acted in a manner that cannot be praised highly enough. They stuck to their posts and refused to leave the vessel when everybody thought that she had only a few minutes to keep afloat. The crew of the engine room also deserves great credit. Not a man of them quit his post, although they must have felt that they were doomed.

"When it was discovered that the Finland's damage would not send her to the bottom and that she could make port under her own steam, we who had put off in the small boats, as well as those who had been picked up by the Alcedo, the converted yacht which had aided in convoying us, returned to the torpedoed vessel We had been in the small boats about two hours at this time. Besides the Alcedo, there were two destroyers convoying us and two other steamships. None saw a U-boat.

"We made port in France at eleven o'clock that night. It may be interesting to know that aboard the Finland when she was torpedoed were Captain Boyd, of the torpedoed steamship Antilles, and his crew."

SELL ALL POTATOES BY THE 100 POUNDS

The selling of potatoes on the 100-pound basis has been adopted by many of the large potato markets of the United States, in keeping with the request made by the Department of Agriculture and the Food Administration of that country. Wherever the 100-pound scale has been adopted reports to the Bureau of Markets show that it is much more satisfactory than the old-fashioned, varying bushel.

As evidence of the need of a standard of quantity in dealing in potatoes is the difficulty found in comparing prices as quoted from the different provinces of the Dominion. The following occurs in the Fruit Commissioner's telegraphic report of October 30, for instance: Calgary—British Columbia potatoes, $50 per ton; Alberta, $35. Saskatoon—Alberta, $1 per bushel. Simcoe, Ont.—$1.60 to $1.75 per bag (90 pounds) f.o.b. Toronto—Ontario stock, $1.80 to $1.90 per bag. How can a reader of such a report compare the price of potatoes so quoted without using a pencil and considerable time?

The best substitute for sugar is honey.

Sudden Death of Mr. Jas. Baptie

Well Known Resident of Springville Passed Away on Tuesday Afternoon

Mr. James Baptie, of Springville, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of this district, died very suddenly at his home at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Although Mr. Baptie has been ill for the past three years, he was able to be around as usual, even up to yesterday afternoon, when he was suddenly stricken and died within an hour from angina pectoris.

The news of his death reached the city last night and caused widespread sorrow. The Peterborough Poultry Association, of which Mr. Baptie was practically the founder, was in session when the word came of his passing away, and the meeting immediately adjourned.

The late James Baptie was a lifelong resident of this district. He was born in Ida in 1848, and was the son of the late Alexander Baptie, who passed away on Nov. 25th, 1850. He married Eliza Jane Goodfellow, who is left to mourn his loss, and to whom three children were born, Mrs. S. T. Milburn of Smith, Miss Mercy at home, and Mr. Alexander Baptie, deputy-reeve of Cavan. One sister, Mrs. W. H. Lough, of Ida, and one brother, Dr. Baptie, of Ottawa, are also surviving relatives.

The deceased was widely known throughout the province as a poultry fancier and breeder. He had acted as a judge at exhibitions and poultry shows on many occasions, and his services were always in demand. As has been said, he was the founder of the Peterborough Poultry Association, and at the time of his death was honourary president of that body. Mr. Baptie was a vice-president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and was always keenly interested in its affairs. He was the oldest beekeeper in the district, and his apiary was widely known.

In religion Mr. Baptie was a Presbyterian, and in politics a staunch Liberal. He was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

The deceased had a host of friends everywhere in the district, who will regret to learn of his death. His sterling qualities and genial disposition had endeared him to all with whom he came into contact, and his passing leaves a vacancy in many circles that will be hard to fill.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock to St. John's cemetery, Ida.

Baltimore American.—In the entire history of the war there has been no other single event of wider compass than the agreement that has been signed between the United States and Japan. Such an instrument, framed during the progress of strife, is not of itself so singular. But that it should have been effected as a direct and emphatic blow to the finely webbed schemes of the Germans to disseminate distrust between the United States and its commercial associates in the Far East is something of the utmost significance.

Millbrook Turns Out To Welcome Returned Soldiers

Lieut. A. Winslow, Sergt.-Major T. Miller and Sergt. Norman Hanna, D.C.M., Were Given an Enthusiastic Welcome—Sergt. William Bateson Killed in Action—Millbrook News.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 20.—Saturday was a red-letter day in Millbrook, when Cavan and Millbrook citizens turned out in large numbers to welcome home three returned soldiers. About five hundred people went to the station, accompanied by the Citizens' Band, under the leadership of Mr. G. A. Duncan, and as the men stepped from the train Reeve Henderson called for three cheers and a tiger for the boys, and the band struck up a welcoming tune. An automobile procession was formed and the party proceeded to the town hall, which was packed to the doors with an enthusiastic crowd of citizens. Reeve A. J. Henderson was chairman, and in a brief address he stated that he was very pleased to be present to help in welcoming the men home. The big crowd present, on such short notice, was surely evidence of the respect in which these returned soldiers are held. We all honour them and wish them God speed. The chairmen then called for three cheers which were heartily given, and the band struck up "Rule Britannia."

The following address was read to Sergt.-Major Miller:

To Battalion Sergt.-Major L. Miller, 93rd Battalion, C.E.F.

Dear Sir.—It is with great pleasure to your many warm friends in Millbrook to welcome your return from the great conflict after having faithfully and actively engaged in the arduous duties that belonged to your office in the Old Lands. Your long military training in previous conflicts made your services all the more valuable and we are proud to have had a citizen who could take the part you so honourably discharged. We also beg to thank you, on behalf of the friends here, of your fatherly advice and kindly offices to our own boys, who were often in need of a word of cheer in their far-away camps, which friendship shall not soon be forgotten. That you may long be spared to your family and country is the wish of all.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Millbrook:—R. J. Doak (Reeve), G. E. Burnham, J. H. Bingham, J. N. Eastcott, G. W. Sayles (Councillors).

Millbrook, Ont., Nov. 17, 1917.

Addresses were also read to Sergt. Norman Hanna, D.C.M., and Lieut. Arthur Winslow.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Mrs. T. H. Bradley has received the very sad information from Mr. Sim. Bateson, that their nephew, Sergt. Wm. Bateson, was killed in action on Nov. 6. Sergt. Bateson is a Millbrook boy and a grandson of the late Wm. Bateson. He was a printer by trade and was foreman of a large job printing shop in Toornto for several years. When the call for volunteers was made he answered it and took his place with the thousands of other gallant Canadians who went to fight for King and Empire. Sergt. Bateson was a splendid type of man and an excellent soldier.

PTE. OLIVER WOUNDED.

Mr. Ben. Oliver has received a message stating that his brother, Pte. Norman Oliver, has been admitted to No. 9 Hospital, at Rouen, suffering from gunshot wounds in the right arm.

Pte. Oliver is a cousin of W. H. Coombe, Millbrook. Norman went overseas with the Queen's Own Band, two years ago, but rather than return without going to France, joined as a private.

CORP. CAMPBELL KILLED.

Corp. John Campbell of Lorneville was killed in action on October 31. He went overseas with an Ontario Battalion in July, 1915. He was 20 years of age and the only son of Mrs. D. J. Campbell of Lorneville. He is a native of Canada and was formerly employed by the G.T.R. Three sisters reside at 61 Carlton street Corp. Campbell is a brother-in-law of Mr. St. John, former G.T.R. Agent at Millbrook. He was a member of Millbrook Bowling Club, and a right good fellow.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Robert Jackson of Peterborough spent Sunday in town.

Sergeant and Mrs. Norman Hanna of Toronto, are visiting his parents after Sergt. Hanna's return from the front, where he won a D.C.M.

Mr. Robert Cardwell of Toronto, motored to town on Sunday.

Mrs. W. Sanderson and family have returned home after spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bingham.

Miss May Earle was a guest of Miss Mary Higgs over the week-end.

Miss M. Mitchell, Mrs. Jas. Howden and Mr. Ford Gould were guests of Mr. Gould's parents at Uxbridge, on Saturday.

Mr. R. H. Wilson of Toronto motored to town on Sunday and was a guest of his cousin, Mrs. C. W. Richards. He will also visit friends in Peterborough, Omemee and Lindsay.

AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE.—A German shell fell through the roof of a building occupied by the American Regimental Headquarters. The shell exploded, but no one was hurt.

RUSSIAN SITUATION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Despatches from Tornea on the Swedish frontier say passengers arriving there from Russia declare that the Russian situation is in the hands of General Kaledine's Cossack Commanders. All is quiet in Petrograd.

Senator Penrose, discussing the Cape May thoroughfares, once told of a conversation he had had with a Cape May skipper. Amazed at the way they were skimming through creeks but an inch or two deep, he said:

"I suppose, Captain, that you think nothing of sailing across the meadows when there has been a heavy fall of dew."

"Right you are," said the Captain, "though occasionally we have to send the man ahead with a watering can."

TO SUFFER FROM HEADACHES

Makes Life Miserable

Headaches seems to be habitual with many people. Some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually with the dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on

The varieties of headache most common are sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, debility or indigestion and periodical and spasmodic headache, and undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that has been on the market for over 40 years, removes the cause of the headaches, and not only does this but also restores the entire system to healthy action and buoyant vigour.

Miss Emily Smith, 204 Bellwoods Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. For two years I was greatly troubled with violent headaches, particularly in the morning. I tried everything to cure me until a friend recommended B.B.B. I tried it, and now I am completely cured."

BIG PRICES PAID FOR SUGAR

One Abandoned Lot Sold By Government for Nearly 20 Cents a Pound.

NEW YORK—Several lots of raw sugar offered at auction among unclaimed merchandise recently at the Appraiser's Annex, 642 Washington street, were sold for four or five times the value fixed by the Government at the time of appraisement.

One lot of 10,191 pounds went at $1,150, and 1,280 pounds brought $142.50. A third lot of 84 pounds of refined sugar was sold for $15.50. All of the sugar, which had been abandoned by the importers, had been in the custody of the Government for from six months to a year.

Owing to conditions in Italy there was a scramble for 118 quarts of olive oil, appraised at $72. The bids started at $25 for the lot and finally went to $115. Italian buyers made a drive for 140 pounds of Roman cheese, which, appraised at $84, brought $160. Cotton and jute bags and miscellaneous dry goods and other articles sold

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"That was wise, of course," Duvall said. But how could the letter possibly have been placed where you found it, without your knowledge? Who, besides your self was in the apartment at the time?"

"No one, but an old negro cook who has been with me for years. I am quite certain that she had nothing to do with it."

"And the maid of whom you speak?"

"She had left my daughter's room, and come into the dining room where I was sitting, before Ruth left the bedroom. They went out together. The note could not have been in the bedroom then or my daughter would certainly have seen it. The thing seems almost uncanny."

Duvall began to stroke his chin, a habit with him when he was more than usually perplexed. Presently he spoke.

"One thing I have learned, Mrs. Morton, after many years spent in detective work. There is no circumstance, however, mystifying it may at first appear, which is not susceptible of some reasonable and often very commonplace explanation. You find this letter on the floor in your daughter's bedroom. It was placed there, either by someone within the apartment or by someone from without. Now, you tell me that it could not have been placed from within. Then I can only say that someone must have entered the room, or at least managed to place the letter in the room, from the outside."

"That may be true, Mr. Duvall," remarked Mrs. Morton, quietly, "but when you consider that our apartment is on the fourth floor, that one of the windows of the room was closed, and the other only open a few inches, and that the blank wall of the opposite house is at least ten feet away, I fail to see how what you suggest is possible."

Her words filled Duvall with surprise. If what his caller said was true the case might have elements which would make it more than usually interesting.

"Has your daugther any enemy, who might envy her her success, and wish to deprive her of it?" he asked.

"None, that I know of. But since these two letters came, I feel convinced that someone, whom, I cannot imagine, does feel that way towards her, and that on account of it she is in the gravest danger. Don't you think so, Mr. Duvall?"

"I think it highly probable. And what, Mrs. Morton, would you like to have me do in the matter"

"Why — come to New York, take up the case, and find out who those wretches are, so that they may be prevented from doing my daughter any harm. There is no time to lose. They may carry out their threats at any moment. You will observe that in the first letter they said that her beauty would be destroyed 'within thirty days.' One of these days has already passed. To-day is the second. At most we have twenty-eight days left in which to find out who is responsible for this outrage. Investigation may consume a great deal of time. I hope that you will consent to come to New York and take charge of the matter at once. I am returning this afternoon as soon as I can get a train. Can you not return with me? As for the matter of expense, I place no limit upon it. There is nothing I would not sacrifice to save my daughter from the fate they have threatened. Think what it would mean, Mr. Duvall. A young, beautiful, innocent girl, scarcely more than a child, to go through life with her beauty taken from her, made hideous by some fiendish device, blinded and scarred by acid, her features crushed —gashed by some sudden blow. Can you imagine anything more terrible?"

Duvall tho ght for a moment of his own lovely child, now almost three years old, and shuddered. Bank burglaries, thefts of jewels, seemed relatively of small importance compared with such a situation as this. His feelings of chivalry rose. He felt a strong desire to help this young girl.

"Here is her picture," Mrs. Morton continued, taking a photograph from her handbag and extending it to Duvall.

The latter gazed at the charming features of the young actress, and nodded.

"She is lovely—exquisite," he murmured. "I don't wonder that you feel as you do. I did not intend to take up any detective work at this time, but I have decided to assist you in this matter in any way that I can."

"Oh—thank you, Mr. Duvall." There were tears in Mrs. Morton's anxious eyes. "I can never repay you for your kindness—never. But if you can save Ruth from these scoundrels I will gladly spend——"

"Never mind about that, Mrs. Morton," Duvall observed with a friendly smile. "It is scarcely a question of money with me. If I had not felt a keen interest in your daughter's welfare I should not have agreed to take up the matter at all. As it is you need not worry about the expense. I am going to take the case largely because it has interested me, and it will be a pleasure to work it out, not only on your daughter's account, but on your own. You know, to me, such matters are of absorbing interest, like the solving of some complex and baffling puzzle."

"Then you will go back to New York with me this evening?"

"I can hardly do that, Mrs. Morton. But I can agree to call on you there to morrow. It will take me some hours to arrange matters so that I can leave. I do not like to ask you to worry for a few days at least. If these people had meant to act at once they would not have named the period of thirty days in their threats."

"Very well. Mrs. Morton rose and held out her hand. "I will expect you to-morrow. Will it be in the morning?"

"Very likely. In any event I will first telephone to you." He entered the address in his note book. "By the way, perhaps you had better let me keep that photograph."

"Certainly." Mrs. Morton handed it to him and he thrust it into his pocket. "The letters you already have?"

"Yes."

"Is there anything else?"

"Yes. One thing. Do not tell your daughter that you have employed me in this case. It—it might alarm her."

"Certainly not. And that leads me to say that you on your part will of course observe the utmost secrecy — even with Mrs. Duvall."

"That goes without saying, madam. My professional secrets I share with no one. Even between my wife and myself there is an unwritten law which is never broken. Unless we are working on a case together—unless she can be of service to me, she asks no questions. She would not speak to me, or even recognize me, were we to meet, while I am engaged in work of this sort. You need have no fear on that score."

"I am very glad to know that. Were these people to suspect that I have placed the matter in the hands of a detective, they would be instantly on their guard, and all means of tracing them might be lost."

"That is undoubtedly true, and for that reason I may appear in other characters than my own, from time to time, disguised perhaps in such a way that even you would not recognize me. Under those circumstances I will suggest a password—one that will not be known to any one else. Should occasion arise in which I desire to acquaint you with my identity, without making it known to others, I will merely repeat the words — twenty-eight days, or twenty-seven days, or six or five, as the case may be, on that particular day, and you will know that it is I, and act accordingly. Is that perfectly clear?"

"Perfectly, Mr. Duvall."

"Very well. Then we will leave further details until to-morrow." He shook hands with his caller, escorted her to her automobile, then returned to the library and began a careful study of the two notes which Mrs. Morton had left with him. Here Grace found him half an hour later.

"Well," she said, coming up to him with a smile. "Shall I begin to pack our things?"

Duvall put his arm about her.

"Yes, dear," he said. "We'll leave on the sleeper to-night. You can get Mrs. Preston to come and take charge of the house while we are gone. It may be two weeks. That is, if you want to go along."

"Want to go along? Why, Richard, I'm just dying for a trip to New York. I haven't been there since before Christmas, as you know, and I've got to get a spring outfit. Of course, I'm going." She went gayly towards the hall stairs.

"Then you must be ready right after lunch," he called to her.

"But why so soon, if we are taking the sleeper?"

"Because we are going up to town this afternoon and see a few moving pictures."

"Moving pictures?" Grace paused at the door, an expression of the utmost astonishment upon her face. "Why, Dick, you never go to moving pictures. You've always said they did not interest you."

"We're going just the same."

"What's come over you?" Grace asked.

"Nothing. I'm curious to see some of them, that's all. Never too old to learn, you know. If I'm not mistaken, I saw a new feature film advertised in the newspaper this morning." He took a paper from the desk, and glanced through it. "Here it is. Ruth Morton in the Miser's Daughter Have you seen it?"

"No. But I've seen Miss Morton often—in pictures, I mean. She's a lovely creature, and a splendid actress, too."

"Then this film ought to be a good one, don't you think?"

Grace burst into a rippling laugh.

"You're getting positively human, Richard," she exclaimed. "Here I've been telling you for months past what a lot you've been missing, and you only made fun of me, and now you actually suggest going yourself. Was the lady who called interested in the motion picture business?"

Duvall laughed but made no reply.

"What's the mystery?" Grace went on, with an amused smile. "You haven't told me, you know. Has she lost her jewels, or only her husband?"

Duvall raised his hand.

"No questions my dear. This is a professional matter. But I don't mind telling you this much if I ever become a motion picture 'fan,' you'll have her to thank for it."

"Really. Then I'm glad she came. I hate going alone. And it seems I shall also have to thank her for a trip to New York. She has my eternal gratitude. Now I'm going to pack."

Duvall resumed his seat and once more took up his examination of the letters Mrs. Morton had left with him, but they told him little. There were the usual individual peculiarities in the typewritten characters, but that was about all that he could discover. The letter paper, while of excellent quality, was such as might be bought at any first class stationery store. The death's head seal, of course was highly individual, but to trace anybody by means of it presented almost insuperable difficulties. To find the seal one must of necessity first find the owner, and then the chase would be over. He replaced the letters in his pocket book, and went to his room to make ready for their journey.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Easy to Make This Pine Cough Remedy

Thousands of families swear by its prompt results. Inexpensive, and saves about $5.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain granulated sugar syrup. Nothing better, but why buy it? You can easily make it yourself in five minutes.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous the world over for its prompt results.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Southend-on-Sea London's Resort

THERE are, of course, people with a capacity for strange enthusiasms, people who find hidden beauties and attractions in a London motor bus, for instance, and such people might find something that appealed to them in the railway journey from London to Southend-on-Sea; but most people are not so gifted. Miles and miles of backs of houses, with occasional glimpses down the long gray streets, or the short gray streets, or the courts and alleys of East London, are what one sees; and then, when London is hardly left behind, comes the journey across the low-lying lands past Purfleet, on towards Tilbury, and beyond.

To the Londoner, however, or to those Londoners, and there are hundreds of thousands of them every year, who, when on holiday bent, incline naturally towards Southend, the journey in between the backs of houses is neither here nor there. Whether they make their way through those devious streets of the city to Fenchurch street, or board the through train to Southend, on any one of the many "District" stations, they are on holiday intent, and the holiday does not begin when they arrive at Southend, or end when they leave it. It begins when the day begins, and does not end until the last child has been conveyed home by the last parent, up the last darkened street, and the door has been shut for the night.

Southend, of course, with the places round about it, has quite a large resident population. Many of the people are season-ticket holders, on the District or other lines, and go into London, past the backs of the houses, every morning, except Sundays, and return every evening, except Sundays. They read most of the time, these people. Reading is one of the necessities of the journey.

The holiday makers, however, and Southend-on-Sea as a holiday resort, are what most people will be chiefly interested in. It was really Queen Caroline who "made the place." In 1804 she paid a visit there, and Londoners began to recognize the fact that Southend was really their nearest seaside resort, and began to resort there accordingly. A hundred years ago, however, Southend could have had no idea, not even in its most prophetic moods, of the glory which awaited it, of its pier, more than a mile long; or its huge hotel, a landmark up and down the river; or of the countless attractions which go to make up, in its fulness, the great holiday resort, which, more than once since the outbreak of the war, has been bombarded by the Germans from the air, as a "fortified place."

"Bathing is good," the guidebook might put it, "but the tide recedes with great rapidity for nearly a mile," and it is this vast wilderness of wet shore which often stands out in the memory of the casual visitor to Southend; the visitor, that is, may not have much heart for its other attractions. Some people have no grateful remembrance of these stretches, and yet they have a beauty all their own. The little pools of water amidst the wet sand, stretching on for many miles towards Benfleet, have a way of catching the sunlight, in summer and winter, towards evening, and throwing it back again in red or gold. The coast of Kent, five miles away to the south, is just a hazy outline, across the river, and the intermittent stream of shipping makes its way far out in the great estuary, westward toward Tilbury and the Port of London, or eastward, out to sea and to the ends of the earth. That, of course, is one of the ways of reaching Southend, or it was in the days before the war—by sea. It was a holiday way. The man in a hurry, the business man, the season-ticket holder, the man who is always reading, never goes that way. But crowds of other people do, and many boats, in the course of a day, will come in from London and tie up from it, past the Chapman Light, making east for the Tower Bridge. Southend-on-Sea is surely a holiday resort, all German official statements notwithstanding.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KOZMO, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

A clergyman of Exeter, England, once told the story of how five choristers were out walking one Sunday evening. After a time they sat down on the grass and began to sing an anthem. A hare passing with great swiftness towards the place where they were sitting stopped at about 20 yards distance from where they were sitting. The hare appeared to be highly delighted with the music, and as soon as the singing had ceased returned to the woods. When she had almost reached the woods the choristers began to sing again. The hare stopped, turned around, and came swiftly back to the same place and remained listening in seeming rapture and delight until the singing had ceased. Then she made off to the woods again.

"One night we gave a performance of Lohengrin in Cleveland with stock scenery," recounted David Bispham. "The local manager had assured us that he had a river drop in the theatre and so our first act drop for Lohengrin showing the River Scheldt near Antwerp was left in New York. Imagine my surprise when I turned around after finishing my first song to discover the River Thames filled with boats as during the regatta week at Henley."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Incident Of Heredity

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

"Doctor," said Norman Goodfellow to Dr. Theodore Colt, "I am thinking of proposing marriage to a lady in whose family there are traces of insanity. Do you consider me justified in marrying her under the circumstances?'

"Not if the insanity is hereditary. There is a great difference between insanity from a temporary cause and from an organic trouble that may be transmitted from parent to child. I do not consider that any one suffering from an ailment which is hereditary has a right to marry. Your question suggests a story involving a case which came within my professional experience.

"One day a young man named Severance came to consult me as to a case similar to yours. He had recently been married and all had gone happily till one day on returning to his home from business he found his wife lying on the bed indisposed. She seemed drowsy, and, suggesting that she try to get a nap, he took the evening paper to a window and sat down to read.

"Presently he heard her tossing about on the bed and, looking at her from his paper, saw that, though asleep or at least dozing, there was an undulatory motion about her that suggested the movement of a snake. He had awakened her and asked her if she had not been dreaming, but she said she had not been conscious during her nap and felt much better for it.

"Nevertheless the young husband seemed to me to have been much shocked at what he had seen. Were it not for this I would have concluded that what he had seen was the working of his wife's nerves uncontrolled during slumber. I gave him this cause in order to reassure him, but it did not. However, since I could give him no other comfort, he left me, much dejected.

Not long after his visit, taking up a newspaper, I saw a notice that he had left his house a few days before and had not been heard from since. The police had been notified, and an alarm had been sent out. Fears were entertained that he had met with foul play, since the day before his disappearance he had drawn a large sum of money from his bank.

His visit to me, the story he told and his depression led me to suspect that he was suffering from some nervous or mental trouble, and I inclined to the belief that what he had told me about his wife was a creation of a diseased brain. I did not see how I would be justified in making known my suspicions without mentioning the cause, and that I did not care to do.

Severance never turned up, and no probable cause was ever given for his disappearance. When several years had passed his wife gave him up for lead, believing that he had been murdered for the money he had with him. Four years after his disappearance she married again, and as fate would have it her second husband was a patient of mine. I did not know that he was to marry Mrs. Severance, and I was satisfied that I had not known it, because I should have been troubled as to what I should do in the matter, for I was undecided what to attribute her first husband's disappearance to.

Within a few months after my patient's—Hammond's—marriage he came into my office one day with a wild look in his eyes and told me a story similar to the one Severance had told me. He had had a disagreement with his wife, during which she had become very much excited. During the vituperations she had hurled at him her eyes had glittered like those of an angry serpent. Her appearance during the trouble had made such a horrible impression upon him that he was afraid he would lose his mind. He asked me to give him a sedative.

Here was a worse complication for me than Severance had brought me, for I was not sure whether Severance's experience had been an hallucination occasioned by a disordered brain or had been caused by some peculiar condition in his life. But I dared not tell Hammond this, for it would be sure to make a wreck of him. I had no recourse but to say to him that he must have been suffering from some nervous weakness. Instead of giving him a drug I advised him to go on a trip, but on no account to take his wife with him.

He took my advice as to the trip, but never returned from it. News of his having fallen over a precipice in Switzerland was sent to her over the ocean, but I have always suspected that he arranged for its transmission himself. One thing confirmed this suspicion; his body was never found.

Two years after having become a hypothetical double widow the lady in this case died. I confess I was relieved. There was now no further chance of any more of my clients marrying her. Soon after her death I made some investigations as to her case through the physician who attended her. I called on him and gave him the experience of her two husbands as given to me. He accepted a theory I gave him and promised if possible to learn facts that would confirm it.

He found an aunt of the subject of my story who told him that her sister soon after her marriage had been frightened by a serpent. Six months after this episode the child, who became Mrs. Severance-Hammond, was born. My theory was that the mother's fright at this critical period affected the nature of the child.

Double-faced Magyars.
